STRIKE OF BRITISH COAL MINERS SCHEDULED TODAY

Failing in Settlement of the Controversy the Miners Have Been Instructed to Cease Work Today—Cabinet Members Who Had Been Engaged in Trying to Arrange a Compromise, Abandoned Their Endeavors and Left the House of Commons Last Night—Mine Owners' Lockout Became Effective at Midnight.

LONDON, April 30—(AP)—After a day of tense discussion and anxiety the negotiations to avert a stoppage in the coal mines finally broke down at 11 o'clock tonight, when the cabinet ministers who had been engaged in trying to arrange a compromise left the house of commons.

As A J Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, announced today that failing a settlement the men would automatically cease work in all the coal fields unless they received contrary instructions from the federation, the strike apparently will begin tomorrow.

It is announced that the lockout notices by the mineowners will take effect tonight as arranged.

The collapse of the negotiations was due to the fact that the miners finally and absolutely refused to accept the owners revised offer of a reduced wage on the basis of a settlement made in 1921, namely, a 20 per cent increase over the standard of wages which prevailed in 1914. This was conditional on the adoption of an eight hour day, instead of the present seven hour day. The miners' attitude was that they would not accept such reduction before reorganization of the industry on the lines of the royal commission's recommendations.

When the breakdown occurred, J. Ramsay McDonald, former labor premier, and Arthur Henderson, the labor leader, left the commons for Memorial hall where the conference of executives of trade unions affiliated with the Trade Union congress was awaiting their report.

In conveying the owners' offer to the Trade Union congress, the government committee had guaranteed the carrying out the royal commission's reorganization proposals, and had declared that if the miners were prepared to accept the commission's report, including its wage recommendations, the government would set up an advisory committee on which the miners, as well as the owners, would be represented. This advisory committee would recommend to the secretary for mines steps to be taken to put into operation whatever proposals for reorganization would benefit the industry.

A subsidy granted to mine owners last July, which to date has cost the state in the neighborhood of twenty million pounds, expired at midnight tonight.

MINE OWNERS' LOCKOUT EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

LONDON, May 1—(AP)—Cessation of all work in the British coal mines, beginning today, seemed inevitable in the early hours of this (Saturday) morning.

Midnight, when the government's subsidy ended and the mine owners' lockout notices were to go into effect, passed without an agreement being reached between the parties to the disputes. Thus, unless contrary instructions are forthcoming from the Miners' federation, the men will remain away from their work today, and the country will be plunged into another coal strike such as paralyzed the industry in 1921.

The coal strike may involve a general withdrawal of trade union labor throughout the country with consequent serious interference with railroads, shipping and all industries. This position has not yet been reached but the contingency is being viewed with grave fear, for the trade union leaders are in strong sympathy with the stand the miners have taken.

The conference of trade union executives adjourned at 2:30 o'clock this morning without adopting any definite decision as to their future action, but the tone of the meeting was shown by the speech of J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, who declared that there never was, and he hoped there never would again be such a serious crisis as now faced the labor movement and the country. It would be foolish to attempt to prophesy the outcome. He said that the government had shown "complete incapacity to deal with the grave situation, and no government has ever blundered worse."

THREE BOYS AWAIT TRIAL FOR MURDER OF POLICEMAN

BOSTON, April 30—(AP)—Three boys, ranging in age from 17 to 18 years, were in the Charles street jail tonight, awaiting trial on charge of first degree murder. They have pleaded not guilty but the police claim that all have made admissions implicating them in the murder of Patrolman Frank J. Comeau on March 24, last. They are Albert Deshon, and John Robert Samburski, each 17, and Stanley Toothaker, 19, alleged members of a burglary and hold-up gang.

Deshon and Samburski were captured in an East Boston lodging house last night by officers who pinioned them before they could draw their revolvers. They entered pleas of not guilty to the murder charge today. Toothaker entered on April 18, had already entered similar plea. Deshon is alleged to be the member of the group who actually fired the fatal shot.

Deshon and Samburski each faced four other charges ranging from being accessories to the commission of a felony to breaking and entering. Samburski pleaded guilty to one charge of breaking and entering. To all the others the boys pleaded not guilty.

Patrolman Comeau was shot to death in front of the Fields Corner police station after he had questioned three young men whose automobile had been stolen there. They fled, leaving the car which had been stolen, and the pistol with which they had done the shooting. The patrolman's weapon was taken.

Every resource of the Boston police department was used in a hunt in which 40 suspects were taken into custody. Meanwhile, a Boston radio station collected a fund for the widow and two small children of the policeman.

PAYROLL BANDITS KILLED PAYMASTER IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, April 30—(AP)—Unmasked men today killed a paymaster and made away with his satchel, which they apparently thought contained a $7,000 payroll, only to find the bag contained worthless receipts. The would-be robbers escaped.

Samuel Holt, 33, paymaster for Arnold and company, was the victim. He met death at a little frequented spot where the robbers in two touring cars forced the paymaster's automobile to the curb. Holt was making the round of the company's plants and had just visited the Fourth Street National bank, where he had made deposits and received receipts, which he carried in the satchel. The bank officials said Holt had carried no currency.

Holt was shot, witnesses declared, by men in both cars, when he reached for his pistol as the robbers halted his automobile. Saturday is the company's regular pay day officials said. It is believed the robbers thought Holt had withdrawn the $7,000 payroll today.

Twenty detectives were detailed to the chase and tonight were watching all roads out of Philadelphia for traces of the cars.

RESCUED SEAMEN HAVE ARRIVED AT PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 30—(AP)—Six Newfoundland seamen, the crew of the schooner Little Stephano, foundered during a storm off the Azores on April 13, arrived here on the Asia or the Fabre line today. They had been at sea 45 days, 14 of them without a rudder and eight without provisions, before taking to the ship's boat, they said, and had been picked up by the French steamer Carmia, which had carried them to Fayal in the Azores, whence they were brought here by the Asia.

Some men owe more to their wives than they ever get paid.

BANDIT WHITTEMORE TO BE SURRENDERED TO BALTIMORE

NEW YORK, April 30—(AP)—For the second time within a month New York today waived its prior claim to Richard Reese Whittemore, the candy kid of the underworld, so that he might go before a jury empowered to end his spectacular career with the seal of death.

On April 1st Whittemore was given by Buffalo where officials tried to have him sent to the electric chair for the murder of two bank messengers in a $93,000 holdup. The jury disagreed and it was decided not to attempt a second trial. He was sent back to New York for further disposition Wednesday night.

Tomorrow, exactly one month after he went to Buffalo, he will be taken under heavy guard to Baltimore where a hangman's noose awaits him if he is convicted of the murder of a prison guard during his escape from prison in February, 1925.

Baltimore officials who came here to plead for the next chance to try Whittemore assured District Attorney Banton that they had a strong case and that conviction was almost certain. Under these conditions, Mr. Banton agreed to let the prisoner go, even though it is a point in question whether he could be brought back here to answer the indictments for robbery against him if he should escape conviction in Maryland.

ALL NINE ENTRIES STILL REMAIN IN BALLOON RACE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 30.—(AP)—All of the nine entries in the Litchfield trophy and national baloon elimination race started here late yesterday, were believed to be still in the air tonight. The pilot balloon, Skylark, landed in eastern Tennessee about noon today.

At last reports, most of the balloons were over eastern Kentucky, traveling in an easterly and northeasterly direction that would carry them over the Allegheny or Blue Ridge mountains into West Virginia, Virginia and possibly Pennsylvania.

The last balloon reported early tonight was a United States army balloon, which passed over Winchester, Kentucky, this afternoon, traveling toward the northeast. It was thought probable here this balloon was the S-20, which this morning reported its presence over Rumsey, Kentucky, in the northwestern part of the state in a telegram addressed to The Associated Press and dropped by the pilot, Lieutenant W. E. Gray. The S-20 is from Langley field, Virginia. She was the most northerly of the balloons reported today and stood a good chance, it was stated, by officials of the race here, to catch a 40 mile southwest wind that would drive her almost due northeast across Pennsylvania and New York into New England, if she can remain aloft through the night.

The balloons were spread over Kentucky, the reports indicted.

SLEEPING POTION PROBABLY CAUSED DEATH OF INFANTS

NEW YORK, April 30—(AP)—The death of two infants in a Brooklyn Maternity hospital recently was probably caused by a sleeping potion, Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, toxicologist of Bellevue hospital, announced today after an autopsy, an investigation was started when it was reported the children had died after being given brandy as a sedative on advice of a rabbi.

Dr. Gettler said he did not believe death was caused by alcohol because only two teaspoonfuls of brandy were given and the children lived for 24 hours, by which time the alcohol would have been eliminated. He said he did not know how the sleeping potion came to be in the children's stomachs.

MAY DAY FINDS LABOR CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY

NEW HAVEN, April 30—(AP)—May day will find Connecticut's labor conditions in a satisfactory state and with but few strikes in progress, according to Patrick F. O'Meara, president of the Connecticut State Federation of Labor.

"Everything is quiet in the labor line," President O'Meara said, "and there is no trouble in sight." The strikes now in progress he characterized as minor ones and of long standing. The largest of these, he declared, is the one at the Willimantic branch of the American Thread company.

Demands for wage increases have been made by various branches of the building trades throughout the state but in the majority of cases, satisfactory agreements are being reached.

DECLINE IN THE BUILDING INDUSTRY IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 30.—(AP)—Indications that the supply of dwellings in this city is not caught up with the demand were seen in the April building record, made public today. The total for the month is less than 50 per cent of the figure for April 1925 or $801,145 compared with $1,656,920.

A surplus of tenements in the city was announced lately by real estate brokers, who claimed that there were more than 2,000 vacant dwellings in Springfield. Unusual building activity last year and the fact that new apartment houses had attracted many families from houses which they formerly occupied were cited as causes of the condition.

Florjanski, according to the police, confessed that he choked his wife after they had quarreled over money matters at their home.

Stays Enforcement Of Ancient Riot Act

Temporary Injunction Forbids Interference With Picketing in Passaic Strike.

PASSAIC, April 30.—(AP)—The ancient [illegible] under which Sheriff George [illegible]mmo for nearly three weeks prohibited meetings and picketing of the textile strikers in Garfield, was virtually set aside today when Vice Chancellor Bentley granted a temporary injunction forbidding interference with lawful activities of the strikers.

Word of the granting of the injunction in Jersey City reached Garfield when tension produced by attempt of the American Civil Liberties union to hold a strikers' meeting in Belmont park was at its height.

Sheriff Nimmo who prohibited the meeting, had scarcely waved a riot act proclamation at the crowds, with the threat to "sweep the streets", when the news arrived.

From early afternoon crowds milled through streets adjoining the meeting place. Giving way peaceably when the sheriff cleared the road in front of Belmont park and hall, they re-formed and threatened to break through police lines at arrival of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community church, New York, who was to speak at the test meeting.

It was then Sheriff Nimmo ran to the porch of the hall, waved the proclamation and ordered dispersal. Deputies armed with riot guns and police with clubs patrolled the streets. The strikers, some of the younger ones with ukuleles on which they had been strumming to their chant of "Solidarity Forever", surged forward, hesitated, and settled down to await service of the court order.

The injunction was served on Under-Sheriff Donaldson late in the afternoon. While he read the 12 page document several hundred strikers crowded around his car to cheer, sing and shout. Police stood near but made no effort to quiet them.

"All right, boys, let them in," he said.

The strikers trooped into the hall, cheering and singing while police put aside riot guns and clubs.

"What do we care?" said Donaldson in discussing the injunction. "We are glad to get rid of this job."

The order restrains all Bergen county and Garfield police from interfering with lawful meetings or other legal activities of the strikers. It was embodied in a rule to show cause on May 6, why a permanent injunction should be issued.

Application for the injunction was made by Norman Thomas, Forest Bailey and Harry Ward, on behalf of the Civil Liberties union; Felix Penarisi, Gustave Deak and Samuel Lachnuk, for the united front committee of textile workers, and Max King and Frank Hadnagy, owners of lots at Atwater and Midland avenues. It was for speaking at a test meeting on April 13 on these lots that the Rev. Norman Thomas, former socialist candidate for governor of New York, was arrested and held in $10,000 bail.

Bribery of New York Police and Dry Agents

Disclosed in Memoranda Book Found on Rum Ship Seized in the Hudson River.

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP)—Record of thousands of dollars of "protection money" paid to police and prohibition agents by the rum rummers of the steamer Eker, which was seized in the Hudson river last night with a $1,200,000 alcohol cargo in her water tanks, the largest cargo seized this year, was disclosed in memoranda book found on the ship, Assistant Federal Attorney Stichman said today.

When the 12 members of the crew and another man found in a rowboat near the Eker were arraigned before Federal Commissioner O'Neil, Mr. Sichman revealed the discovery of the book containing entries of money paid for protection by the bootleggers.

These entries, he said, led him to believe that $20,000 had been paid for immunity for the ship's cargo.

Some of the notations in the book, he said, were: "Paid cops $8,500," paid prohibition agent $1,000," "paid Red $5,000," and "paid cop $125."

Mr. Sichman said he believed the Eker was operated by a rum ring and that the alcohol was destined for rum row ships which make their own "Scotch" and "rye." One of the men arrested, he said, was previously under indictment in connection with the alleged Dwyer liquor smuggling conspiracy.

The 12 men found on the Eker were charged with conspiracy to violate the Volstead act and were held in $3,500 bail each for a hearing May 14. The thirteenth man was held in $1,000 bail. Federal officials are still searching for the ship's master and engineer, who escaped before the seizure. The crew said they did not know the officers names.

CONFLICT IN FERRETING OUT TRIPLE SLAYING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 30—(AP)—Investigation of the machine gun triple slaying of three men, including William H. McSwiggin, assistant state's attorney, went on quietly today, while a controversy raged between officials in charge of ferreting out the slayers and bringing them to justice.

Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, stole a march on civic leaders who were talking of a special grand jury investigation in charge of a special prosecutor. He went before William V. Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal court, and obtained authorization for a special grand jury to be convened Monday.

Immediately, Oscar Wolff, coroner, issued a subpoena for Judge Brothers to appear before the coroner's inquest tomorrow, when the business men's jury convenes for the first hearing of testimony.

Coroner Wolff, recently defeated in the state wide primary in which Crowe followers generally were successful, refused to explain the subpoena for Judge Brothers. Wolff severely criticized the state's attorney's office for failure to notify him of the triple slaying until many hours after it had occurred.

No announcement of any progress towards identifying the slayers or of finding the machine gun used was forthcoming from any source today.

Plans for tightening the lid on vice resorts in the suburban towns went ahead with the swearing in of 100 Chicago detectives as deputy sheriffs.

BATTLE OVER FRENCH DEBT HAS OPENED IN THE SENATE

Senators Reed Borah and Harrison Led the Opposition to the Settlement Arranged by the Debt Commission and Approved by President Coolidge—Senator Borah Asserted That France is the Most Prosperous Nation in Europe—Senator Smoot Will Fight For Action Before Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, April 30—(AP)—The French war debt settlement was transmitted to congress today by President Coolidge, and it immediately met with an outburst of opposition in the senate.

Demands that the finance committee make a thorough-going investigation of all the facts upon which the American debt commission acted, were made by Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri; Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, and Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi.

Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, who is a member of the debt commission, said he would have no objection to calling on the treasury for all documents and papers relating to the settlement.

"But will the senator cooperate in a real investigation?" demanded Senator Harrison.

"I am not going to cooperate to hold this settlement up until after adjournment," retorted Senator Smoot.

Senator Reed warned that unless the committee examined every document, every paper and the minutes of the debt commission, if any, touching on the settlement, there will be "difficulty" in getting senate action on the agreement.

Chairman Borah wanted the committee to go outside the field suggested by other senators and examine into the real capacity of France to pay since that principle had been made a basis of the settlement.

"France is the most prosperous nation in Europe," he said, "and has been prosperous for the last three years. If we cannot collect more than 50 cents on the dollar, it is because the French citizens are not willing to pay taxes commensurate with the obligation placed upon them by the original agreement."

Prodded by Senator Reed, Mr. Smoot went into some of the details of the negotiations, disclosing that after rejecting the first French proposal last Monday, the American commission had made a counter-proposal which the French government accepted yesterday.

"How long did the meeting of yesterday last?" asked Senator Reed.

"It was brief," replied Senator Smoot. "The French accepted our proposal and all that was necessary was to sign."

Senator Reed retorted that there had been more secret negotiations in the foreign debt settlements than there were surrounding all of the secret treaties "down the ages," which President Wilson denounced.

In transmitting the debt settlement, President Coolidge sent only a brief message to congress. After formally announcing the signing of the agreement under the provisions of acts of congress, he said:

"I believe that the settlement upon the terms set forth in the agreement is fair and just to both governments and recommend its approval."

While the agreement contains no security clause relating to German reparations, it carries provisions similar to those of the other debt settlements providing for temporarily postponing annual payments in cases of emergency. Under the terms of this clause up to 1932, France upon ninety days notice can suspend for three years that part of any annual payment exceeding $20,000,000 while after that year, it can suspend all of any annual report for a like period of time.

Suspended payments would bear interest at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent. annually, and they would have to be paid at the end of three years.

Senator Smoot declared that the written agreement represented the sum total of the bargain between the two countries and there were no understandings otherwise of any kind.

EXPLAINS TO FRENCH PRESS TERMS OF DEBT SETTLEMENT

PARIS, April 30.—(AP)—With a view to overcoming "fantastic and divergent" interpretations of the agreement reached at Washington for funding Frances debt to the United States, Finance Minister Peret issued a communique to the press tonight pointing out that the settlement is advantageous to France, and explaining the terms of the agreement.

He says the settlement is advantageous because the payments will not grow appreciably from the initial $30,000,000 until 1931 when it is reasonable to suppose the Dawes reparation plan will reach its maximum yield.

The finance minister called attention also to the fact that the settlement comprises a clause providing during the five years the French government may, on a 90-day notice, postpone payments in excess of the interest on the commercial debt of $20,000,000 for three years. The same provision remains applicable after the expiration of five years to the payments on the capital debt. Thus the minister figures that until 1930 the French government, if circumstances make it necessary, can limit its payments tothose now made, amounting to $20,000,000 yearly. He points out that while there is no safe-guard clause he considers the declaration of Mr. Smoot and Mr. Borah in the senate as indicating that American public opinion furnishes sufficient guarantees against demands for payment in excess of France's capacity to pay.

The impression in official circles, as voiced by M. Peret is that the settlement will have a beneficial effect on French credit, and that, considering the terms of the British and Belgian arrangements with the United States the agreement is favorable.

The franc did not react to the settlement, as was hoped, but went down steadily through the day, so that the closing of the bourse, it reached a new low level—30.49 to the dollar. Financial circles, however, did not display undue alarm, for they said it was due to the absence of the exact details of the settlement terms.

Altogether the accord is taken as a "necessary evil" which must be supported. There are some who think there is a possibility that the situation may change so as to make the continued transfer of money across the Atlantic such a blight to American business, that long before the expiration of the 62 years allowed for clearing up the debt, a new deal will be necessary.

"Now where are we going to get the money," is the burden of newspaper comment. One paper refers to the agreement with the United States and the expected arrangement with Great Britain as "62 years of financial bondage."

WHIPPING OF WIFE-BEATER WAS ENJOYED BY WOMEN

BALTIMORE, April 30.—(AP)—"Hey, sheriff, I'd let you lick me like that any time"—the voice of a witness as Sheriff John E. Potee, in the corridor of the Baltimore city jail, tucked the cat-o'-nine-tails under his arm after administering five lashes to the bare back of James H. Kingsmore, convicted wife beater.

"Aw," rejoined the only sheriff called upon to wield the lash in five years. He retreated to the warden's office, and took the whip with him.

Four women were among the official witnesses.

"We enjoyed the whipping," said their spokesman. "It was fine. There ought to be more of them."

Stretched on the whipping post, wrists and legs manacled, Kingsmore took his whipping without a murmur. He flinched only, very slightly. Released from the post, he went to his prison cot with red welts across his back, but his skin unbroken.

"You've licked an innocent man," he flung at the sheriff as he was led away. Later the jail physician reported Kingsmore to be in a state of collapse from nervousness, but to show no effects of the whipping.

STRIKE OF BRITISH COAL MINERS SCHEDULED TODAY

Failing in Settlement of the Controversy the Miners Have Been Instructed to Cease Work Today—Cabinet Members Who Had Been Engaged in Trying to Arrange a Compromise, Abandoned Their Endeavors and Left the House of Commons Last Night—Mine Owners' Lockout Became Effective at Midnight.

LONDON, April 30—(AP)—After a day of tense discussion and anxiety the negotiations to avert a stoppage in the coal mines finally broke down at 11 o'clock tonight, when the cabinet ministers who had been engaged in trying to arrange a compromise left the house of commons.

As A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners federation, announced today that failing a settlement the men would automatically cease work in all the coal fields unless they received contrary instructions from the federation, the strike apparently will begin tomorrow.

It is announced that the lockout notices by the mineowners will take effect tonight as arranged.

The collapse of the negotiations was due to the fact that the miners finally and absolutely refused to accept the owners revised offer of a reduced wage on the basis of a settlement made in 1921, namely, a 20 per cent increase over the standard of wages which prevailed in 1914. This was conditional on the adoption of an eight hour day, instead of the present seven hour day. The miners' attitude was that they would not accept such reduction before reorganization of the industry on the lines of the royal commission's recommendations.

When the breakdown occurred, J. Ramsay MeDonald, former labor premier, and Arthur Henderson, the labor leader, left the commons for Memorial hall, where the conference of executives of trade unions affiliated with the Trade Union congress was awaiting their report.

In conveying the owners' offer to the Trade Union congress, the government committee had guaranteed the carrying out the royal commission's reorganization proposals, and had declared that if the miners were prepared to accept the commission's report, including its wage recommendations, the government would set up an advisory committee on which the miners, as well as the owners, would be represented. This advisory committee would recommend to the secretary for mines steps to be taken to put into operation whatever proposals for reorganization would benefit the industry.

A subsidy granted to mine owners last July, which to date has cost the state in the neighborhood of twenty million pounds, expired at midnight tonight.

MINE OWNERS' LOCKOUT EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

LONDON, May 1—(AP)—Cessation of all work in the British coal mines, beginning today, seemed inevitable in the early hours of this (Saturday) morning.

Midnight, when the government's subsidy ended and the mine owners' lockout notices were to go into effect, passed without an agreement being reached between the parties to the disputes. Thus, unless contrary instructions are forthcoming from the Miners' federation, the men will remain away from their work today and the country will be plunged into another coal strike such as paralyzed the industry in 1921.

The coal strike may involve a general withdrawal of trade union labor throughout the country with consequent serious interference with railroads, shipping and all industries. This position has not yet been reached but the contingency is being viewed with grave fear, for the trade union leaders are in strong sympathy with the stand the miners have taken.

The conference of trade union executives adjourned at 2:30 o'clock this morning without adopting any definite decision as to their future action, but the tone of the meeting was shown by the speech of J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, who declared that there never was, and he hoped there never would again be such a serious crisis as now faced the labor movement and the country. It would be foolish to attempt to prophesy the outcome. He said that the government had shown "complete incapacity to deal with the grave situation and no government has ever blundered worse."

MAY DAY FINDS LABOR CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY

NEW HAVEN, April 30—(AP)—May day will find Connecticut's labor conditions in a satisfactory state and with but few strikes in progress, according to Patrick F. O'Meara, president of the Connecticut State Federation of Labor.

"Everything is quiet in the labor line," President O'Meara said, "and there is no trouble in sight." The strikes now in progress he characterized as minor ones and of long standing. The largest of these, he declared, is the one at the Willimantic branch of the American Thread company.

Demands for wage increases have been made by various branches of the building trades throughout the state but in the majority of cases, satisfactory agreements are being reached.

DECLINE IN THE BUILDING INDUSTRY IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 30.—(AP)—Indications that the supply of dwellings in this city had caught up with the demand were seen in the April building record, made public today. The total for the month is less than 50 per cent of the figure for April 1925 or $801,145 compared with $1,656,920.

A surplus of tenements in the city was announced lately by real estate brokers, who claimed that there were more than 2,000 vacant dwellings in Springfield. Unusual building activity last year and the fact that new apartment houses had attracted many families from houses which they formerly occupied were cited as causes of the condition.

Stays Enforcement Of Ancient Riot Act

Temporary Injunction Forbids Interference With Picketing in Passaic Strike.

PASSAIC, April 30.—(AP)—The ancient [illegible] under which Sheriff George [illegible]mmo for nearly three weeks prohibited meetings and picketing of striking strikers in Garfield, was virtually set aside today when Vice Chancellor Bentley granted a temporary injunction forbidding interference with lawful activities of the strikers.

Word of the granting of the injunction in Jersey City reached Garfield when tension produced by attempt of the American Civil Liberties union to hold a strikers' meeting in Belmont park was at its height.

Sheriff Nimmo who prohibited the meeting, had scarcely waved a riot act proclamation at the crowds, with the threat to "sweep the streets", when the news arrived.

From early afternoon crowds milled through streets adjoining the meeting place. Giving way peaceably when the sheriff cleared the road in front of Belmont park and hall, they re-formed and threatened to break through police lines at arrival of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community church, New York, who was to speak at the test meeting.

It was then Sheriff Nimmo ran to the porch of the hall, waved the proclamation and ordered dispersal. Deputies argued with riot guns and police with clubs patrolled the streets. The strikers, some of the younger ones with ukuleles on which they had been strumming to their chant of "Solidarity Forever", surged forward, hesitated, and settled down to await service of the court order.

The injunction was served on Under-Sheriff Donaldson late in the afternoon. While he read the 15 page document several hundred strikers crowded around his car to cheer, sing and shout. Police stood near but made no effort to quiet them.

"All right, boys, let them in," he said.

The strikers trooped into the hall, cheering and singing while police put aside riot guns and clubs.

"What do we care?" said Donaldson in discussing the injunction. "We are glad to get rid of this job."

The order restrains all Bergen county and Garfield police from interfering with lawful meetings or other legal activities of the strikers. It was embodied in a rule to show cause on May 6, why a permanent injunction should be issued.

Application for the injunction was made by Norman Thomas, Forest Bailey and Harry Ward, on behalf of the Civil Liberties union; Felix Penarisi, Gustave Deak and Samuel Lachnuk, for the united front committee of textile workers, and Max King and Frank Hadnagy, owners of lots at Atwater and Midland avenues. It was for speaking at a test meeting on April 13 on these lots that the Rev. Norman Thomas, former socialist candidate for governor of New York, was arrested and held in $10,000 bail.

Bribery of New York Police and Dry Agents

Disclosed in Memoranda Book Found on Rum Ship Seized in the Hudson River.

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP)—Record of thousands of dollars of "protection money" paid to police and prohibition agents by the rum rummers of the steamer Eker, which was seized in the Hudson river last night with a $1,200,000 alcohol cargo in her water tanks, the largest cargo seized this year, was disclosed in memoranda book found on the ship, Assistant Federal Attorney Stichman said today.

When the 12 members of the crew and another man found in a rowboat near the Eker were arraigned before Federal Commissioner O'Neil, Mr. Sichman revealed the discovery of the book containing entries of money paid for protection by the bootleggers.

These entries, he said, led him to believe that $20,000 had been paid for immunity for the ship's cargo.

Some of the notations in the book, he said, were: "Paid cops $8,500," paid prohibition agent $1,000," "paid Red $5,000," and "paid cop $125."

Mr. Stichman said he believed the Eker was operated by a rum ring and that the alcohol was destined for rum row ships which make their own "Scotch" and "rye." One of the men arrested, he said, was previously under indictment in connection with the alleged Dwyer liquor smuggling conspiracy.

The 12 men found on the Eker were charged with conspiracy to violate the Volstead act and were held in $3,500 bail each for a hearing May 14. The thirteenth man was held in $1,000 bail. Federal officials are still searching for the ship's master and engineer, who escaped before the seizure. The crew said they did not know the officers names.

CONFLICT IN FERRETING OUT TRIPLE SLAYING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 30—(AP)—Investigation of the machine gun triple slaying of three men, including William H. McSwiggin, assistant state's attorney, went on quietly today, while a controversy raged between officials in charge of ferreting out the slayers and bringing them to justice.

Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, stole a march on civic leaders who were talking of a special grand jury investigation in charge of a special prosecutor. He went before William V. Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal court, and obtained authorization for a special grand jury to be convened Monday.

Immediately, Oscar Wolff, coroner, issued a subpoena for Judge Brothers to appear before the coroner's inquest tomorrow, when the business men's jury convenes for the first hearing of testimony.

Coroner Wolff, recently defeated in the state wide primary in which Crowe followers generally were successful, refused to explain the subpoena for Judge Brothers. Wolff severely criticized the state's attorney's office for failure to notify him of the triple slaying until many hours after it had occurred.

No announcement of any progress towards identifying the slayers or of finding the machine gun used was forthcoming from any source today.

Plans for tightening the lid on vice resorts in the suburban tow-s went ahead with the swearing in of 100 Chicago detectives as deputy sheriffs.

BATTLE OVER FRENCH DEBT HAS OPENED IN THE SENATE

Senators Reed Borah and Harrison Led the Opposition to the Settlement Arranged by the Debt Commission and Approved by President Coolidge—Senator Borah Asserted That France is the Most Prosperous Nation in Europe—Senator Smoot Will Fight For Action Before Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, April 30—(AP)—The French war debt settlement was transmitted to congress today by President Coolidge, and it immediately met with an outburst of opposition in the senate.

Demands that the finance committee make a thorough-going investigation of all the facts upon which the American debt commission acted, were made by Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri; Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, and Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi.

Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, who is a member of the debt commission, said he would have no objection to calling on the treasury for all documents and papers relating to the settlement.

"But will the senator cooperate in a real investigation?" demanded Senator Harrison.

"I am not going to cooperate to hold this settlement up until after adjournment," retorted Senator Smoot.

Senator Reed warned that unless the committee examined every document, every paper and the minutes of the debt commission, if any, touching on the settlement, there will be "difficulty" in getting senate action on the agreement.

Chairman Borah wanted the committee to go outside the field suggested by other senators and examine into the real capacity of France to pay since that principle had been made a basis of the settlement.

"France is the most prosperous nation in Europe," he said, "and has been prosperous for the last three years. If we cannot collect more than 50 cents on the dollar, it is because the French citizens are not willing to pay taxes commensurate with the obligation placed upon them by the original agreement."

Prodded by Senator Reed, Mr. Smoot went into some of the details of the negotiations, disclosing that after rejecting the first French proposal last Monday, the American commission had made a counter-proposal which the French government accepted yesterday.

"How long did the meeting of yesterday last?" asked Senator Reed.

"It was brief," replied Senator Smoot. "The French accepted our proposal and all that was necessary was to sign."

Senator Reed retorted that there had been more secret negotiations in the foreign debt settlements than there were surrounding all of the secret treaties "down the ages," which President Wilson denounced.

In transmitting the debt settlement, President Coolidge sent only a brief message to congress. After formally announcing the signing of the agreement under the provisions of acts of congress, he said:

"I believe that the settlement upon the terms set forth in the agreement is fair and just to both governments and recommend its approval."

While the agreement contains no security clause relating to German reparations, it carries provisions similar to those or the other debt settlements providing for temporarily postponing annual payments in cases of emergency. Under the terms of this clause up to 1932, France upon ninety days notice can suspend for three years that part of any annual payment exceeding $20,000,000 while after that year it can suspend all of any annual report for a like period of time.

Suspended payments would bear interest at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent. annually, and they would have to be paid at the end of three years.

Senator Smoot declared that the written agreement represented the sum total of the bargain between the two countries and there were no understandings otherwise of any kind.

EXPLAINS TO FRENCH PRESS TERMS OF DEBT SETTLEMENT

PARIS, April 30.—(AP)—With a view to overcoming "fantastic and divergent" interpretations of the agreement reached at Washington for funding Frances debt to the United States, Finance Minister Peret issued a communique to the press tonight pointing out that the settlement is advantageous to France, and explaining the terms of the agreement.

He says the settlement is advantageous because the payments will not grow appreciably from the initial $20,000,000 until 1931 when it is reasonable to suppose the Dawes reparation plan will reach its maximum yield.

The finance minister called attention also to the fact that the settlement comprises a clause providing during the five years the French government may, on a 90-day notice, postpone payments in excess of the interest on the commercial debt of $20,000,000 for three years. The same provision remains applicable after the expiration of five years to the payments on the capital debt. Thus the minister figures that until 1930 the French government, if circumstances make it necessary, can limit its payments tothose now made, amounting to $20,000,000 yearly. He points out that while there is no safe-guard clause he considers the declaration of Mr. Smoot and Mr. Borah in the senate as indicating that American public opinion furnishes sufficient guarantees against demands for payment in excess of France's capacity to pay.

The impression in official circles, as voiced by M. Peret is that the settlement will have a beneficial effect on French credit, and that, considering the terms of the British and Belgian arrangements with the United States the agreement is favorable.

The franc did not react to the settlement, as was hoped, but went down steadily through the day, so that the closing of the bourse, it reached a new low level—30.43 to the dollar. Financial circles, however, did not display undue alarm, for they said it was due to the absence of the exact details of the settlement terms.

Altogether the accord is taken as a "necessary evil" which must be supported. There are some who think there is a possibility that the situation may change so as to make the continued transfer of money across the Atlantic such a blight to American business, that long before the expiration of the 62 years allowed for clearing up the debt, a new deal will be necessary.

"Now where are we going to get the money," is the burden of newspaper comment. One paper refers to the agreement with the United States and the expected arrangement with Great Britain as "62 years of financial bondage."

WHIPPING OF WIFE-BEATER WAS ENJOYED BY WOMEN

BALTIMORE, April 30.—(AP)—"Hey, sheriff, I'd let you lick me like that any time"—the voice of a witness at Sheriff John E. Potee, in the corridor of the Baltimore city jail, tucked the cat-o'-nine-tails under his arm after administering five lashes to the bare back of James H. Kingsmore, convicted wife beater.

"Aw," rejoined the only sheriff called upon to wield the lash in five years. He retreated to the warden's office, and took the whip with him.

Four women were among the official witnesses.

"We enjoyed the whipping," said their spokesman. "It was fine. There ought to be more of them."

Stretched on the whipping post, wrists and legs manacled, Kingsmore took his whipping without a murmur. He flinched only, very slightly. Released from the post, he went to his prison cot with red welts across his back, but his skin unbroken.

"You've licked an innocent man," he flung at the sheriff as he was led away. Later the jail physician reported Kingsmore to be in a state of collapse from nervousness, but to show no effects of the whipping.

JEWETT CITY

HAD NARROW ESCAPE AT TADPOLE BRIDGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, April 30—An automobile accident that was slated for a bad one, at Tadpole bridge Friday afternoon, served to show how narrow an escape may be. Joseph H. Wellington of Baltic, a salesman for Lord and Burnham, boiler makers, of New York state, coming south, ran through the heavy fence on the south side of the bridge. The front wheels of his car ran off the bridge and hung down over the railroad tracks. That the machine didn't drop 20 feet to the roadbed is answerable in the fact, that the ripping out of 20 to 30 feet of heavy fence, stopped the headway of the car. Mr. Wellington climbed out unhurt, and his car was not damaged to any extent. He told Officer Henry Vegiard, that he was unable to explain how it happened.

Even the once famous Voluntown arbutus woods have been unable to stand the drain.

KEEPING MEXICAN BOUNDARY LINED UP PROVES HARD TASK

EL PASO, Texas, April 30 (AP)—Keeping the international boundary between Mexico and the United States properly "lined up" is no sinecure.

At least, this is what Gen. Curry and Gustavo P. Serano, Uncle Sam's "stake keepers" in the southwest have found. Lightning, rivers and other natural agencies as well as human hands keep them on the jump continually lest the boundary line stray afield.

A recent inspection of the markers between here and San Diego, California, revealed the following casualties:

DANIELSON

TO DEMONSTRATE HOW FOREST PRUNING IS DONE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 30—If one is interested in such work, a visit to a forest pruning demonstration on the farm of Christina Kerr on the Brooklyn-Canterbury road at 10 o'clock (S. T.) this morning will be well worth while. The demonstration is to be given by A. A. Doppel, specialist from the Connecticut Agricultural college extension service.

County Agent Frank L. Davis of Putnam says that there is an increased interest in the planting of pine on what may be termed idle acres. According to Mr. Doppel, pine trees will yield a good profit over expenses and in addition will furnish a refuge for game and will beautify any piece of farm property.

At this morning's meeting there will be a chance to ask questions in regard to thinning the woodlot, the value of different kinds of lumber, as well as the actual demonstration in planting female pine trees that will be available for demonstration work.

All interested are invited to take advantage of the information that will be presented on the subject of cordwood and timber, which is becoming an important part of the farm business.

Workers in the County Y. M. C. A. drive that will open next week are to gather at the Attawaugan hotel for a dinner next Tuesday evening. Hugh D. Maydole of the National Y. M. C. It is the ambition of the local organization to report this amount pledged when the annual banquet is held at Putnam next Friday evening.

Now that May is here, baseball again moves up into the front row. This is suggested by the coming to Danielson on Sunday of the Jewett City team to play Danielson at Connecticut Mills field. Danielson has a good team this season and the baseball fans who like to see games without traveling any great distance to do so have their opportunity.

Goodyear is stirring up enthusiasm for its baseball team, which made such a good record last year. This year's team likely will be stronger and faster than the 1925 outfit, which gave a good account of itself at all times. Goodyear has a nice playing field and there is very general enthusiasm over the sport in that community.

Development of the Boy Scout organization in Danielson is a prospect of the immediate future. Sufficient interest and enthusiasm already has been shown to warrant the belief that many boys will be brought into line this season and a good organization developed.

Though the textile business is spotty throughout the New England states, it is of interest to note that the plant of the Central Worsted company at Central Village is operating day and night and has plenty of business on hand. This concern manufactures a splendid line of worsteds that have a high reputation with the trade.

The service at Trinity church in Brooklyn on Sunday will be at 9:30 a. m., daylight saving time, Rev. Leonard R. Richards said Friday afternoon. The Sunday services at St. Alban's church in Danielson will be on a daylight saving schedule.

APRIL WAS A VERY COLD SPRING MONTH

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 30—Writing of old-fashioned winters, Judge James N. Tucker, who has lived to see more than 70 cold weather periods, calls attention to the interesting fact that the first 20 days of April of this year had an average minimum temperature lower than the first 20 days of last December, which was a comparatively mild winter month. It will be remembered Judge Tucker is an accurate and painstaking diarist. He has kept weather records for years.

The funeral was held Friday at 2 o'clock, at Wakefield. Burial was in Wood River cemetery. He leaves his wife, sister and two small children, a boy 4 and a girl 9 months.

PUTNAM

ANNOUNCES DATES OF COMING MONTHLY LECTURES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 30.—Rev. Frederick C. Baker, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at North Grosvenordale, has announced a new series of popular monthly lectures to be given on the first Sunday evening of each month for the 11 months of the conference year. The general subject of the series is on "The Decalogue in the Life of Today, or the Ten Commandments With Some Modern Applications".

The subjects and dates of the lectures are as follows:

May 3.—"Some Gods of Modern Society As Seen Under the X-Ray of the First Commandment."

June 6.—"A Three-fold Call from the Voice of the Third Commandment."

August 1.—"The Law of Labor and the Day of Rest."

September 5.—"Filial Affection as Voiced in the Fifth Commandment."

October 3.—"The Control of Temper."

George W. Perry, city engineer has been engaged by the state highway department to survey the road from West Woodstock to Eastford. He has already begun the work, which will probably take three months, with Owen J. White and William H. Mansfield, Jr., as assistants.

The town of Woodstock has voted an appropriation to have the road rebuilt by the state highway department under the state aid plan from the home of Clinton Taylor near the West Woodstock line. Under the state aid law, the highway department does the work, paying three fourths of the cost and takes care of the upkeep. The desirability of a cement road kept up in this way that has earned for Connecticut the reputation of having the best highways in the country, has been stressed by the citizens of Eastford, Woodstock and Putnam, and is fully recognized by Commissioner Macdonald. The survey now being made will give all the necessary data as to costs, strengthening of bridges, culverts, diversions from the present road.

Eastford has no railway connection, no trolley line and for times during the winter season has been almost isolated from the rest of the world. Probably the most dependable passenger service that Eastford ever had was when the late W. H. Whittemore, "Deadwood Dick" of Webster, who died a few years ago, drove an old style coach every day between Putnam and Eastford, regardless of weather conditions.

A modern road for automobiles to Eastford would certainly be welcomed by the people of that town as well as by the citizens of the surrounding community.

With the assistance of Miss Snyder it was possible to have Miss Erickson of the Food and Dairy council at Hartford give a stereopticon lecture on health for the assembly morning at the Israel school this week. Miss Erickson showed the value of good posture, good exercise, proper food, plenty of sleep, necessity of fresh air at all times and the worth of good health later in life, the foundation of which must be laid in youth. Miss Erickson also talked to the lower grades.

Professor Charles F. Wheeler of Storrs will give a stereopticon lecture at Grange hall next Tuesday evening, May 4, to the members of Quinnatisset grange. There will be musical numbers given by Mrs. Beulah Dawson, who is reputed to be an accomplished singer and Mrs. L. B. Penny, pianist, both of Storrs.

Thomas H. deCoudres has been the recent guest of his old time friend, H. W. Boynton at Bristol. Mr. Boynton, who is taking things easily these days, is one of the recognized fine scholars and writers of the country. The disappearance of his contributions from the high class magazines has been noted and regretted.

Clarence H. Child of Woodstock, Conn., has been appointed executor of the estate of Hezekiah P. Hibbard, late of Woodstock by Judge Robert E. Harris.

For the past five years they have lived at New Britian where he has been in charge of the tractor sales of the company.

Mrs. Newton conducted a B. T. L. quiz, consisting of questions regarding the percentage of alcohol contained in beer, wine, and cider and the effects of alcohol on the heart, also information in regard to denatured alcohol. AWAY with washboard and bar soap! Away with the reddened hands and aching backs of old-fashioned washdays!

This new way is easy. No weary toil over the washboard. You just soak—rinse—and your week's wash is whiter than you've ever seen it! And out on the line hours earlier!

Millions of women now let Rinso do the hard work of washing for them.

Saves clothes —easy on hands

Rinso is rich, gentle soap—granulated. It's all you need on washday. No bar soaps, chips or powders. No laundry soap is easier on hands or safer for clothes. Contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches to injure white clothes or fast colors.

No matter how hard the water, Rinso gives thick, lasting suds. Soak the wash in these creamy suds—and the dirt and stains just loosen and float off. Even the most soiled parts need only a gentle rub between the fingers. Thus, clothes last longer for they aren't rubbed threadbare against a washboard.

AUTO DEATHS IN STATE

At time of war, in case of epidemic following some disaster great distress is manifested over the large number of deaths. There is a feeling that such ought not to exist and that something should be done to correct conditions which make anything of the kind possible.

And yet there doesn't appear to be any such feeling in regard to the great number of automobile deaths each year. Are they being accepted as a matter of course under the belief that nothing can be done to prevent them? With the number increasing each year in spite of the efforts that are put forth to check them, one might gain such an impression.

[illegible] it is shown that more than [illegible] per cent. of all the accidental deaths in this state last year were caused by motor vehicles, which is ten [illegible] cent. more than the ratio for the country country. It is not a particularly [illegible]-pleasing disclosure. It is a statement of facts, however, which should [illegible]demonstrate to the automobile driver and to the users of the highway that while there may have been a certain degree of care exercised last year it should undergo a large increase in [illegible] a correctional move.

[illegible] have great dread of diphtheria and typhoid and yet the motor vehicle department report shows that the motor vehicle death rate has greatly [illegible]exceed the death rates of both [illegible] diseases in Connecticut. The [illegible] is not the same as would be the case in connection with such an increase in death rates from disease, and yet the chance to prevent such conditions is much easier in connection with the automobile.

Instead of a larger number of motor vehicle deaths and accidents each year there should be fewer. The tendency is clearly in the wrong direction and the highways are becoming horrible chamber spots because those who use them in any way fail to take the proper care.

MADE IN AMERICA

For the purpose of increasing the production of goods that are made in this country a campaign has been launched by the National Association of Manufacturers for a buying campaign of American made goods, and for the purpose of awakening interest in this endeavor, red, white and blue stickers with the slogan Made in the U. S. A. will be seen from one end of the country to the other. Whatever is done for the purpose of keeping the wheels of industry running deserves support. The fact is that many people are desirous of getting American made goods and even believe that they are doing so only to find out after the purchase that they were made elsewhere.

In many instances no thought is given to the matter at the time of purchase while in other instances the belief prevailed that imported goods were better, but after purchasing them it has been found that American made products are in every way as good, if not better, and the difference in price that accompanies the imported goods was avoided.

The situation is not so different than that which existed in a Rhode Island factory recently where young women turning out lisle thread hose brought a ten per cent increase in wages. The manager agreed to raise the wages of every girl in the shop who had on a pair of lisle thread stockings, whether made in that shop or not. Since all the stockings worn that day were silk he didn't have to pay the raise. The employes however expected higher wages from a business to which they were giving assistance.

Too often it is that case with American made goods. There is a desire for prosperity and more business but don't seem to be considered necessary to give it the proper encouragement through the purchase of American made goods. Perhaps such a campaign as is intended through the [illegible]-campaign will reach those [illegible].

THE RADIO SITUATION

[illegible] all the efforts to bring about a solution of radio broadcasting it seems going to stand in the way of understanding the need of regulation. Through common consent the department of commerce has been [illegible] this work. The result is that a [illegible] mixup has been avoided. But [illegible] one broadcasting company balks [illegible] to abide by the regulations and takes the matter to court [illegible] has it decided that there is no [illegible] require it to respect the regulations. It is time that real authority [illegible] established by congress. How badly [illegible] of hand the situation will get [illegible] something be done is clearly [illegible].

[illegible] to play. Radio fans are [illegible] in number every day and it [illegible] been made apparent that regulation [illegible] necessary. Bills [illegible] have been introduced in congress in recognition thereof and the house has acted favorably upon the White bill which vests the control of radio in the department of commerce. Only this week has the senate committee which has had this matter before it come forth with a recommendation and it supports the Dill bill.

Both bills intend to have the same thing accomplished. By the White bill, the bill by the way which is favored by the administration, there would be a continuation of that satisfactory work which has been carried on under Secretary Hoover's direction. Under the senate bill such work would be turned over to an independent commission responsible only to itself.

With the experiences with the shipping and other boards in mind, it can be appreciated that the administration desires nothing more of the kind. There are ted many such commissions now, and as the situation stands there is nothing the matter with the regulation that has been carried on under the department of commerce. There's no reason discernible why there should be a change from the known and satisfactory method to the unknown, especially when a similar method has proved so undesirable in dealing with other problems.

It remains to be seen what congress will do, and whether the senate by its support of the committee report will block regulation entirely at this time.

TOO MUCH LENIENCY

For some time in the vicinity of Boston there have been repeated instances where holdups have taken place, stores been robbed, payrolls been stolen and murders have been committed. There have also been disclosures concerning the lax manner in which the law has been enforced in dealing with those engaged in lawless operations. Not a little awakening in this direction has been brought about by the attention with the registrar of motor vehicles of that state has been directing to the manner displayed by the courts and officials in the treatment of offenders.

Only recently it became apparent that the tendency toward leniency which has been displayed should be replaced by increased severity and warning to that effect has been issued. Courts have been prompt to act in certain instances and those who have been causing terror to the peace loving communities have been made an example of. Severe sentences have been imposed and yet, even though crime to some may appear to be less attractive, it is apparent that the impression has been gained by others that law is something which doesn't have to be respected by them.

A particularly significant case in regard to the manner in which crime has come to attract the youth is that where a quartette of 17 year old boys not only staged holdups and robberies but shot down in cold blood a policeman when he questioned the ownership of the machine they were driving.

Desperate youngsters of this type disclose an unfortunate and deplorable situation. It is fortunate that they have been caught before they have had a chance to add to their criminal acts. They have acted with full knowledge of what could be expected and have apparently believed that they were clever enough to escape detection. Their acts have been carefully planned. Their weapons have been carried for a purpose and been used. They must expect that they will have to pay the penalty. Perhaps if there had not been so much leniency with others they would not have been lured into such activities.

CHILD HEALTH DAY

The children of today become the citizens of tomorrow. It is possible to neglect them so that they will be unprepared to take care of the duties that devolve upon them, or it is possible to give them the guidance that is necessary in various ways in order to make them fit in every respect to shoulder responsibilities that are sure to confront them.

May day is as fitting a time as any for the observance of National Child Health day. With the president and governors asking its observance there should be an increased interest displayed in doing greater things for the children.

There is such a thing as letting the children take care of themselves and get along the best way they can but the desirability of throwing needed protections about them and preventing them from falling into certain pitfalls is fully obvious. Some of the best preventive work can be done among the children and certainly it is preferable that there should be a tackling of the problems while a solution is possible than to wait until it is too late for help.

Efforts in behalf of child health should be carried on as assiduously as the endeavors to protect the youngsters against the steadily increasing perils of the streets. Better and healthier children is a goal worth striving for at all times. If Child Health day will serve to help the cause let it by all means be generally observed.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

As far as the record goes the first day of May has no specific historical importance. And yet it suggests some things that are food for serious thought. And this applies particularly to those sections of our country where May first is fixed upon as moving day. It is the day on which one tenement is exchanged for another. There are several reasons for this: some people are possessed of a restless disposition and are never satisfied with out place for any considerable length of time; the principal thing in life for them is to be on the go. Again there are those with social aspirations who with increased finances, feel that they are entitled to a better place of residence in the community. Others make a change because the landlord has raised the rent which they deem an injustice. And still there are those who are compelled to move because so small a matter as paying the rent is not a matter of conscience.

There is another and more tragic side to this frequent change of residence. Some people we know, for various reasons, seldom remain under one roof for more than a year at a time. They either shift from house to house in the same town on the impulse of the moment, as it were, or migrate to some new community. The tragedy of this is the children grow up without the opportunity of making any very strong local attachments. There is no one place that they can call home. One place is just the same as another because it is only a spot of temporary sojourn. The result of such living is fatal to any strong moral conception of citizenship. If a single place has meant so very little to them, will a combination or union of places, such as a country, mean much more. It is doubtless true that communism and bolshevism find most of its converts here.

Another dark phase of this constant moving from place to place is the greed and injustice of landlordism. Not all landlords by any means are cold and heartless Skylocks, but there are are enough of them to cause more misery than we think. I mean the type of landlord who will sell his soul for a ten per cent raise in the rent. A laboring man who has lost his job has been ordered out of house and home from fear that the rent will not be promptly paid. Even sickness will not touch the stony heart of those insane money-grabbers, and families have been turned out with no other place to receive them but the sidewalk. Ask any slum worker in our cities, sent by the churches in the name of Christ—ask any of them what they think of this type of landlordism! Governor Smith of New York is to be commended for the active interest he is taking to better the tenement condition of New York city.

Turning from this mercenary and grimy side of life, or rather of existence, to the custom in other countries, and to some measure in our own country, is like coming out of a coal mine into the gorgeous sunlight of a typical May day. In many countries of Europe Mayday is a season for rejoicing, as it also is here. It is made an appeal particularly to the young people. Even in Puritan times, when joyousness was looked askance, no objections seem to have been made to the dance around the Maypole, with its flowers, gay costumes, singing and coronation of the May queen. The season of the year ordinarily suggests this outburst of young life in innocent pleasure and it would be well if our schools and churches took greater pains in promoting the spirit of Maytime. It is to be regretted that this beautiful custom is becoming almost obsolete.

Logically this last thought brings us face to face with the whole matter of sports and athletic games. It is a sad thing for any man to get so old in spirit that he no longer loves to play. Whether one is nine or 90 it is for his best interest to keep in active touch with the life about him. When one loses all interest in the active sunny things of life, he is drifting fast toward the undertaker. If there were more golf there would be less gastritis; more bowling less brawling; more tennis less tribulation from one's liver; more long hikes shorter spells of hypochondria that flourish in stuffy, ill-ventilated rooms. If there's anything the matter with your liver be more of a liver outdoors in the lovely month of May. Labor among the lilies and the exercise in the sunshine will take the saffron out of your liver. There is everything to be said for the month of May. Mingle play with your work and you will see God in everything and everybody.

Is there not some justification in our present-day criticism of reform schools? Not that they fail in doing their part in protecting the public safety (in a measure) from delinquents; not that they are over strict in discipline or can be justly accused of cruelty or non-interest in their work. But because they miss the main object or their existence—that of reform. Judge Henry Neil, who has had an extensive experience in dealing with wayward boys, says this: "I have studied their methods in England, Ireland, Scotland, South Africa, and practically in every American state. Essentially they are all alike. They have fine buildings and beautiful grounds and the best of intentions and lots of boys to reform. I have gone into official reports, and have found that they really reform about five per cent."

How natural it is for the human mind to put its mental images into material form! This was the only way in which the primitive man could understand the various phenomena of nature. Mythology arose in this way. Oceanus was a mighty man, Gulfs, bays, inlets and seas were his children all of whom had names. Supreme power was personified in a Jupiter and was the king or gods and men. War was idealized in the form of cruel Mars. Diana was the goddess of the chase, as Venus was of physical beauty. Thus was built a celestial hierarchy of several thousand beings. Throughout all history the things invisible to the material eye have been made visible by physical images. The kindgarten system is founded on this idea. It is well to put Gen. Washington and his horse into bronze so that he may be more clearly visualized. Let the nation's great be sculptured in marble that the unseen may come through the image of the seen!

The approach of warm weather turns one's eyes toward recreation places. It is the time of the year in which the automobile brings us into the shadow of The Old Man of The Mountain and the nearby flume. Not so much farther—in the terms of the automobile—is The Thousand Islands, Lake George, Saratoga, and the Revolutionary scenes around Lake Champlain. Central New York is historic, and Niagara Falls international in its fame. If time and money are sufficient many will probably motor to the great. Of them all, the national park I mention this particularly at this time because The Yellowstone National park was established by the act of congress, May 1, 1872—54 years ago today and it has proved itself to be a spot of scenic beauty unrivalled by any other on earth.

It's better late than never, but the man who buys a summer suit in April rather early than late.

HOW THE TWO AMERICAS NEED EACH OTHER

In connection with the United States tour of a group of Latin-American editors the National Geographic Society has issued, from its Washington, D. C., headquarters, the following bulletin dealing with the geographic interdependence of the two Americas.

"Mr. American Business Man from an inland city reads of the visiting Latin-Americans and sees occasional mention of the Monroe Doctrine.

"'All well enough,' he says to himself, 'But that doesn't hit me where I live. I must be about my day's work.'

"So he draws on his shoes, tanned with extract from the quebracho tree, literally the axe breaker—tough enough to justify its name and so heavy that hollow metal cylinders must be attached to float it down the forested Parana.

"Then he proceeds to the bath-room to use the shaving cream and tooth paste contained in tubes of tin which may have come from Bolivia—that country produces one-fourth of the world's tin supply.

Brazil—Where Coffee Comes From.

"He goes down to breakfast, and he doesn't mind much what breakfast is, so long as the coffee is good—coffee from Brazil, the country to which millions of homes pay morning tribute by their steaming coffee cups. And thousands have employment in a single Connecticut factory which makes percolators.

"He turns to his morning paper, and the crop reports. He ma[illegible] unmindful of the fact, but it [illegible] deserts of Chile that make the [illegible] gardens grow. When the incess[illegible] of multiplying population began to tax the soil [illegible] the crops of the civilized [illegible] nations all turned to tha[illegible] of South America for the [illegible] that would restore the [illegible] exhausted acres.

"Chile's nitrates likewise [illegible] power into the explosives of Chi[illegible].

"And explosives are not [illegible] accessories of war, they blast [illegible] routes of railroads, they carve [illegible] the courses of aqueducts, and quarry our building stone.

"Breakfast over, our imaginary business friend puts on his Panama hat—from Ecuador—and rides to his office in an automobile, made possible largely because Brazil taught the world the value of rubber. Today that country supplies only a fraction of the world demand for this product, but in yielding to the far east its rubber supremacy Brazil, in turn, adapted to her own hillsides the coffee plant which tradition tells us originated in Abyssinia.

Home of Corn and Potatoes

"South America can claim other gifts to mankind, gifts that now are widely dispersed.

"An expedition of the National Geographic society, some years ago, penetrated to the ruins of an ancient inca wonder city—a city where pre-Columbian matrons no doubt bewailed certain fashions of the younger Inca generations—those freakish pins, for example, with humming birds carved on their heads and those new fangled earrings, with discs on the outer side of the ear lobes, so perforated that tiny feathers might be stuck in them.

"It was among the granite stairways and fountains of this long forgotten city of Machu Picchu that explorers found terrace gardens which are believed to be the origin places of two major food crops of modern times, the white potato and Indian corn.

How Roofs and Roads are Minco

"Our friend drives into the city. His balloon tires roll over highways paved with asphalt from Trinidad until he reaches his office whose roof is likewise dug from that famous pitch lake. Day after day the asphalt is dug up and carted away, night after night the pitch rises up again to help make the roofs and the roads of both Americas.

"The wheat grower has an immediate concern with Central America. Thousands of tons of Kennequin, the fiber which yields binder twine, imported from Yucatan, make possible the use of the harvesting machine, a saving reflected in the price of every loaf or bread we buy.

"Nature has conspired to bind the two America's with that strongest tie of international friendship—the need for each others products. Africa is South America's nearest continental neighbor, but even were Africa dotted with prosperous commercial communities one cannot imagine any very great trade between South America and Africa. Their resources are too much alike.

"South America's rich store of tropical fruits and raw materials and forest products, many of them found nowhere else in the world, not only fill certain empty shelves in North America's pantries and workshops, they also fill the pockets of South Americans so that they may buy more and more of the things we make.

Now "Bridged" by Canal

"Before the days of the Panama canal, Pacific South America was nearer Europe, by water, than she was to the great population centers of the United States. Now the two continents have been bridged, not severed, by the canal. Florida is due north of South America's Pacific coast by the steering wheel as well as by the compass; the great Mississippi valley looks south through the port of New Orleans, while Galveston and Houston raise new docks for this new trade entrance.

"One is tempted to tell the stories of many other resources and aspects of Latin America: how she contributes the iodine that heals the wounds of mankind and first grew the quinine that helps conquer the tropics; how she tickles our palates with vanilla and chocolates and delights the eye with the emeralds that come only from Colombia; how Paraguay holds vast virtually untouched deposits of manganese, used to alloy steel and copper, essential metals of an engineering and electrical age; how the Andes range spans the Equator with habitable cities perched on her sheer, cool heights and holds within her tremendous masses rich mineral deposits.

"South America today has twice the area of Europe and less than two-thirds the combined populations of France and Italy.

"Its resources and its riches have been least tapped of those of any continent; therefore its potential supplies of raw materials and the prospective commerce that will follow their further development make it one of the most interesting regions in all the world to the student of applied geography."

From Small Beginnings

Auguste Rodin, the Little Parisian, the Great Sculptor.

"A bullet through him would be bad for France," said one of the National Guard of Paris in 1870 to another, as he nodded his head toward a man of 30—soldierly-looking, imposing figure. "Better kill a score of the canaille of the streets than one such man as Auguste Rodin!"

Auguste Rodin, fortunately for France, was not shot in the street rioting. He escaped the bullet as he had escaped the dangers of poverty. Almost self-educated in art as a boy, he had been made wretched because he was refused admission to the great art school. With the gift of all genius he found his way elsewhere, and stuck to it until he had succeeded. At Sevres he had worked happily and creatively. Now the war interrupted. However, he lived, and then continued his study and his efforts—for is not all genius largely effort? In five years he was making sculpture such as had never been made before—dramatic, powerful, original, impressionistic, telling of giant men and of still more giant ideals.

The whole world knows his "Thinker," grim and colossal as it is. Most people know less about the noble statues, the beautiful doors, the wonderful ceramics that he made. Today museums are full of the highly original work of the young man who was a national guardsman in 1870. Great universities have honored him, and the world has bowed to him—all because, determined to succeed, a young man, born in the poverty of Paris, mastered every failure and every rebuff that Fate sent against him, studied hard, and worked patiently.

In the colossal figures, or the grim sculpture like "The Hand of God" there is much of the story of the tense effort and determination of Auguste Rodin, the man.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

A prophet in his own country as well as in other lands, Sir George H. Knibbs, engineer, statistician, surveyor, chemist, physicist, astronomer, psychologist, philosopher, educator and artist, is the greatest figure of science in Australia. As director of the Federal Institute of Science and Industry, his career has received recognition both in the commonwealth and abroad. Few men have represented Australia at more congresses upon more subjects in more parts of the world. In 1902-3 he made a study of the educational systems of Europe and America for his government. In 1909 as his country's delegate he investigated scientific and economic questions in all parts of the world. In 1919-1920 he represented Australia at a conference on taxation and war profits in London. Prior to his appointment to his present post Sir George was for 17 years professor of physics in the university of Sydney.

Stories That Recall Others

Rough On Dad.

Robert is four years old and has often had mother express very definite religious views. It is evident from the following conversation, however, that Robert has a very high regard for daddy, even though daddy does not take his religion so seriously.

"Robert, do you want to go to heaven?"

"No, I'm going with daddy. Mother's going to heaven."

A Narrow Escape.

On the way to visit a sick friend Mr. X. met an acquaintance and invited him to go with him. The invitation was accepted and they proceeded in Mr. X's roadster.

The visit ended they both started for the place where the car was parked, with the guest preceding Mr. X by 10 to 15 feet.

Reaching what he thought was his friend's roadster, the guest absentmindedly opened the door and started to deposit himself therein when noticed by his host, who had him hurried disembarked from the car.

Had the owner of the car seen the absentminded one entering his car he probably would have thought him an auto bandit and the humorous aspect of the situation might have taken on a little of the tragic.

Some men go to bed too late ever to wake up famous.

Sunday Morning Talk

THE PARABLES

The Parables, as they are called are the wisdom of Jesus, applied to the daily life of man. They are not vague aphorism, not philosophical maxims, not glittering generalities to catch the ear and gratify the intellect. They are the application of great subtle truths to the smallest and commonest events of life; and are given in the simplest form, and in the common dialect of the people with whom Jesus walked, a child can understand them, and a scholar can appreciate their force and beauty.

Through them all runs one great tone By their fruits ye shall know them.

Not they who say Lord, Lord, but they who do the will of the Father.

A good man out of the good treasures of his heart bringeth forth good things, and an evil man out of the evil treasures of his heart bringeth forth evil things.

The parable of the good Samaritan is the zeal and condemnation of hatred and bitterness. Not that men may not differ in their forms of worship; but there is one way of doing good common to all, and it was the despised Samaritan who showed how; this parable if men believe it, is the death of bigotry and persecution.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, my brothers, ye have done it to me." Words cannot be plainer, or more divine. The wisdom of Jesus is shown in the calm confidence with which he spoke His truths in the ears of men. For a long time they reached the ears of the poor and despised. But at last, when He came to Jerusalem in the courts of the Holy Temple; When He drove out the traders from those courts; when He spoke His simple truths in the ears of the rich, and especially in the ears of the Pharisees they derided Him and laughed Him to scorn. He spoke and it rested in the fallow earth, waiting the day when it should quicken into life and growth. There is something wonderful in the short prayer which Jesus gave to His disciples as their model "Our Father who are in heaven." The language is plain and simple, the sentiment trustful and childlike. No such prayer was uttered before, a prayer which expresses in the fewest and simplest words, the entire confidence of the soul in the wisdom and goodness of God. He will do what is best. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust do corrupt and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." Does anyone believe these words? One might ask looking out upon the surface of human life seeing mankind scheming day and night to lay up for themselves treasures that shall so soon pass away. They have not discovered that the life of a man is given him that he may do—may work; not for himself alone, but for all.

Also Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Or all beings they are the weakest, but they are the purest, the truest, the most lonely; they approach the angelic nature. But these weak ever Jesus loved. He wished them to come to Him. His soul was refreshed by their truthful words. Let us trust Him as the little child, may we walk from day to day trusting Him fully who is able to do all things.

TROUBLES OF YOUTH LAID BEFORE DOOR OF FAMILY

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—The family shortcomings again are held responsible for the mooted nervous symptoms and the delinquencies of the young people today.

The truth is, desert sociologists and educators, that the position of both parents in the family and of the family within the social pattern, is changing.

The family of the future, as pictured by these authorities in their published symposium, Concerning Parents, will give the mother full scope for her powers as an individual; will give the father the chance to study child training and take more active part in his child's upbringing, and will transfer from both parents to the community some of the more irksome tasks of the home.

Mothers today fail to provide their children with the "serenity" as necessary to them as milk, orange juice and sunshine, said Dr. Ethel Puffer Howes, director of Smith College Institute for the Coordination of Women's Interests. They fail to dispense serenity because they have not achieved it, she added.

"Talk of suppressed desires! It is suppressed powers that I believe is at the root of much of the restlessness and instability among our women today and I have found psychiatrists to agree. The fact is, society has now no frame for the mother who needs also to be a person. Children need letting alone."

Helen Woolley, assistant director of the Merrill-Palmer school at Detroit, can see no reason why the type of educational opportunity that offers a study of childhood should not be thrown open to students of both sexes. "Let the father take over the reins of the family," she suggested.

"I know many a family in which it is the father who has far more native intelligence about the training of the children than the mother," Dr. Woolley declared. "That is a matter of personality rather than sex."

The chief difficulty in the care of little children in the home consists in the overwhelming effect of the parents' conduct upon the child, asserted Dr. Beatrice Hinkle, child specialist.

"And when one realizes that by far the larger number of parents are emotionally undeveloped, it is clear why sociologists begin to despair of ever finding in the family, conditions which will contribute to a more emotionally mature and evolved humanity."

"The new relations between men and women demand an emotional maturity on the part of each. The labor of family care will be put on a professional basis, with only those eligible who have qualified by as strict a training as is required for any other of the modern professions. This will inevitably bring about a new family relationship, and an atmosphere most desirable for the children."

ONE PONTOON HAS BEEN SUNK NEAR THE SUB S-51

NEW LONDON, April 30.—(AP)—The first of eight huge pontoons which will be used in efforts to raise the submarine S-51, rammed and sunk off Block Island last fall, was brought to the scene of operations and sunk, preparatory to being attached to the sunken vessel today. Weather conditions handicapped the work somewhat, but daily progress is being made. It is expected that the second pontoon will be lowered and put into position tomorrow and the other six will be attached as soon as possible.

BRAIDED THREAD MILL IS SOLD IN MYSTIC

MYSTIC, April 30 (AP)—Pursuant to an order of sales recently issued in the superior court in New London by Judge Christopher L. Avery in the case of the J. D. Crosby company and others against the Braided Thread corporation, Attorney Benjamin F. Hewitt, of this town, receiver for the corporation, today sold the plant and property to A. A. Green, of Providence, R. I.

The sale was at auction and the purchase price was $22,000, which was $6,000 more than the amount of a first mortgage on the property. The property consists of considerable land, a large brick building and four smaller buildings and is located on the banks of the Mystic river. It is one of the oldest thread factories in this section of the country and for many years before it was purchased by the Braided Thread corporation, was operated by the Allen Spool and Thread company.

It is understood that Mr. Green will continue to manufacture thread at the plant.

The Braided Thread corporation was recently re-incorporated in Delaware and the sale today was a receiver's transaction, made for the purpose of disposing of the Connecticut assets of the corporation.

The golf club had brought an injunction against the woolen mill company on the ground that the use of flash boards on the dam at the Trading Cove brook had caused the water to back up and overflow the fourth fairway of the golf course. Attorney C. V. James appeared for the golf club and Attorney H. H. Pelis for the mill owners.

RESERVOIR DAM CONTRACT IS AWARDED TO HARTFORD FIRM

By a unanimous vote the board of water commissioners at a meeting in the water office, court house, Friday evening, awarded the contract for the construction of the Deep River reservoir dam to Louis Petrosi of Hartford. Mr. Petrosi's bid was $154,420, and the second bid was submitted by H. & J. P. Green Company, Worcester, $145,655, but as the Worcester company has had little if any experience in building a dam of the kind required for the new reservoir, their activities being largely on road work, the board felt the interests of the city would be best served in awarding the contract to the Hartford bidder who has had considerable experience in this line. The meeting had a full attendance, all members of the board being present.

They are President Frank Quinley, John J. Cprkery, Arthur E. Story Charles A. Hagberg, and John A. Mitchell. President Quinley presided at the meeting which was in session from 8 until 10:30 o'clock. Following is the list of those who submitted bids for the contest:

H. & J. P. Green Co., Worcester, $145,655; Louis Petrossi, Hartford, $154,420; Susto & Arrigoni, Middletown, $157,800; Cervedelia & Co., Milford, Mass., $173,840; Briggs Engineering & Construction Co., Providence, R. I., $214,595; A Phelps & Sons, Knoxville, Iowa $216,537; Joseph Long & Co., Leominster, Mass., $241,290; The Whiting Turner Construction Co., Baltimore, Md $243,047; Fred D. Miller & Co., Norwich, $244,430.

$201,680 SO FAR REALIZED FROM BRANDEGEE ESTATE

According to an accounting filed in Washington by the administrators of the estate of the late Senator Frank B. Brandegee of Connecticut, who committed suicide two yetars ago next October, his estate has so far realized the sum of $201,680 53.

This accounting applies only to the assets in the District of Columbia, and does not take into account the Maryland real estate, or what little may be realized from the Connecticut estate.

This first accounting brings into the scene the name of yet another prominent person, Senator McKinley of Illinois—this month defeated for renomination—to add to the names of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Senators McLean, Fodge and others who have been involved in the tangled financial web that ended in the death of the Connecticut senator. The report shows that the administrators have received $10,305 88 in cash from Mr. McKinley, who is listed as a "trustee."

It is also revealed that the year's salary of the senator, voted by congress last year to go to four nephews of Brandegee as the nearest heirs, has been turned back to the estate by these nephews. It totaled $7,500. The estate has also got a refund of $282.34 on the late senator's stationery allowance. It is revealed that the sale of the senator's automobiles and furniture and personal effect in his I street home, in Washington, where he killed himself, realized $28,583 65. Practically all of this came from the furnishings of the home, the cars bringing almost nothing.

According to this first accounting, the administrators today have a balance on hand of $131,960 99. It is also noted that certain securities have been transferred to New London. The transfer was made some time ago and noted at the time, and includes 100 shares in the Pequot Hotel corporation, a certificate of ownership in the Pequot Casino association, valued at $51.92, and 15 shares of the Nipignon Mining Lands company, valued at $45.

TETREAULT HOLDS LEAD IN FORESTERS' PINOCHLE

With a score of 7,50 John LeDoux jumped from seventh to fourth place Friday night in the Foresters' pinochle tournament. S. Kohanski was second with 6,790 and C. Bourne third with 6,770

The standing in the first division after the fourth night of play is as follows:

Tetreault 37,020; Clement 26,630; Bourne 25,920; LeDoux 25,780; S. Kohanski 25,560; J. Kohanski 24,250; Callahan 24,220; Johnson 24,100.

Although beaten by the Eagles this week, Friday's play was a practice for the "woodchoppers" in an effort to cut down the lead that the "birds" now have.

BOY SCOUTS WORKING IN CIVIC ACTIVITIES

At a recent meeting of the activities committee of the Norwich council of the Boy Scouts several plans for boys' work were brought up and approved. The destruction of caterpillers and their nests was made one of the major projects and already the Scouts have done very effective work, the town and vicinity having been divided into districts and each troop given a certain section to work. The marking of the Nipmuc path was endorsed and a large delegation will accompany the United Commercial Travelers on May 1st. The painting of the markers on the graves of the veterans of the war of 1812, Civil, Spanish and the World war was heartily approved and any assistance to the D. A. R. in their memorial work will be given. Already several hundred of these markers have been retouched under the direction of Scout Executive Bielefield. The change in appearance in these markers is apparent and there have been many favorable comments from the veterans and their families.

It was voted to cooperate with the chamber of commerce in the official opening of Fort Shantok and a conference will be arranged with the New London council for the purpose of building tepees at the old village site at Mohegan, this action to ask the approval of the state park commission.

Miantonomo monument and the grounds adjacent thereto need attention and last week the underbrush was cleared away and permission is to be sought of the Connecticut society of the Colonial wars to allow the planting of evergreen trees on the boundaries of this tract.

Troop patrol leaders conference at Highland Lake of the Hartford, Middletown, New London and Norwich councils was officially endorsed and many boys from Norwich will attend from this city. The civic committee already have plans, too, for the boys and the mottof of "service" seems to be a popular one. Scout Executive Fred J. Bielefeld is very enthusiastic about the scouts taking their part in the civic life of Norwich and is very willing to co-operate with the many civic organizations of the city and town.

ONIONS FROM TEXAS AND EGYPT IN ANNUAL RACE

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., April 30 (AP)—A ship loaded with onions speeds across the Atlantic from Egypt. A train loaded with a similar cargo rushes across the United States from the magic valley of the Rio Grande.

They are headed for New York and each is trying to get there first, while the onion farmers of Egypt and the valley watch the thrilling race with what might be termed "baited breath."

This classic sweepstakes of the appetite is run every year in the latter days of March. Texas raises enough onions to flavor all the salad in the world. So does Egypt. And the two crops mature at about the same time, with the gods of climate playing Egypt a little the favorite, just enough to balance the transportation advantage of the Rio Grande valley.

The race between Alexandria's fast boats and Texas' fast freight trains sometimes results in a dead heat at New York, which has the greatest onion appetite in the world.

Eight thousand bushels of this year's Egyptian crop were already on the high seas when the Texas movement began in the last ten days of March, and when this news was flashed into the valley that great vegetable garden suddenly vibrated with action. In such a contest every facility for speed is thrown into the scales, because a rich reward awaits the first arrival in New York. The government helps, the railroads help, and even the army and navy at times take a hand to speed the odiferous cargo on its way.

This year more than 11,000 cars of onions were grown onions. That market in a single year could devour the entire Texas crop of 1,500,000 bushels, but the shipment would have to be spread over the entire twelve months, and since the Texas crop must be picked within a period of three months, all of it cannot be sent to New York.

There are other mouths waiting for onions. Boston may be second to New York in total consumption but she beats the latter city in per capita consumption, using 503 bushels a year for every 1,000 inhabitants. Pittsburg, over a period of five years eats an average of 425 bushels for each 1,000 persons every year. About 175,000 bushels of Texas onions go to Chicago but there Texas meets competition from California, and in St. Louis she competes with Indiana, as in Cincinnati she vies with the Ohio product.

COMMISSION DECLARES DEMPSEY ELIGIBLE AND GIVES RICKARD LICENSE

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP)—Two obstacles barring the way to a championship fight between Jack Dempsey and either Harry Wills or Gene Tunney at the American league baseball park around September 18 were removed today when the state athletic commission ruled that Dempsey eligible and granted a license to Tex Rickard to promote boxing exhibitions at the Yankee stadium. This action virtually assures a title fight between Dempsey and either Harry Wills or Gene Tunney at the American league baseball park around September 18.

At the same time the board declared that Tex Rickard was within his rights in obtaining an option on the services of the heavyweight champion but it reiterated its previous statement that it still considered Harry Wills the outstanding challenger.

The commission would not reveal today whether he intended to proceed with his original intention of matching Tunney with the champion or starring to Wills, in accordance with the commission's wishes, but he notified the board he would appear within 30 days and announce his plans for a match.

The question of Dempsey's eligibility came up when Rickard was being questioned concerning his journey to Texas to sign Dempsey to a contract. Chairman Farley declared he was of the opinion that Dempsey was ineligible for failure to sign articles of agreement for a match with Wills and post the required $2,500 forfeit.

Commissioners George Brower and William Muldoon, however, overruled Chairman Farley in voting that Dempsey's action of July 17, 1925 in coming before the board and verbally agreeing to meet Wills automatically lifted the bars against him. Chairman Farley was not present at that meeting.

"Despite the fact that my colleagues ruled that Dempsey is eligible," said Chairman Farley, "I contend that he is ineligible because he did not sign a contract to meet Wills and did not post the required forfeit. However, the majority rules and I will yield to their decision. Evidently, I have been working under a misapprehension which has not been cleared by either Commissioner Brower or Muldoon during all these months."

John J. Phalen, chairman of the license commission, who was present at the meeting of July 17, 1925, clarified the situation by explaining the action of Commissioners Muldoon and Brower.

"Dempsey came before us and agreed to meet Wills but he explained he could not fight before September 1926 for reasons of his own" said Commissioner Phalen. "This was accepted by the commission and serves as the basis for today's ruling."

Rickard also applied for a renewal of the license at Madison Square Garden which was granted.

BENNETT HILL SETS NEW WORLD'S SPEED RECORD FOR BROAD TRACK

SPEEDWAY, N. J., April 30.—(AP)—Whirling around the wooden saucer at a rate of 146.7 miles an hour, Bennett Hill today set a new world's speed record for board tracks in connection with time trials for the 200-mile international auto race here tomorrow.

Hill created the new speed figure on his seventh turn of the mile and a half track after surpassing six previous times the former world's record of 143.8, set by Bob McDonogh at Culver City, Calif., March 21, 1926.

Hill, whose performances in his Miller machine have been the sensation of the time trials and established him as a favorite in tomorrow's inaugural race at the new Speedway successfully passed the qualifying tests yesterday, with a mark of 143.9. Fifteen of the nineteen drivers entered already have met the time requirements of turning at least one lap at 130 miles an hour or better. Earl Devore, with a mark of 139.2 and Dave Evans with 136.4, for his best lap, added their names to the list today.

Ralph De Palma, famous veteran and two foreign noblemen who came here especially for this race, have not yet qualified and will have their last chance tomorrow morning. The foreigners are Count Demarguenat, French driver, and Baron Derachewsky, winner of the Russian Grand Prix and a brother-in-law of Grand Duke Boris.

Among the noted drivers already qualified are Peter Depaolo, American speedway champion in 1925, Eddie Hearne, Harry Harts, Bob Mcdonogh, Ralph Hepbur, Dr. W. E. Shattuck, Frank Elliot and Fred Comer.

Between 50,000 and 100,000 spectators are expected to witness tomorrow's race. Prize money aggregating $20,000 will be distributed, with $12,000 going to the winner.

AGGIE MEET R. I. STATE IN TRACK MEET TODAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., April 30—Connecticut Aggies and Rhode Island state will engage in a dual track meet here tomorrow afternoon, in what will be the first home meet of the season for the Nutmeg Aggies.

On the basis of past performances, Connecticut looks stronger in the runs, while Rhode Island is expected to have the advantage in the field events. Although the Aggies lost to Wesleyan last week, Connecticut has been strengthened in the dashes by the return of Captain Quigley, who has been kept from participation by a pulled tendon.

Very little is known about the Rhode Island track squad, although it has been reported that they are strong in the field events. Coach Tootel of Rhode Island, a former Bowdoin star, was a member of the last Olympic team where he won first place in the hammer throw.

The Aggies will have Captain Quigley, Atwood and Kane for the sprint events. Captain Quigley holds the college record for the 220. Galant, Smith and Rutherford will run the quarter and half mile. Mulligan, who broke the college record for the mile last week, will attempt to lower the record again tomorrow. He will also enter the two mile event.

With the graduation of Johnson last year, the Aggies lost the best hurdler seen here in years. Connecticut didn't place in the hurdles at Wesleyan and very little is expected of them tomorrow.

Farwell and Gillette will be entered in the high jump and Brink, Kane, Atwood and Bitgood will strive for honors in the broad jump. Fine and Fienemann are entered in the pole vault.

Longo, who holds the college record, will put the shot along with Williams and Fienemann. Others who are expected to gather a few points for the Aggies are Hohn in the hammer throw and Kuhl in the javelin.

KAPLAN REFUSES TO FIGHT GARCIA IN NEW YORK

MERIDEN, April 30.—(AP)— Louis (Kid) Kaplan, of this city, world's featherweight champion, will accept a suspension from the New York state athletic commission rather than fight Bobby Garcia in a title bout at the Queensboro stadium, Long Island city, on June 1, Kaplan's manager, Denny McMahon, declared here tonight.

According to McMahon, the Kaplan-Garcia bout should be held in Connecticut. He declared it would prove a greater financial success in the champion's home state than in New York, where Garcia has shown he is not a drawing card Rather than meet Garcia at the Queensboro stadium at a possible financial loss, McMahon said, Kaplan will accept the suspension promised by the New York commission today if Kaplan did not go through with the match in New York.

State Boxing Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, of New London, when queried tonight, declared that when he had been officially apprised of the facts of the case he would "back Kaplan until the last gun is fired," provided the featherweight champion is in the right.

"I will suspend judgment until I hear both sides of the case," said Donohue. "If I find Kaplan is in the right, I will back him to the limit. I am not seeking a fight with the New York commission, but if it comes to that I will not run away. As a Connecticut boxer holding a Connecticut license, Kaplan is entitled to full protection and I will see that he gets it."

Commenting upon his decision, McMahon said: "The bout will be held here in Connecticut or it will not be held at all. It isn't fair to Kaplan to ask him to meet Garcia at Queensboro, for Garcia has proved in the past that he is not a great drawing card in New York. It is safe to say that the bout will draw a gate three times greater in Connecticut than it will in New York.

"It isn't fair to Connecticut boxing fans, for they haven't seen Kaplan in a championship battle since he defended his title against Babe Herman at Waterbury last December.

"In our last Connecticut appearance, against Billy Petrolle at Hartford on March one, Kaplan drew the largest indoor gate ever recorded in New England. Is it fair that Kaplan, a champion, be ordered to defend his crown in New York, where he will not attract a gate a third as large as one in his own state?

"We don't fear Garcia, wouldn't fear him in New York. We hold two victories over him, one of which was scored in the featherweight elimination tournament, and we fought him to a draw at Waterbury a couple of years ago."

DELANEY MUST MEET BERLENBACH ON JUNE 10

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP)—Jack Delaney must meet Paul Berlenbach in a title match at the Yankee Stadium June 10, under Tex Rickard's promotion or forfeit his rights as the outstanding challenger in the light-heavyweight division. This was the decision of the state athletic commission today in reviewing the case involving contracts signed by the champion and his challenger with two different promoters.

Rickard has Berlenbach signed but is unable to obtain Delaney's signature. Humbert J. Fugazy, Ebbets field promoter, holds Delaney's contract but cannot get Berlenbach because the champion is tied up with Rickard.

The commission gave both promoters permission to sign other opponents for Berlenbach and Delaney in the event they cannot reach an amicable decision. Rickard intimated he would make one more effort to sign Delaney and if he fails he will offer Young Stribling of Georgia a contract to meet Berlenbach, June 10.

Fugazy intimated he would get an opponent for Delaney then negotiate with Berlenbach for a title match with Delaney after the champion has fulfilled his contract with Rickard, providing Berlenbach is successful against the opponent Rickard names. The board also ruled that Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight champ cannot withdraw from his match with Bobby Garcia at Queensboro, L. C. stadium, June 1. Dennis McMahon and Scotty Montieth, managers of Kaplan, sought to obtain permission to shift the match to Connecticut but this was overruled. Kaplan's managers refused to say whether they would abide by the decision of the board but Chairman Farley intimated they would face suspension if they disobeyed.

Harry Wills and Paddy Mullins, his manager, appeared before the board to determine their status in the heavyweight situation and Chairman Farley informed them that Wills was recognized as the outstanding challenger and his rights would be protected. Wills also renewed his license which expired March 15.

Tex O'Rourke, representing Georges Carpentier, French light-heavyweight applied for a license for Carpentier and it was granted.

He's My Dog

Four long legs bow-legged knees
Thick shaggy hair.
Maybe full of fleas.
Big as a bear eats like a hog
Got no sense but he's my dog.

In front he's black
Hind part's white.
One good eah, isn't he a sight
Howls when he's sad
Yelps when he's glad Growls all the time
But never gets mad
He's my dog.

Messes up my clothes
Chews my shoes
Never says please never no excuse.
Wakes me in the morning.
Pesters me at night
Rolls in the mud
But he's all right.

Never has lied always been square
Plays the game treats me fair
Comes home at night
He knocks me down
Licks my face and plays the clown.

Real friend I've got Knows it too.
Sticks by me sure is true
Just a hound built like a log
But he's my pal
That dog gone dog.

Here's a Dream Come True

Here's a dream come true?
Through a many years
When the frowning north
Drenched us in her tears.
I have longed to be
Where the smiling South
Lifts for us to kiss
Her so rosy mouth.

Here's a dream come true.
I've walked between
Banks of lacy fern
Gloriously green.
Heard the mocking bird sing
In the banyan tree;
Seen the fronded palms
Mirrored in blue sea.

I have cruised the keys
On an afternoon,
Hummed on many a night
Jasmine and the moon
Spent on sunny links
Mornings not a few;
(Some praised my game).
Here's a dream come true

Everything they say.
Comes to those who wait
Here's a dream come true
By a quirk of fate.
Here's a dream come true
Past my fondest hope.
Past my wildest thought
Startling in its scope.

I have known the south
Tasted all her joys:
'Tis no fault of hers
If much sweetness cloys.
I've had sweet enough
For a dozen women.
Next year by my grace
I will dream again.

KANSAS

I'm from the state of Kansas.
A place that's great is Kansas.
But they find it awful hard
Keeping houses in the yard.
When the wind is blowing hard
In Kansas.

I've seen it blow a cow in Kansas
Up against the mow in Kansas
When to get her down we tried
Why, the wind it was too high
And she starved to death and died.
In Kansas.

It's blow a fence down in Kansas.
Blow the postholes all around in Kansas.

And then it won't slack
But it blows away the cracks.
Then turns and blows 'em back.
In Kansas.

It's a fact, I once found in Kansas,
A thousand postholes lying round in Kansas.
Me and the hired man
Drove the postholes in the sand.
Made a well that beat the band.
In Kansas.

A farmer named Brown in Kansas
Bought a jug of booze down in Kansas.
But the wind got in the spout
Turned the jug wrongside out
And never spilled it out.

In Kansas

When it rains you need a boat in Kansas.

The fish come up and vote in Kansas.
When it's raining out there,
If you don't use lots of care,
You'll drown out in the air.
In Kansas

A rabbit's not to blame in Kansas
If he stays in when it rains in Kansas.
If he went to jumping round
The chances are he'd drown
Before he struck the ground.
In Kansas.

But when it gets dry in Kansas
The fish all die in Kansas.
A man who owned a ferryboat
Hauled water with a billy goat,
To keep his ferryboat afloat.
In Kansas.

I've seen it get dry in Kansas.
All the pigs would croak and die in Kansas.
I've seen 'em crack until
They soaked 'em in a pail
To make 'em hold swill,
In Kansas.

Wind blew a well dry in Kansas.
I wouldn't tell a lie about Kansas.
So believe me when I say,
On the very same day
It blew the hole away.

Marbles and Money

Ed and John were little boys in the long ago.
Playing marbles day by day, just like boys you know.
Ed was clever, so was John. Ed one difference bore—
Winning marbles when he played made him wish for more;
Heavier grew his little sack. Still on winning bent,
Ed had more than he could use, but was not content.

John played marbles now and then, never lost them all;
Had enough to join the game when the boys would call,
Played at baseball, climbed the trees, loved the birds, and knew
Many a thrill of doing things Ed would never do.
Kept his marbles in a sack smaller far than Ed's;
Hadn't more than fifty mibs, blues and whites and reds.

"John," said Ed one day to him, still on marbles bent,
"I've a thousand in my sacks, but I'm not content.
Just how many now have you?" Answered John, "A few.
Fifty marbles I should say, but I've more than you."

"More than 17" said Ed, surprised, "surely that can't be!"
"Yes," said John, "I've more than you —I've all I want, you see."

Rich man, piling wealth on wealth, catch John's point of view!
Who has all he wants today is richer far than you.

The Contra Dance

"Hull's Victory," "The Tempest and the "Lady of the Lake."
Are the names of the contra dances that will set you wide awake;
When the prompter calls the figures "Balance partners!" "All hands round,"
You just thrill with exultation at the fiddle's merry sound!

Then there's "Boston Fancy," "Lancers" (where the ladies have their choice,)
Which makes all the aged spinsters in the company rejoice;
Not to mention "Portland Fancy" and the old "Virginia Reel,"
Which tho' slow to lithe young maidens, makes the portly matrons "spiel."

When the week's work has been finished we all dance to "Old Zip Coon,"
Which tho' somewhat antiquated is a rather rustling tune!
You may talk about round dances, you're slowly slide and dip,
But give us the good square walk around and cake walk every trip.

The Widow in a Cottage by the Sea

Just one year ago today, love,
I became your happy bride;
Changed a mansion for a cottage,
To dwell by the river side
You told me I'd be happy,
But no happiness I see.
For tonight I am a widow
In a cottage by the sea.

CHORUS

Alone, all alone,
By the sea-side he left me,
And no other's bride I'll be.
For in bridal robes he dressed me,
In the cottage by the sea.

From my cottage by the sea-side,
I can see my mountain home;
I can see the hills and valleys
Where with pleasure I did roam;
The first place that I met him,
Oh, how happy then were we!
But tonight I am a widow
In the cottage by the sea.

Oh, my poor and aged father
How in sorrow he would wail,
And my poor and aged mother,
How with tears her eyes would swell.
And my one and only brother,
Oh! how he would weep for me.
If he only knew his sister
Was a widow by the sea!

WANTS EACH TO ATTACH CLUB NUMBER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Once more it is time for our gathering. The time flies so fast it is hard to keep track of it. Hope all will come who can. I am very sorry we have so many dear sick ones but hope as the warmer weather comes they will all be restored to health and strength. It does seem good to hear the spring birds once more after such a trying winter.

I wish as many of the sisters as can would put their club numbers after their pen name so all may know who is who in each club. I am sure all would appreciate it as much as I.

I have enjoyed the letters more than ever lately and am glad they have another new club formed. Was very sorry it was so I could not attend. I have been having a rather severe time this winter with neuritis in my arms and hands and they do not seem to get much better as yet but am in hopes when the warmer weather gets here I shall be able to have them back well again. The travelling down our way is very bad so I do not get out as much as usual but when our road is finished it will be fine. It seems so very strange to me that the commissioners should allow so long a stretch of road to be so torn up for so long a time and be made so terrible to pass over. I know in other states they will not allow it. It seems they put over some wonderful stunts in Connecticut. We shall sure appreciate it when it is finished. With best wishes for the Social Corner's success.

ALTA, (Club 5.)

NEW USE FOR OLD SHIRTS

Dear Cornerites: How do you all do this nice morning? Hope the sick are much improved, as we are to have more summer like weather and the sick generally feel better when it isn't so cold. Am sending in a little item. A new use for old shirts. As I have used the same many times can safely pass it along. You can make children's drawers, for small children for every day wear from the tails or lower parts of the discarded blue, or in fact any old workshirts. Cut off the tails at the joining where the last button is, having previously ripped off the pocket with a safety razor blade. Then shape them by using a pair or drawers of the right size to measure by. Hem sides, lap over and overcast. Now put on top and then your buttonholes. Sew together with a French seam. Hem the bottoms. If desired a band the color of the little ones dresses may be used on the bottom, especially if the drawers are made from blue percale or other striped shirts by running the stripes around the little leg part. I always put bands on the top of the children's panties for every day wear instead of using elastic as a physician once told me that the continued wearing of the tight elastic would cause harm in later years.

Before I finish I must say a word of praise to the Shore Line club, and tell those who failed to go they don't know what they missed. I agree with Black Eyed Susie when she said the dinner was fit for two kings and queens. I will go you one better, Susie, it was fit for three kings and queens.

I wonder where E. L. M. keeps those beans. Guess it is well for her to keep the place a secret for some one I know would like to know. How about it, E. Susie?

I think Club No. 6 should have the young son of Tatting for their mascot as he is a lively little mascot. Later the lady she lived with passed away so of course she left us. Now have none.

Interested Reader: How clever you are with the needle. It is really wonderful the pretty things you make.

E. L. M.: Were you tired that night? I should think you would have been, after all the steps you took that day.

Lady Lou: What a pretty name you have chosen.

Melissa: When I reached home I found I did not have your name and address in my book or else I have gotten you confused with some one else. I am wondering if Mrs. C. finally decided on her pen name and if so, what did she select? If Club No. 6 grows as rapidly as ours did what a family the Social Corner will become.

Dearie: Do I understand that A. is still on the sick list? I hope she is better by this time.

J. E. T.: Are you still eating buns? Oh! my if you are.

Yes, Necia we all enjoyed our trip to Grange hall, even if it was blustery and cold. It is just a lovely place for the Social Corner gatherings, lots of room, plenty of chairs and tables.

Country Sister: I didn't hear you play on your violin, can you play any of the old tunes that have been so often referred to of late in the papers?

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

HOW TO JOIN THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Members: I am thinking of the good time so many of the sisters are having in Lebanon today (Wednesday.) I hope some time during the summer to meet with them. I hope all the sisters from the different clubs who attended our meeting arrived home safe, none the worse for wear. I am only sorry I could not visit with them more.

Crimson Rambler: I hope we meet again soon and do some more talking.

Olga: Have often admired your house as we went past and I am so glad to have met the lady of the house.

Brown Eyes: I did not know until several days after that you were Brown Eyes.

So many have asked me what you have to do to join a club. You have to write a letter to the Social Corner and follow it up occasionally. That makes you a member. Then you can join a club. You have to become a Social Corner member first.

Slow: Was glad to get your message. Shall look for Mr. Slow, but, don't think that name fits him if he has the courage to come to one of our meetings where he is liable to be the only man. Think we will have to change his name for he has got to be pretty swift to keep up with the Shore Liners. He surely has good common sense when he realizes that it does his wife good to go out and visit with other ladies.

Bleack Eyed Susie: Have not seen W. to talk to, only passed her speeding home from work.

Nellie Bly: You and I will have to carry our celebration over from Tuesday to Wednesday, won't we?

American Girl: Too bad you could not have been at the North Stonington meeting as there was a friend of yours there whom I had never met but hope to meet often in the future.

E. L. M.

ECLAIR AND PUFF PASTES.

Dear Corner Members: Perhaps you would like these recipes for your cook book:

Eclair Paste: Put one cup of boiling water and half cup of butter in a large sauce pan and when it boils up turn in one pint of flour. Beat well with the vegetable masher. When perfectly smooth and velvety to the touch remove from the fire. Break five eggs into a bowl and when the paste is nearly cold beat the eggs into it with the hand. Only a small part of the egg should be added at a time. When the mixture is thoroughly beaten (it will take 15 to 20 minutes) spread on a buttered sheet in oblong pieces about four inches long and half an inch wide. These must lay about two inches apart. Bake in a quick oven.

Puff Paste: One quart pastry flour, one pint butter, washed, one and one-quarter cups ice water. Wash the hands with soap and water. Dip them first into very hot and then very cold water. Rinse a large bowl with boiling water then with cold. Half fill it with cold water, wash the butter in this, working it with the hands until it is light and waxy. (This frees the salt and buttermilk and makes the pastry light and delicate.) Shape the butter into two thin cakes and put it into a pan of ice water to harden. Mix the salt and sugar with the flour sifting it just once for the puff paste.

With the hands rub one-third of the butter into the flour. Add the water, stirring with a knife. Stir quickly and vigorously until the paste is a smooth ball. Sprinkle the board lightly with a rolling pin but do not break the paste. Roll from you and to one side, or if easier to roll from you all the while turn the paste around. When it is about one-quarter of an inch thick, wipe the remaining butter, break into bits, and spread these on the paste. Sprinkle with flour. Fold the paste about one-third from each side so that the edges met, then fold from the ends but do not have these meet.

Double the paste and pound lightly and roll down to about one-third inch in thickness. Fold as before and roll down again. (Repeat this three times if for pies and six times if for vol-au-vents of sweet-breads, of salmon, lobster or patties.) This is fine for vol-au-vents of all descriptions also Gateau St. Honore. I calculate it should be in the ice chest at least an hour before being used. In hot weather if the paste sticks when being rolled down put it on a tin sheet and place on ice. As soon as it is chilled it will roll easily. The less flour used in rolling out the paste the more tender it will become. No matter how carefully every part of the work may be done, the paste will not be good for much if too much flour is used.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA.

RECALLS OTHER DAYS.

Dear Sisters and Editor of the Social Corner: I think it is about time I spunked up and wrote a few lines to help fill the Corner page. Every week after reading so many good letters I would say to myself, "next week I will have a contribution," but the weeks go by so fast and I am so busy every day trying to crowd in enough work each day for two, no matter how the strength holds out, but a sister, Interested Reader, has requested the song I was able to gather and will send it along.

Daisy Dean: My sister and I used to sing it together a great deal. As a duet we were very fond of the piece. How nice it is we are reminded through the Corner page of many things that happened when we were young. It gives us cheer and comfort.

Would the sister who brought the pan of escalloped meat to the picnic of Club 4 in Putnam please send it to Social Corner? It seemed like one of three kinds of meat, or all mixed, veal, pork or chicken. It was very nice.

Club 4 is planning for an anniversary picnic in June, with the sisters in Danielson, and will send in the date when it is decided on.

One sister said in her letter that she had a dish pan 38 years old. I think it can go a little better than that for I bought one in 1886 and it is almost as new now. My daughter has it and with care it may last as many years longer.

Jennie: Hope to see you at Club 4's picnic in Danielson. Then we can get acquainted. The promised letter was never written was it? Don't give up, it may come some time.

KENTUCKY WONDER. (Sept. 11.)

GREETINGS FROM E. M. R. C. P.

To the Sisters of the Social Corner: Greetings to all and here's hoping that the cold has broken up in New England.

Arles: Thanks for papers, will write soon and how about a reading for me? Write also, if you can.

Balsam Fir: Got your cards. Thanks. Will write to you also.

Anna Z: How are you all. We are all fine. Hope to hear from you also.

Tree Air: Hope your trip north was O. K. Just wish I could have spoken to you when you were in town, the day I called on our mutual friend Mrs. W. S. But I saw you in the 5 & 10 cent store afterwards buying cards. My uncle was over here this Sunday and told of you and your husband going, as well as his son-in-law.

Polly Pepperment: Why not write? Haven't heard from you in a long time.

Hope all the sisters who are shut in will be on the road to health soon.

Will enclose a poem which I liked well enough to pass on to our page.

Many an author who is tired and weary of the cold winters and city life finds health, joy, creative powers 'neath the blue skies of this wonderful state of Florida.

Of course like any other state, it has its faults and virtues. But I believe the scale tips in favor of her virtues always.

I again visited the Ponce De Leon springs yesterday (April 18.) and it certainly held it's reputation as the "fountain of youth." More than 200 girls and boys from 8 to 30 years old were in that spring. Bathing suits of every hue were the style. And everyone who wasn't in was envying the lucky ones in the water. An ideal spring day and you could have called the promenades "A fashion parade of spring." Even the Charleston was being danced to the tune of the records on suitcase talking machines in the autos and on the green lawns. Everywhere was youth in its glory. How it made us middle age folks long to be young once more! I know I did.

Here's hoping our Corner page will be ever full of lovely letters and poetry.

E. M. R. C. P. (May 7th.)

BY JINGO A SHUT-IN.

Dear Social Corner Members: From all accounts I should judge that the Shore Line club was going strong. Guess I should be counted as a member only, just at present, I am a shut-in. I am able to sit out on the balcony some of the warm days but hope when summer comes my health will improve.

My home is on the main highway to Providence, so you can imagine I see quite a few machines. There are quite a few going by on Sundays now. I should just hate to count them.

Was sorry to hear Dom Pedro was a shut-in all winter. Hope she keeps on gaining. Maybe I'll see her on Asylum street this summer if we both are good.

Ever since I found out Deliah Deal was on the sick list so much, I am sorry to think I never called on her when I lived in her town. Hope she is improving.

I hope Judge K. receives a lot of cards. Would send to more of the sisters if I knew their birthdays.

Must close for now. Best wishes to all the members.

BY JINGO.

SELECTS ANOTHER NAME

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What nice letters we are having in the paper but why don't the sisters of Club No. 5 write? As some one is using my pen name will take for my name.

F. L. M.

MEMBERS LIVE UP TO CORNER NAME

Dear Social Corner Editor: I accepted the invitation for any who were interested in organizing the Shore Line club to meet at the home of Tatting and Interested Reader in Stonington.

I invited four friends to accompany me, and they have since joined the Social Corner and Club 4.

Tatting, Interested Reader and E. L. M. proved themselves ideal entertainers, and did so much to make the occasion pleasant for all.

The bountiful dinner was the best ever, and I think they felt well repaid for their work in organizing the club.

April 20 I attended the meeting of Club 6 held in North Stonington's Grange hall. Dorothy Bradford, Mellissa, Ruthina, Blandina and myself making up a party from W.

Frances, O. D., Lady Fair, and Mrs. P. were there.

I was pleased to meet so many Social Corner members from other clubs. Norwich, Lebanon, Franklin, Yantic and other towns were well represented.

Cosmos, Dorothy Bradford, E. L. M. and their helpers served the dinner and I am sure no one left the hall with a hungry feeling, for there was an abundance of food.

Rebecca was unable to attend the meeting but hope she can come to the next meeting of the club. The time and place will be announced later.

A pleasing program was given after the dinner hour.

I think the Social Corner is rightly named, as every one seems so friendly and cordial, and I hope every one present enjoyed the day as I did.

Dorothy Bradford: Were you badly crushed from the trip home?

Country Sister: If you had taken your violin as E. L. M. asked you we could have enjoyed some music.

Prairie Chicken: I hope you recovered the loss. Was so glad you could meet with us. Also Stranger in the City.

Cute: You have my sympathy.

Kochie: Why don't you visit our club some time?

You are acquainted with some of the Corner sisters.

IDALEANE.

ONE OF MY BEST HELPS

Dear Sisters of the Corner: When I buy corn beef I get either boneless brisket or the thick end of the flank. I put the corn beef over in cold water and let it come to a boil. After boiling 30 minutes I take out the liquor and put boiling water in the corn beef and add 1 teaspoon of vinegar.

The stock I take from the corn beef I boil my vegetables (not in with the meat) then the cornbeef until tender. I remove the corn beef from the liquor and put it in the colander to drain. There is quite a little liquor remaining in the beef and to the thick end of the flank, there is just enough fat to make the meat sweeter and more moist than the rump. While the inside rump finds the meat a little finer grained you will find the brisket more moist and juicy. The stock that remains in the kettle after removing the last piece I always "can." It makes about five half pint glass jars which is very handy when you wish to boil cabbage, greens or anything in the vegetable line.

I never heard of a housewife canning corn beef stock but having found its merits I would not know how to get along without it. If you wish to make soup—pea—bean or vegetable—it is always on hand, you don't have to put in salt or bother with anything, just simply put in jars, clamp half down, boil 30 minutes finishing clamping down jars and they are ready for the campaign.

The stock you boil vegetables in is ready to set aside until the next day. This I use to make a soup from the left over vegetables that I cooked in with the cornbeef stock and that we had for dinner with the corn beef—the day before.

You can make planked corn beef hash or you can make English hash. Cook the cornbeef with rice.

The different kinds of soups and chowders that I make with corn beef liquor are: Bean chowder, canned corn and celery chowder, celery chowder, cream of pea soup with vegetable, creole soup, Esau's pottage, grandmother's parsnip chowder, lumbermen's pea soup, onion soup, vegetable chowder. I will send my prize recipe for vegetable soup without meat. 1-2 pint jar of corn beef stock (cold,) 2 quarts cold water, 3 good sized potatoes diced, 2 small onions (sliced,) 1 carrot, cut in cubes, 1-2 cup chopped cabbage, 1 cup canned tomatoes, 1 small bunch of celery (chopped) 1 cup of beans (I use navy.) 1 tablespoon of butter, 1 teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper to taste. Sometimes I make this in by fireless cooker and then use only one and one-half pints of water.

Method of making my soup: Caramelize the sugar in the soup kettle, add cold water and the corn beef stock also all the vegetables, except the beans. Simmer slowly for an hour. Season with salt and pepper to taste, and then cook gently for an hour longer. Then add the beans (cold) and butter.

Corn beef stock Chowder: 2 slices of bacon, 1 can tomatoes, 1 quart milk, 1 can lima beans, 1-2 pint corn beef stock, 3 onions, 5 large potatoes, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon soda.

Dice the bacon and cook until brown, add onion sliced thin and cook until soft in bacon fat, combine the lima beans and the potatoes, cubed, with the milk, add bacon, corn, beef stock and cook until the potatoes are done. Thicken with the flour mixed with a little cold milk, stir in the tomatoes, after adding the soda to them, and bringing them to the boiling point. You can use the dried lima beans, only be sure they are cooked tender.

BEEN LOOKING IN A LONG TIME

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I have "been on the outside looking in" a long time, but have enjoyed the letters as a roll of Social Corner pages I have saved—at least 14 years old some of them—would prove.

And what good times you must have at the meetings! I have always wanted to attend but had no one to go with.

I am venturing to write now as I have the remainder of the song, Widow in the Cottage by the Sea, the first verse of which was sent in by Jennie last week. I am not just sure it is the song requested the week before by Interested Reader. It seems to me there is a Cottage by the Sea with out the widow in it.

And I have Will You Love Me When I'm Old? and Do They Think of Me at Home? also. I will send them to be printed at the editors' convenience.

Yes, I would like a pin please if the supply is not exhausted, thank you.

Crimson Rambler: Hasn't the local vaudeville actor sent in Blood Stains (or Spots) on the Snow yet?

Be sure sister your lights are all ready to shine these dark mornings that we may save day light. It may benefit someone!

Best wishes to all.

E. E. F. F.

NOT TOO BUSY TO VISIT

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: As I did not get at it to write last week I will take the time to do so now. The second meeting of the Shore Line Social Corner Club No. 6 at North Stonington Grange hall was a decided success, 48 ladies being present. We were more than glad to welcome sisters from Clubs 1, 3, and 5 and such a dinner! I think each sister vied with the other to bring her very best, it was certainly a day long to be remembered. I want to ask the sisters who brought the raisin pie to send the recipe to the Corner. It was delicious. I am a pie fiend. Every Saturday I always make from two to six and I would like to add raisin pie to my list.

Primrose: I have the pleasure to belong to Ruth chapter No. 44 O. E. S. I don't think I was a member when you visited it as I came here to live six years ago. May I ask if the name of the family you mentioned begun with J?

Olga: What a good laugh we did have? But we weren't the only ones. We laughed so much I failed to have you write in my book.

Crimson Rambler: We visited so much I failed to get your name in my book. Hope to do better next time.

E Natural: Glad you are gaining. Hope you will be able to attend the next meeting.

Dorothy Bradford: You certainly outdid yourself. We shall know who to call on next time.

Aries: Your letter received. Thank you very much. Will write soon. I am very busy sewing just now.

To the sisters that wanted the patch work patterns and to learn how to make lady dainties; come on I always find time to visit with my friends and will teach you how.

Skipper: You did skip some. I don't know what they would have done without you. I wasn't very tired. Guess the visiting did me good.

Stranger in the City: Glad we met. We did visit for a few minutes, didn't we? You were in luck. I had to wait for mine.

Sis: Thank you for song. I am going to write to you some day.

Tatting: Don't let the youngster bother you. Take him along, we were all young once. I wouldn't give much for a child that didn't have some life.

Best wishes to all.

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD PIE

Dear Cornerites: This much abused article of diet need not be unwholesome if it be rightly made and judiciously used. I would not recommend pie as a dish for breakfast—save in the case of farmers, who will spend the morning in active work in the open air which puts him in condition to digest almost anything—but as a dessert for simple dinner, a piece of well made pie is not to be despised.

In the first place, take great care in making the pie crust as that is the part to disagree with delicate or impaired digestions. Some housewives say if made with a fork cream the crust never fails to be light and digestible, and it is so easily made too. Just a little salt and as much thick cream as will be necessary to make 2 cups of flour for a pie.

The temperature of the oven is a very important matter that must be considered if you wish your pie to be wholesome. Nothing is quite so unwholesome as a slacked backed pie; and one that is cooked too quickly with the crust burned and the filling half done, is almost as bad. Most pies are better for being cooked in a moderate oven. Apple and mince need about an hour, squash and pumpkin an hour and ten minutes, berry pies 40 minutes, stewed rhubarb and stewed apple about 35 minutes in a rather quick oven. I really think custard pie more uncertain than any other kind, and will have to be watched, when the center gets firm remove from the oven Lemon pie will take a little over 30 minutes.

Pie crust made with lard: Place in your sifter 3 cups of flour, 2 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder (sift five times); add 1 cup lard, rub lard in flour until like meal, then mix with a little top milk, (cold) 1-4 to 1-2 is sufficient, allow to stand in a cool place. For this recipe I have had three prizes and have built up quite a reputation on this crust.

Here is pastry for one pie: Mix one saltspoon of salt and one saltspoon of baking powder with one heaping cup of flour (pastry.) 1 saltspoon sugar. Now rub in one quarter cup of lard. Mix quite stiff with cold milk. Roll out and put little pieces of butter the size of beans on the paste, until you use one quarter cup; sprinkle with flour and fold over and roll out again. Roll up like a jelly roll, divide in two parts and roll to fit the plate.

I will send you one or my standard pie recipe for which I am noted and tried.

One half teaspoon of glycerine improves the crust as much as it improves cake.

Summer Mince Pies: One cup each, rolled crackers, sugar, molasses, vinegar, water, (if vinegar is very sour use less.) Mix these very thoroughly, then add 3 tablespoons of butter, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, nutmeg and salt, 1 cup seeded raisins I chop these) 2 well beaten eggs, mix thoroughly with the above. This makes three pies and I bake it in two crusts.

GUESS WHO?

GREETINGS FROM TATTING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I must surely get my letter in this week as I didn't last week and tell you all what a fine time I had at North Stonington and what a nice dinner we had. Credit is certainly due to the committee in charge. I am so glad that our club is such a success and we are having new members all the time and to think we have all ready out grown meeting at the houses. Well, sisters, let the good work go on. Very sorry Rebecca couldn't be with us as she was greatly missed.

Was greatly surprised to find Black Eyed Susie in the hall on arriving there and we were both glad to meet each other. I surely can say the Corner is well named for you would have thought we had known each other all our lives. I had a good laugh over being taken according to what my pen name is, but fortunately I am not as old as that although I will have to admit I am not very tall.

Crimson Rambler: I was surely glad to meet you as I have always wanted the pleasure and it surely was, as well as a surprise to me. I will try and return your call to our c' meeting and meet with you some day.

Moonie: Why don't you write us a letter? Don't let your pen get rusty.

Silent Stranger: I am very pleased over the baby boy, too, and hope some day I may see him.

Well guess I have written enough for this time and hope to s a lot of letters from our new members.

With best wishes to all.

TATTING.

HEPATICA'S INQUIRY

Dear Editor and Corner People: Would like to inquire if any of the Corner folks could give me the address of a buyer of second hand fur coats. If I could learn of a place around Willimantic or nearby cities, I would be very appreciative, as I have a coat which has been worn very little but do not care for it.

Do any of you housekeepers make your own soap shakers? Have just made one, which I like very well, from a small size spice box which had a sifter top and I punched holes in bottom and sides of the box. It seems to be just the right size to have in the pan when washing dishes.

Best springtime wishes to all.

HEPATICA.

CLUB NO. 1 TO CLOSE INDOOR SEASON

Dear Social Corner: The last meeting of the season of Club No. 1 will be held in the chamber of commerce rooms Wednesday, May 12. Please bring your dishes as usual and something to eat. I hope we may have a large gathering and that our sisters who can, will plan to have some picnics later, if the weather man gives us any picnic weather. The best wishes for the Corner.

ONE OF THE HOSTESS.

INCREASES CORNER MEMBERSHIP

Dear Social Corner Editor: I visited with the Shore Line club April 20 and enjoyed it very much and would like to become a member of the Corner. Taking for my name

WENS.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Social Corner Editor: I would like to become a member of the Social Corner and will sign myself,

BLANDINA.

MAY BIRTHDAY CAKE

Dear Editor and Sisters: The plan used for this cake is (The Twins) Gemini II. Single cakes make an attractive dainty. Take 1 tablespoon of butter, 3 tablespoons of sugar, 2 eggs, juice of three medium sized oranges that are wholly ripe. Flour to form a stiff batter, pinch of salt, 1-4 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, sifted three times.

Method. Take sugar, sift, then cream butter and sugar, add orange juice (flour is uncertain, I am going to make this cake Saturday then I will know exactly how much it takes) add flour salt, baking powder. Bake as cup-cakes, and when cold frost white. Decorate each cake with a spray of lilies of the valley, the month's flower and the May zodiac sign, II. Serve each cake in a dainty lace frill.

A lemon hint. I used to place my lemons in cold water, but now when they get dry I put them in a pan of hot water and set them where they will have the same degree of heat without boiling for two hours. When taken out and dried, the lemons will be as soft and juicy and rich in flavor, as though they had never grown hard.

ETHELYN, (May 9.)

SCRIPTURE CAKE RECIPE

Dear Social Corner: I was very pleased to meet so many Norwich sisters at North Stonington at the meeting of Club No. 6. This was the second meeting of the Shore Line Club and it surely was very successful in every way. We had more than 45 could eat.

We are so glad to have as new members Lady Lou and May Bug, Blandina and Lucille Drew.

E. L. M.: Hope you bring some beans to my birthday party.

I was very much taken with Crimson Rambler. She surely was full of life. Hope to see you again, Crimson Rambler.

Scripture Cake Recipe: 4 1-2 cups of 1 Kings 4:22; 1 1-2 cups of Judges, 5:25, last clause, 2 cups of 1 Jeremiah 6:20 (sugar), 2 cups of 1st Samuel 3:12 (raisins.) 2 cups or Nahum 3:12, 1 cup of Numbers 17:8, 3 tablespoons of Samuel 14:25, season to taste of 2nd Chronicles 9:9, six of Jeremiah 17:11, a pinch of Leviticus 2:13, 1-2 cup of Judges 4:19 (last clause) 2 teaspoons of Amos 4:5 (baking powder) follow Solomon's prescription for making a good boy, Proverbs 23:14.

MELLISSA.

A VERY PLEASANT DAY

To the Sisters of Social Corner: Those who were not present at the Willimantic meeting April 14 missed a very pleasant day. The hostess, Too Late, and her assistants served an excellent dinner and every one was agreeable and cordial in greeting each other.

It was a successful meeting.

Social Corner Member: I thank you for the pretty calendar.

Some one asked for the old time song, The Widow in the Cottage by the Sea. It was sung years ago in a theater and was quite popular. The music has a "catchy" air.

NEMA.

GREETINGS FROM NANCY PECK

Dear Social Corner: First I wish to thank the editor for my pin.

The letters of last week were interesting and I enjoyed them. What a nice full page! The recipes all sounded mighty good.

E. L. M.: Do you ever make clam chowder now? Those were the days of our youth.

E. NATURAL: Hurry up and get better for I should like to meet you at the next Shore Line club meeting. So look for NANCY PECK.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor: Have been invited to join the Social Corner and would like very much if there is room for me and will take the name.

DOUGHNUTS

Dear Social Corner Members: I usually make doughnuts with sour milk, but will send this recipe.

Beat two eggs well and add after beating as you do so, one cup of sugar that has been sifted three times. Sift together two and one-half cups of flour (bread) one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cream tartar, one-half teaspoon soda and one teaspoon nutmeg. To the sugar and the egg, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 tablespoon melted butter, or two tablespoons of cream. Then beat in well the dry ingredients. Meanwhile have your fat heating. Flour molding board, toss out the mixture and pat in shape with hands, not too thin. Cut and when fat is hot (smoking) put doughnuts in, turn once. When done remove from kettle then place in colander. Put the doughnuts away warm, and they will keep moist.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

Disabled and needy veterans, warmatmed heroes of the Argonne and the Somme, of Verdun and Chateau Thierry, are making the thousands of buddy poppies for the 1926 poppy sale of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The buddy poppy making begins early in anticipation of the nation-wide sale the end of May. Fingers stiffened by gunshot wounds and eyes dimmed by wargasses need plenty of time to make the scarlet blossoms which will gleam in the buttonholes of all America on Memorial day. Throughout the spring the poppy makers are at work. Among the most active workers are the patients in the U. S. Veterans hospital No. 81, who under the direction of the occupational therapy department of the hospital are gallantly doing their bit to "carry on". Poppies are also made in other government hospitals and in specially equipped "poppy factory" workrooms.

Many of the poppy makers are men who cannot be rehabilitated by the veterans bureau because their disability was not contemplated by the war risk and vocational training laws when passed and who are designated by the government as "non-feasible." To these men in particular the poppy making offers a livelihood which the majority, because of their condition, would be helpless to earn in their former occupation. "Buddie Poppy" is the name the men themselves selected, and a copyright label guarantees each V. F. W. flower as a handiwork of disabled or needy ex-service men. The entire proceeds of the sale are used for relief work.

AMERICAN LEGION

Reports of Connecticut headquarters of the American legion indicate that the legion is making large gains in membership throughout the state and nation and that the goal of a million members is rapidly approaching. This is proof of the fact that more and more veterans of the World war are coming to realize that only through organization can they insure the accomplishment of the purposes for which they fought. The legion has demonstrated its ability to make the voice of ex-service men heard in national and international affairs. Therefore, it is drawing to its ranks all veterans who are determined that the things for which they endured privation and saw their comrades die shall not be lost. It is fighting to remove the rewards of war by the enactment into law of the principle of the universal draft, which calls for the conscription of labor and capitol as well as fighting men in even of conflict. It is carrying out, with cooperation of the various veterans organizations of the allied countries, an international program of education designed to break down the racial prejudices which are the breeding ground of war. It is urging the maintenance of our national defence at such strength that aggression will not be invited by our unpreparedness. In view of what the legion has done and is doing it is not surprising that its membership is climbing steadily toward the million mark and that one of its eleven thousand posts is to be found in almost every corner of the world. What is surprising is to discover that many of the former service men in this city are not members of the organization. Before many years, it is predicted, it will be as unusual to meet a World war veteran without the legion's blue and gold button on his lapel as it is to see a Civil war veteran not wearing the bronze insignia of the G. A. R.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA

Court Sprague, No. 90, in Baltic, held one of its most successful meetings of the year on April 6th. At this meeting it was necessary to elect the delegate to the state convention. The honor fell once more on the shoulders of Eddie Lambert who has represented the court successfully at the state conventions for a number of times in the past. Leodore Lacroix was elected alternate.

After the general business had been transacted, preparations for the meeting of May 4th were prepared. As it is the annual custom of the court to enjoy a good smoker when the newly elected officers of the court are installed, a committee was appointed at whose head as chairman Eddie Lambert is to act. With him also were appointed Owen McShane, Hervey Laliberty, Eugene Girard, Leodore Lacroix and Walter Mathews.

These members to assist in a very able committee was chosen, and the members of Court Sprague can feel assured that they will be treated to a very good smoker.

A very special invitation has been extended to the worthy deputy grand chief ranger, Edward McNerney of Norwich and his staff to be present at 7:30 p. m. (daylight saving) to install the new officers as this will be his first occasion to install in Baltic since his appointment last fall to the office.

The court also expects to have present that night Worthy Sub Chief Ranger Henry Congdon of Norwich who this year becomes a candidate for the highest office of this state which is grand chief ranger. It is expected that all the members of Court Sprague will be present and make a grand success of the meeting in general.

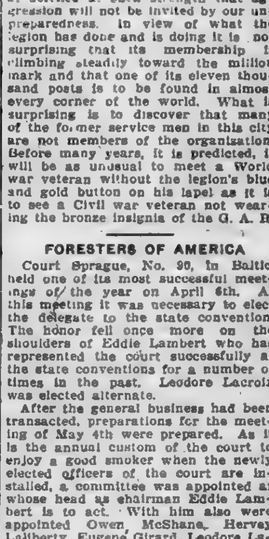
Proclaims Himself Czar Of All Russians



Grandduke Cyrill, of Russia, proclaims himself Czar of all Russians, in a recently issued manifesto. This latest portrait of the Grandduke was just received in this country. He is married to former Princess Victoria Melitta, of Coburg, a sister of the Queen of Roumania. They have a boy seven years old, named Wladimir, whom the Grandduke has at the same time proclaimed heir to the throne.

PHILADELPHIA WILL TRY "ONE-MAN" TRANSIT PLAN

PHILADELPHIA, April 30 (AP)—An experiment unique in the records of a first-class municipality will be tried out in Philadelphia this summer.

Under authority voted by the city council and with the enthusiastic approval of a considerable portion of the citizenry, the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company is to establish a virtual monopoly of inter-city passenger transportation. Already operating the subway, surface and elevated lines, and most of the motor busses, the company will take over the leading taxicab company's equipment.

In no other city has such an undertaking been authorized, according to a survey made by the transit company. "It produces what has been referred to as an "air tight" concern, as its only competitor in the transportation field then will be a single company having a comparatively few taxicabs, which the transit company may eventually acquire.

Coordination of the taxicabs and motorbuses with the regulation street railway facilities is necessary if the street railway business is to survive said Thomas E. Mitten, chairman of the board of directors of the transit company. In his testimony before the Philadelphia Transit commission, when Mitten applied for permission to issue $5,000,000 in eight per cent preferred stock to finance the taxi purchase, he asserted the taxicabs and motorbuses in New York and Chicago operating separate from the trolley concerns had been the cause of street railway earnings falling to show a normal increase.

Mr. Mitten said he had found that taxicabs and motorbuses in New York combined earn about $30,000,000 a year. Failure there to coordinate the two services with the regulation street railway service resulted in losses to the existing electric transit facilities, he believed.

"Coordination of taicabs with motorbuses and trolleys will constitute a monopoly, not for private interest, but for the benefit of the community served," Mr. Mitten asserted. "It will create a combination entirely in the city's interest, because any extra earnings will be nearly, if not altogether, usable to help support city built subways.

"The ideal transportation system which this management foresees will provide a subway-elevated-surface service which supplies a seat for the fare; a motor bus service with a seat-for-a-fare, as here already established and a taxicab service giving individual transportation as quickly and conveniently as the private automobile at a fraction of the cost and without the inconvenience orf park."

He promised no increased rates.

SEEK TREASURE OF LOST SHIPS UNDER RIVER BEDS

MILES CITY, Mont., April 30 (AP)—Treasures or lost ships, buried under the shifting sands of the Yellowstone and Missouri rivers, will be sought by Elmore Ellsworth Wenner, who has spent a quarter of a century gathering information as to their location and possibility or recovery.

In the skeletons of these treasure ships, Wenner believes, still remain quantities of the cargoes of priceless pelts, gold, silver, quicksilver and various other merchandise, the value of which government reports indicate to approximate 50 million dollars. A portion of the cargo of one wreck, buried 30 years, Wenner already has salvaged.

Steamboating on the northern waters of the Missouri river began 103 years ago when a fleet of six river steamers were built under government contract for use with the ill-fated Yellowstone military expedition, which had as its object the establishment of a fortified post at the mouth of the Yellowstone river.

One of these, the Thomas Jefferson, provided the first Missouri river wreck, near the mouth of the Yellowstone. In 1831, the American Fur Company started a fleet of steamboats on the Missouri. Its George Washington struck a snag below Council Bluffs, Iowa and went down. The Assiniboine also owned by the company, was grounded in 1825 near the present site of Bismark, N. D., with a cargo of 1,185 packs of pelts and robes.

The Pontiac went down with a cargo of 500 barrels of whisky, 500 cases of wine and 500 casks of brandy, none of which ever was recovered. The Louisville loaded with whisker, quicksilver and general stores, went down 40 miles below Sioux City. At this same spot are eight other sunken steamers. The river has changed its course and the wrecks are believed to be buried at a point four miles from the present bed of the stream.

One of the most costly wrecks was that of the American Fur Company's boat, the Kate Swinney in 1835, about 50 miles above Sioux City. It carried the furs of two seasons valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Altogether the investigations of Mr. Wenner have disclosed, between 1819 and 1893 there were more than 275 steamers sunk in the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Just 50 years ago this week Dwight F. Steere was sentenced to state's prison for life for the murder of Frederick A. White in this city. The jury in the case brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree. George McNickle and Frank A. Burnap entered pleas of guilty to incendiarism and were given sentences of two years in state's prison. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of April, 1876 are as follows.

Monday, April 24, 1876—A large kerosene lamp exploded in the house of Charles Kingsberger on Orchard street, late Friday night. Mr. Kingsberger had it in his hand when it burst and was somewhat burned. The burning oil set fire to the house but the fire was put out with a few pails of water without an alarm.

Fifteen persons were confirmed at Christ church yesterday morning by Bishop Williams, several prominent gentlemen being among them. In the evening Bishop Paddock of Massachusetts preached to a large congregation.

The jury on the case of Dwight F. Steere, the murderer of Frederick A. White, came in at 10 minutes past nine Saturday morning and the court was called. The foreman replied that they had found the prisoner guilty of murder in the second degree. The prisoner seemed much moved and for the first time since the trial began gave way to his feelings. At the request of counsel for the accused, the pronouncing of the sentence was deferred until the opening of court today.

Tuesday, April 25, 1876—The superior court came in yesterday morning at 10 o'clock Judge Foster on the bench. Dwight F. Steere, the murderer of Frederick A. White, was presented at the bar of the court for sentence. The sentence was that he be confined in the state prison for the term of his natural life.

George McNickle and Frank A. Burnap presented themselves at the bar of the court and plead guilty to the charge of incendiarism. District Attorney Waller recommended the prisoners to mercy, saying that he did so at the request of Mayor Osgood and Mr. Gilbert, the latter being the owner of the building on Chestnut street that the prisoners confessed to firing. Judge Foster then sentenced the prisoners to two years imprisonment in the state prison.

An attempt at incendiarism was discovered on the West Side yesterday morning. During Saturday night some one placed a ball of cotton, saturated with oil near a pile of shavings in an unfinished house on Thames street owned by Amasa C. Hall and set fire to it. The oil was burned off the cotton but for some reason the shavings did not ignite.

Wednesday, April 26, 1876—The funeral of Capt. N. T. Wilbur took place from the Central Baptist church yesterday. He was an old shipmaster of this city and recently a pilot on the Stonington steamers. Eight pilots from that and the Norwich line officiated as bearers. The flags on the shipping were at half mast during the day.

A pleasant trip and festival was given by the members of the A. M. E. Zion church in White's hall last evening. The entertainment will be repeated tonight.

There were two large fires in the woods near Trading Cove yesterday and men were out ploughing up the ground to stop their spread.

Thursday, April 27, 1876—George W. Geer, Jr., of this city, is to assume the position of clerk at the "Transcontinental" the mammoth new hotel near the centennial exposition ground at Philadelphia, to be opened about May 10th by Justice E. Kingsley of the Centennial of that city.

At a meeting of the County bar yesterday, James A. Hovey, Thomas M. Waller, Augustus Brandegee, Solomon Lucas and E. T. Holbrook were appointed examining committee and George Ripley, S. T. C. Merwin and Alfred Cobb literary committee. John M. Thayer was appointed clerk.

M. V. Brady of Sedgwick Post has been appointed assistant inspector of posts 21, 27 and 36 in the fifth district of the Grand Army of the Republic of the states.

Friday, April 28, 1876—The street commissioner is doing a good work in resurfacing Williams Park in places where the grass has been worn away it will be kept in good condition with lawn mowers and no ball playing will be permitted upon it.

The schooner Emma Fox from the West Indies with coffee and molasses for this port, is ashore on Cape Hatteras, having previously sprung a leak. Her captain hopes to save her.

The Uncas National bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent. payable on and after Monday.

Saturday, April 29, 1876—The committee of the new poorhouse has visited the public institutions of a similar kind in Hartford, New Haven, Meriden and Springfield and will probably go to Worcester next week.

Robert B. Parker has resigned the office of ticket agent of the Norwich & Worcester road in this city after acting in that capacity for 13 years. In whatever business he may undertake the hearty good wishes of the traveling public will go with him.

Col. Carpenter has a supply of good ice this year and has already made his persuasive proposals for furnishing it for the summer. There is no citizen in town to whom it is a greater pleasure to pay a bill.

Mr. John Rourke intends to convert his block on Franklin square into a hotel.

The Great Relief of Mrs. Grouse

A mother worries night and day
Until her children go away.
—Mrs. Grouse.

Mothers are much alike, whether human mothers, bird mothers or animal mothers. While their babies are little they think of little else. Almost every waking minute they have their babies on their minds. There is a saying that worry kills, but if worry did kill, I am sure there would be no mothers left in the great world.

Mrs. Grouse had ten worries, as you know. That is, she had ten children to watch out for, to feed, and to teach. Every day she used to look them over to see how their wings were getting along. Now, feathered folk who nest in trees have their greatest worries at the time when their children are just learning to use their wings. That is the time that those mothers dread. Until then they know that their babies are quite safe in the nest.

But with those feathered folk who build their homes on the ground it is just the other way about. They look forward most anxiously to the time when their babies can begin to fly. There are ever so many more dangers on the ground than there are in trees. So these mothers are always anxious for their babies to get big enough to at least fly up in a bush or in a tree.

It was just so with Mrs. Grouse. Her babies were mostly lively. They were all the time running this way and that way and the other way, and trying to keep track of ten of them drove little Mrs. Grouse almost crazy at times. What she all the time feared was that one of their number would discover them and then there would be no way to escape. She dreaded Reddy Fox particularly.

"If only they could fly," she would say to herself. "My goodness, what a load it would take off my mind if they could fly! Then, if they should be surprised by Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote or Shadow the Weasel, they could fly up in a tree and be safe."

So the days passed and the youngsters grew and their little wings feathered out and grew bigger and bigger; and they exercised them as they ran about, but without really flying. Then one day the thing that Mrs. Grouse had dreaded happened. She saw Reddy Fox working back and forth with his nose to the ground where she and the children had been running about feeding. At once Mrs. Grouse gave the ten children the signal to hide. She herself didn't hide. Instead she suddenly began to flop about on the ground for all the world as if one of her wings were broken. There she flopped, scattering the leaves and apparently helpless. Reddy Fox looked at her. Then Reddy grinned. Reddy knew all about that trick. He wasn't fooled for one little wee second. He grinned and went right on searching with his nose for those hidden children. He knew they were somewhere near. Mrs. Grouse flopped almost under his nose, but Reddy knew that, quick as he is, he wouldn't be quick enough to catch her before she flopped out of his reach, so he didn't try.

Poor Mrs. Grouse! She was quite frantic. For she saw that Reddy had found the trail of one of those babies and his nose probably would take him straight to where that youngster was hiding. She did everything she could to distract Reddy's attention, but it was quite useless. She saw Reddy suddenly bring his feet together for a quick jump and then something happened. There was a whirr of little wings and up into a hemlock tree flew that little Grouse that Reddy was just about to spring on. At the sound of that whirr of little wings there was another whirr, and then another and another and another, until the ten young Grouse were up in a tree. They had learned to use their wings. With a great sigh of thankfulness Mrs. Grouse flew up with them. Then she looked down at Reddy and in her turn grinned—or, at least she chuckled.

POETRY

The Sea of Remembrance

If all our life were one broad glare
Of sunlight clear unclouded;
If all our paths were smooth and fair,
By no soft gloom enshrouded;
If all life's flowers were fully blown
Without the sweet unfolding,
And happiness were rudely thrown
On hands too weak for holding—
Should we not miss the twilight hours,
The gentle haze and sadness
Should we not long for storms and showers
To break the constant gladness?

If none were sick and none were sad,
What service could we render?
I think if we were always glad,
We scarcely could be tender.
Did our beloved never need
Our patient ministration,
Earth would grow cold and miss indeed
Its sweetest consolation.
If sorrow never claimed our heart,
And every wish were granted,
Patience would die, and hope depart—
And life be disenchanted.

And yet in heaven is no more night,
In heaven is no more sorrow!
Such unimagined new delight
From grace from pain will borrow.
As the poor seed that underground
Seeks its true life above it,
Not knowing what will there be found
When euphrasme kiss and love it,
So we in darkness upward grow,
And look and long for heaven,
But cannot picture it below
Till more of light be given.
—J. Bessemeres.

Who Knows?

Who knows the thoughts of a child,
The angel unreconciled
To the new strange world that lies
Outstretched to its wondering eyes?

Who knows if a pitious fear,
Too deep for a sob or a tear,
In beneath that breathless gaze
At sudden and swift amaze.—

Some fear from the dim unknown,
Some shadow like black mist blown
Across the heavenly ray
Of this new-come dawning day?

But the smile which is sudden and swift
Breaks through the shadowy rift.—
From what far heaven or near,
What unseen blissful sphere.

Comes the smile of a little child,
This angel, unreconciled
To the new, strange world that lies
Outstretched to its wondering eyes?
—Nora Perry.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Sign in a Texas Restaurant—"If the steak is too tough for you, get out! This is no place for weaklings."—Vanderbilt University Masquerader.

"What's this, uncle?"
"That's a zebra."
"What does it do?"
"Well—er—its principally used to illustrate the letter 'Z'."—London Mail.

Joe—I see that knee-length skirts have reduced street car accidents 50 per cent.

Matty—Wouldn't it be fine if accidents could be prevented entirely?—Pathfinder.

Customer—When I put the coat on for the first time and buttoned it up, I burst the seam down the back.

Tailor—Yes? Well that just shows you how well our buttons are sewing on!—Vassar Vagabond.

She was in a telephone booth also in distress. Wiping away her tears, she pulled down on the hook to attract the operator's attention.

"Hello!" came that young woman's clear voice.

"H-hello," she sobbed. "I-I want my money back. Harry wouldn't speak to me."—Judge.

A traveler dining in a small railroad restaurant, noticed that the cups had no saucers, and made mention of the fact to the waitress.

"Well, it's like this," explained the obliging miss with the tray. "We can't take any chances. If we had saucers, first thing you know, some fellow would drink out of his—and then we'd lose all our swell trade."—Boston Transcript.

Nearly half the pharmacists in Manila are women.

A pelican in a London park was seen to swallow a live pigeon at one gulp.

The first Arctic expeditions were made for the purpose of finding a short cut to India.

The first message telegraphed for public purposes in England led to the arrest of a murderer.

The Antarctic seas swarm with life, fish being so plentiful that they can be caught on an unbaited hook.

Some experiments of the gear cost are still trying to transmute base metals into gold by formulas in ancient Arabic manuscripts.

Agar-agar, the seaweed gelatine, is being produced in large quantities from beds of gelidium off the coast of California.

Mrs. Otto Claflin, a social worker in Berea, Ohio, has been appointed a chief deputy marshal with authority to make arrests.

Instruments to record temperatures, pressures, drafts, etc., have saved millions of dollars' worth of coal in steam plants.

At the age of 23 years Miss Margaret Kidd in Scotland's first woman lawyer and has the distinction of being the first woman to appear before the British house of lords in a wig and gown.

London's thousands of bachelors need no longer go around without buttons on their clothes, two London women having just opened up a shop for the express purpose of sewing on buttons.

A. W. Masonochis, inventor of the "M and V" or meat and vegetable rations known to millions of British soldiers during the World war, recently died at the age of 76 in a hospital in London. The rations consisted of beef and vegetables, and were first used in the Boer war. They had been cooked in cans and army cooks had only to heat the cans.

Glen C. Wellington, age 7 lbs., of Westmoreland, N. H., has the distinction, which probably no other boy in New England shares, of living on the same place where his great-great-great-grandfather lived and died. Not only this, but his father, grandmother, great-grandfather, John Albee, and his great-great-grandfather, Ichabod Albee, also lived there. The Albee homestead was settled in 1737 and since that time has always been in the family. The old stone fireplace built when the first Albee homestead was erected, a log cabin, is still standing.

The "town clock" of West Chester, Pa., lost its reputation for accuracy and there was talk of retiring the veteran of 1842, when Joseph W. Bell, photographer and man of all trades, volunteered to take it over for a year without pay. He soon had the clock running true to form and even doing tricks in its spare time. Every day at noon it casts a baseball from the top of the tower and the person who finds it receives a reward of ten cents from the merchant whose name it carries. A reservoir carries balls for three weeks and the scheme is working perfectly. Bell is planning other doings for the clock.

CLAIM NEW JERSEY TROUBLE-MAKERS INSPIRED NEW LONDON SILK STRIKE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, April 30—It is declared that there is no possibility of the management of the Bloom mills in this city agreeing to a conference with strikers at that plant to effect a settlement of the trouble that led to the weavers walking out of the establishment. Mr. Bloom says he will keep his mill closed rather than yield to the strikers or even to have a conference with them. He does not mean that his empoyled shall dictate to him the price he shall pay them when he furnishes the work, provides the material to work with and pays the bills for their labor. He is apparently in earnest in his position and will not yield. From another source it was learned that the weavers were not agreed as to the justice of the demands of the strikers. It is said that the parties who brought on the strike came here from New Jersey and that most of them have left town since the strike was inaugurated.

FIREMAN S. E. MATTLOCK IN CRITICAL CONDITION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, April 30—There is no change today in the condition of Sylvester E. Mattlock, fireman first class, one of those injured in the explosion in the battery room of submarine S-49 at the submarine base 10 days ago and which has already claimed the lives of four seamen. Mattlock is under treatment at the base hospital and is suffering from internal injuries and a fracture of both legs. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newton L. Mattlock, reside at 208 State street, Charleston, Ill., and they have been advised of the critical condition of their son.

John P. Coleman, of West Mystic, and Miss Mary VanAntwerp, Quaker Hill, Waterford, patients at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital were dismissed today.

Louis Elfenbein has sold a house and lot on Green street to Elias Gaseon.

Louis Bishop has sold four building lots on Short street off Broad street extension, to Mattie R. Brewer.

Sidney M. Sulman has sold a parcel of land corner of Main and Church streets to the Gulf Refining company. The purchasers will have another gas filling station erected on the side.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the operator's license of Jacob M. Linicus, Glenwood park, to be suspended. Linicus was recently fined $100 in the police court on a charge of reckless driving. The automobile he was driving passed a motionless Connecticut company trolley car on Montauk avenue striking Miss Agnes Svenberg, 24 Evergreen avenue, as the young woman attempted to leave from the trolley car and cross the avenue. Miss Svenberg suffered a fractured ala and was under treatment at Lawrence hospital several weeks.

The sidewalk in front of the premises 328 Montauk avenue, is in a dangerous condition, according to a report made at the police station this morning by Patrolman Henry Hick. The officer reported that the sidewalk had been smashed apparently by a heavy vehicle passing over it. The matter was referred to the highway department.

City Manager William A. Holt has granted permission to the Clark Construction company to perform work on the interior of the theatre the concern is erecting on State street next Sunday. The work to be performed will be to the interior of the theatre and is being done so that the theatre may be opened at the earliest possible date.

Augustus Sorvenuti, 96 Smith street was complained to the police that his pool house on Hempstead street has been entered and that several tools removed. A door was forced some time yesterday and he found the break when he visited the pool house late yesterday. It is believed that the break was made by boys.

Police Sergeant John Cavanaugh today learned the identity of the mischievous youths who caused considerable damage recently by smashing several windows of the building, corner of Main and Hallam streets, owned by the Cager-Crawford company. The boys, six in number, are not over six years of age and they have been turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield, for presentation in the juvenile court.

Russell Stoddard, claiming Attleboro as his residence, was in the police court this morning for the theft of food. Stoddard did not deny that he was guilty, but he set up the strongest sort of a plea in extenuation of the crime. He said he was hungry and unable to satisfy his longing for food. Stoddard is a stroller. He just happened to be in New London. He was near the railroad building below the old Lawrence wharf and there noticed where the railroad workers left their lunch boxes. Stoddard watched his chance and when it came he fed out of the lunch boxes. He did not take, steal and carry away the boxes but he did set away with their contents. Judge Prince did not find that he should punish a man for taking food that he really needed so he turned Stoddard over to Superintendent Mansfield of the Learned Mission and that good samaritan fed Stoddard some more and then sent him on his way rejoicing.

James Brown, a man well along in years, was fined $10 for intoxication. Brown brought that penalty upon himself knowingly. He was in court before this week for the same offense and then was allowed to keep out of jail by a suspension of sentence. He did not appreciate the sympathy bestowed upon him but went and loaded up again. He thought when he paid the fine today that the cost was high for a little thing like intoxication.

Lawrence McEwan is one of the fellows who does not heed warning. He was in court this morning for parking his automobile on State street more than 30 minutes. There have been so many arraignments for this misdemeanor that it would be supposed every auto operator was aware of the fact that unlawful parking would bring prosecution in court; but warnings seem to have no effect.

Tony Caldrillo and his wife had a mix-up a few weeks ago and they were arraigned in court. Then the matter of penalty was held in abeyance till today that the pair might be tested as to how they would behave in the future. The report the prosecutor made today was to the effect that all was harmony at the Caldrillo home, so the complaints were nolled.

Everyone is commenting on the excellent quality of the coal one is able to secure from the dealers at this time. All attribute their good fortune to the fact that the coal is fresh mined. It is of the best quality that has been obtainable in several years.

Patrick J. O'Grady, 47 Rogers street, and Miss Julia Dolan, of New York, were married at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, Rev. Timothy M. Crowley officiating. T. John Mackeon, cousin of the bride, was best man and Miss Mary E. Dolan, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Following the wedding, relatives and friends attended a breakfast served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. John McKeon, 15 Hope street, after which Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady left for a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 17 Rogers street.

Clifford W. Harran, son of Thomas Harran, 127 Winthrop street, and Miss Florence M. Lima, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antone Lima, 9 Harrison street, were married at 10 o'clock this morning at the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan. Arthur Harran, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Anna Lima, sister of the bride, was the bride's attendant. Mr. Harran is employed by the Standard Oil company.

Miss Elizabeth Dunne, of Montauk avenue, has returned to her home after having spent several days as the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. James Farrell, Bell Harbor, L. I.

Thus far this season there have been very few automobile accidents of a serious or even semi-serious nature, for the bad smashes have been on roads north of this city or west of it. Prosecution of drivers who were under the influence of intoxicating liquor is rarely heard of in New London and the reckless operation of cars is seldom brought to the attention of the prosecuting authorities.

Union Masonic lodge will work the master Mason degree in full form at the Lyceum theatre Friday evening with a degree team from Providence doing the work. Admission to the theatre will be to Masons only—those who can prove themselves such. Union lodge does not happen to have accommodations in its lodge room for all who will desire to see the work done so the theatre has been engaged.

Though the Volstead act is in full force in this section, enforcement officers have not made any seizures on the roads leading to this city in a long time. Indeed there have been but few seizures during the past six months or more. It is claimed that there is no liquor being brought into this city now and that what does reach here comes by way of the pockets of the fellows who own it. The intoxicants that reach New London is in the form of alcohol, whether it comes as "for mechanical purposes" or not is not known. The prohibition law is very generally enforced in this city.

The rising temperature this afternoon had the effect of increasing the number of automobiles in use and gave evidence that warm weather will bring more machines into the streets than ever used here.

NOTHING MUCH RESULTS FROM COMMITTEE MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, April 30—An adjourned session of the members of the city council, sitting as a committee, was held late this afternoon in the council chamber, for the purpose of further discussing the allegation of D. E. Schall, president of C. E. Schall, Inc., realty investors, that the Bath and Beach club, Pequot avenue, is encroaching upon land owned by the city and in which land title is vested in Lucius E. Whiton, a member of the city council. The question of whether the Ball and Beach club had entered upon land of the city was discussed, but not at great length and another session is to take place within a few days, when definite steps, it is expected, will be taken to determine the allegation of the Schall interests.

The Southern New England Telephone company is to reduce the telephone rates in the borough of Groton, the new schedule of rates being the same as those charged in New London. Already linemen are making numerous changes in the lines in the borough.

A stranger in town was about Bank street, early this evening and intoxicated and also soliciting money from strangers, presumably for the purpose of obtaining additional supplies of liquor. He was observed in applying his talents by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan and taken into custody. The accused will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

Frank May, who has been confined to his home, 485 Montauk avenue, several days by illness, has recovered and is able to resume his business duties.

Mrs. Charlotte Miner, 86, of 59 Linden street, died this evening at Lawrence hospital, where she had been under treatment about a month. She is survived by a son, J. H. Perkins.

The 235 State street corporation, headed by Walter S. Garde, which is causing the erection of a motion picture house, State street, had three liens filed against it today, the aggregate amount of the liens being $10,000. The liens are for materials furnished for the construction of the picture house. One of the liens is levied by the Amherst Brick Co., for $9,200, a second is made by the Miller, Warner Co., New Haven, for $374.44, and the third is made by the Aben Hardware Co., this city, for $242.42. It is probable, however that the claims will be settled satisfactorily to all parties concerned and that within a few days the liens will be released.

A large gathering of members of the Masonic order was at the Lyceum theatre in this city this evening when the Master Mason degree was exemplified by a team from the Providence lodge. Union lodge of this city sponsored the work which was attended by members of the order from all the sections about New London. None but Masons were admitted. The work was in full form. Many who attended the assembly, desired to contrast the work with that done by the team of Brainard lodge that the work might be compared.

Complaint is made of the presence of small boys on the street at night and of their behavior while they are at liberty. They run through the premises of residents on many streets, breaking fences and damaging hedges and shrubbery. The boys go in gangs and they are represented to be impudent when they are advised to leave the streets or the neighborhoods where they congregate.

Broadway Theatre

Those of you who like a good screen story, enacted by a cast of artists that know their business by all means go to the Broadway theatre and see Betty Compson in the "Counsel for the Defense," Sunday night.

In this production you get a touch of artistry coupled with a real story that at times will make the very hair raise on your head.

On the whole we think that you will enjoy this picture. It has every thing that goes into the making of a real screen production. The story is based on the popular Leroy Scott novel published under the title of "The Attorney For the Defense" while the direction was handled by Burton King who will be remembered for some very good pictures in the past.

The cast is an unusually good one and Miss Compson is ably supported in everything she does in the picture. House Peters plays the role of the yellow journalist who is finally convinced that the old man is guiltless while Rockliffe Fellowes in the role of the heavy comes up to all expectations. The other members of the cast, in which there are some very well-knows screen names, do their work in a convincing manner.

"Counsel for the Defense" is a screen adaptation of the Leroy Scott novel which met with such nation-wide popularity under the title of "The Attorney for the Defense."

The second feature for Sunday night only is one of the great outdoors with that wander actor Buddy Roosevelt, Jr., in "Quicker'n Lightning".

A comedy and news will also be seen.

Strand Theatre

There are two features at the Strand theatre Sunday night only.

"Accused," the Elbee production, starring Dorothy Drew, which opens at the Strand theatre Sunday night, is a gripping melodrama, filled with the swiftest kind of action. It carries elements of appeal in its pathos, contains a splendid romance, and is filled with dramatic conflicts.

Because mystery is a very dominant factor of the story, to tell the plot here would spoil the picture for a great many people, but it can be said that seldom has a picture been seen that has more novel twists or more unusual situations.

Dorothy Drew is even more delightful than in "Defend Yourself" and, to those who were fortunate enough to see her in that picture, this is indeed high praise. The acting of the entire cast is unusually convincing.

It is an entirely different type of crook melodrama in which thrills and laughs follow each other in rapid succession.

Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Quicker'n Lightning is promised to bring in the full quota of thrills.

"Perils of the Wild" and a new comedy completes the program, the music for which will be furnished by the ladies' orchestra.

Breed Theatre

Winter, with its ice and snow—with sleighs carrying warmly wrapped maidens—with snowballs flying from the hands of beautiful lassies clad in gorgeous furs—with skaters lightly gliding over lakes of ice. With dozens of huge arc lamps and spotlights playing on the scene described.

That marks the finale of the beautiful fashion episode of Colleen Moore's "Irene" production, which opens a four day's engagement at the Breed theatre, Sunday.

Not in many months has a scene of such splendor been recorded by the clicking cameras. The four seasons are depicted in like manner—each one surpassing the other in magnificence—each showing the beautiful girls in richer gowns and wraps.

Colleen Moore, herself always careful of making broad statements regarding her own pictures, is free to admit and does broadcast the fact that in "Irene" she is giving the finest story and picture of her entire screen career.

Moving Pictures at Y. M. C. A. Sunday

At 4 p. m. daylight saving time at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday May 2nd moving pictures of real interest will be shown. A short feature entitled "The Unbeliever Convinced" will be well worth seeing. It is a picture that impresses a powerful lesson of "safety first." A factory owner was warned to make his factory safe against fire. He ignored the warning and when the fire really broke out there are tremendous thrills and tense moments while the firemen rescue several of the employes. Two women, in reaching high places, are rescued by firemen with ladders. Then the owner recognizes his own daughter as one of the victims of his criminal carelessness. A reel showing the training of a sailor for service for his country will be of genuine interest. A scenic reel will portray beautiful Mount Rainier, the "God" mountain of Puget sound. Living glaciers will be shown, also evergreen forests, flowers and other surpassing views. The Nisqually Glacier and Canyon, the Paradise Valley and terraced effects of the glaciers will also be shown. To this service both men and women are most cordially invited. Hugh Kinder will furnish the music and a brief talk will be given.

RUSSIAN STUDENT FUND GIVES AID FOR AMERICAN TRAINING

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—Organized by a penniless young Russian student in 1919, the Russian Student fund is now advancing aid to 150 Russian men and women in 50 American colleges to fit themselves for future participation in Russian reconstruction.

The organization operates on a plan whereby money loaned to students is repaid after graduation and already $16,000 in repayments has been received, officers of the fund have announced. The students are studying business, architecture, civil, electrical, chemical and mechanical engineering, medicine and applied agriculture.

The fund was started in 1919 when Alexis R. Wiren just graduated from Boston Tech., interested prominent persons in aiding his young compatriots. He felt that the obstacles in the way of foreign students earning their way through college, here were almost insurmountable, but that if they were given assistance they could easily pay back the expenses later.

WHEN YOU WANT to put your business before the public, there is no medium better than through the advertising columns of The Bulletin.

"Satan in Sables" with Lowell Sherman is the story of a reckless Russian prince who walked the primrose path to the merry tune of aching hearts.

But one day a dancing bit of a girl flits across his pathway—and the bright lights lose their glamour.

How she lured him—baffled him—seemed always just beyond his reach—and then—came back into his life like a ray of sunshine

—all this is powerfully portrayed in the new WARNER picture—"Satan in Sables."

RALLY IN STOCKS CHECKED

NEW WYORK, April 30—(AP)—The usual week-end profit taking and energetic bear selling of special stocks checked another rally in today's stock market, which was featured by the reawakening of speculative interest in the oil and copper shares. Final quotations were mostly lower, net losses in many issues running from 1 to five points, but a large sprinkling of issues also showed substantial gains on the day.

The volume of trading showed a marked falling off from that of yesterday, the day's sales aggregating only 1,531,600 shares. While speculative sentiment is admittedly more cheerful than it has been for some time, there seems to be a rather general disposition to await more light on the trend of second quarter business.

Operators on the long side found plenty of ammunition in the news developments of the past 24 hours in their campaign for higher prices. Of paramount interest was the agreement for the funding of the French debt, which if approved by the legislative bodies of both countries, is expected by bankers and business men generally to stimulate international trade and hasten to economic rehabilitation of Europe.

Extension of gasoline price advances and the optimistic statement on the trade outlook by G. H. Jones, chairman of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, stimulated activity in the oil group.

Despite the denial of merger rumors accredited to officials of the Atlantic Refining company, that stock soared over seven points to a new high price for the year at 130 1-4 and then slipped back to 116 1-2. Panhandle Producers and Refiners, which recently brought in a new well, moved up to 16 3-4 while the preferred soared nearly 10 points to 85 7-8, both new highs. Most of the other oils showed only fractional changes.

Coppers were bought in anticipation of favorable earnings reports by some of the principal producing companies and on the theory that the settlement of international debts would revive the export demand for the Red Metal Anaconda, whose annual report is expected next week, moved up 3 1-4 points to 48 1-2.

Curious cross currents of prices ran through the motor group with an extreme reak of five points to a new low for the year at 34 5-8 by Moon as one of the chief features. General Motors, Hudson and most of the other active issues showed only fractional changes. Rumors of tire price cuts, later officially denied insofar as they concerned the United States Rubber company, probably accounted for the heaviness of the tire stocks.

Speculative fears for the safety of American Woolen preferred dividend were reflected in a bear raid on that stock which forced it down over 9 points to 66, the lowest price since 1903, but it later rallied above 70. The common touched a new low at 28 1-2. Marine preferred also was heavily sold, dropping over 3 points to 34 1-2. U. S. Steel common and most of the standard industrials drifted lower.

International Telephone responded to the publication of an unusually favorable earnings statement by climbing over four points to 123 1-2. A steady demand also was noted for such stocks as American Brown Boveri, American Ice, National Dairy Products, Public Service of New Jersey and Western Union.

Commodity markets were quiet with the main price trend upward. Active wheat futures advanced a cent or so a bushel. Sugar, cotton and coffee prices showed little change.

Call money renewed at four per cent. and then advanced to 4 1-2, banks calling about $25,000,000 in loans in connection with month end requirements. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were reactionary. Demand sterling again fell below $4.86 and French francs after duplicating their year's low, rallied to around 3.30 cents. Belgian francs collapsed over 10 points to a new low at 3.86 cents and then rallied slightly. Norwegian krone showed independent strength by soaring over 30 points to around 21.75 cents.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT IS WIPING OUT 11 GRADE CROSSINGS

Projects for the elimination of 11 grade crossings in Connecticut are now in various stages of fulfillment, the state highway department announced Friday. The improvements will cost well over $1,000,000, the expense being apportioned by the public utilities commission between the state, the town affected and the railroad company.

One of the projects is nearing completion, three are under contract, three have been approved and four are yet in the preliminary survey stage.

Following is a list of the crossings scheduled for removal in the immediate future:

Bishop's crossing, Plainfield; Yellow Tavern crossing, Windsor Locks; Beckley's crossing, Berlin; Boston Post Road crossing, Old Saybrook; Andover, Falls Village, Reynolds' Bridge, Thomaston; Castle Bridge, North of Thomaston on Torrington highway; Scott's Swamp, Bristol-Farmington road; East River underpass, Madison-Clinton highway.

The 11th project is in the town of Washington where the work is practically completed. Of the total cost of $62,970, the state contributes only $12,000 for resurfacing the highway. The balance of the cost, approximately $51,000 is paid by the town and the railroad company. Three grade crossings were eliminated by a complete relocation of the highway.

Of the three projects in the easterly end of the state, all are yet in a preliminary stage to actual work. At Bishop's Crossing in the town of Plainfield, which is on the main north and south highway from Long Island sound to the Massachusetts state line, the contracts for approaches and substructure for overhead crossing have been awarded at a cost of $78,060. The railroad company is receiving bids for the steel bridge.

In Andover a re-location of highway is planned to avoid crossing the railroad. The cost is estimated at about $52,000. This project is yet to be presented to the public utilities commission for approval.

At Old Saybrook a contract has been awarded for $64,228 for the construction of approaches and sub-structure for an overhead bridge. The railroad is to receive bids for a steel bridge, to cost approximately $30,000.

$200 FINE AND JAIL FOR SALE OF LIQUOR

Pleading guilty to violation of the liquor laws by actual sale, Miss Ethel Hayling, 31, colored, No. 14 John street, New London, was fined $200 and costs and sent to jail for 10 days by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Friday morning. She was arrested Thursday night by the Norwich police at the home of Mrs Clara Scott, West Main street, where she was visiting for a few days, having come to this city Monday.

Harry Foster was presented on a charge of breach of the peace. He had his case continued for six months. Foster had trouble with his wife, Effie Cooper Foster, and the result was that he was arrested. The couple are again reconciled.

The court found Louis Strom guilty of violation of a city ordinance in parking his machine on West Main street in a no-parking zone. He paid $5 and departed.

The charge against Mrs. Victor Phaneuf of Norwich Town of allowing chickens to trespass on adjoining property, was nolled. One local man paid $5 and costs for intoxication.

"Where's There's Life There's Hope,"

Seems to be read by some people "While there's sight there's hope." Nature repeatedly sends out signals in the form of headache, dizziness and so onges warnings of more serious troubles ahead.

But so long as they can see at all many people think it is not necessary to seek relief.

Much suffering and distress could be avoided if, at the first of these warnings, an examination were made by a careful optometrist.

We are here to relieve ocular troubles whenever glasses will do such good work.

French Macaroon Flavor
captures the taste of MAY DAY

AND the best part is, it's a willing captive. For if you never ate an ice cream that went right to the spot—here's one that will. First a chef has to make the macaroons. He takes blanched almonds and beats them into a smooth paste—mixes this with whites of eggs and fine sugar—drops spoonfuls on oiled paper and bakes in the oven until a delicate brown. Then these delicious, crisp little cakes are crushed and frozen with pure cream. Need any more be said? Enjoy some at your dealer's now—Have it May Day Sunday for dessert.

82% started to buy higher priced cars

—then decided on the Overland Six because of what they found

Here are some remarkable facts brought out in an investigation among Overland Six Owners.

They tell the story of Overland Six popularity in a way that words can never describe.

This check-up shows that 82% of these present owners actually started out to purchase higher priced cars—then changed their minds and bought an Overland Six when they compared the values offered.

It revealed the fact that 62.5% chose this Six because of its amazing power. "Nothing like it on four wheels today" . . . "its performance thrills me to the finger tips" . . . these are some of the typical things they say.

18% bought this car on its beauty alone . . . without even a demonstration.

15% said that comfort was its greatest feature.

What you get in this world-famous Six

This big sturdy Six will out-pull, out-run and out-perform anything else of its size, or weight, or price-class.

It is a car of exceptional comfort. The big, broad door openings are 32½ inches wide. You can get in or out with the utmost ease.

Seats are wide, luxuriously comfortable. There is more cubic feet of space inside than in any car of this price . . . with plenty of room for five full-size passengers. Room to stretch your legs without feeling cramped or crowded.

An artist created the distinguished, smart looking Overland Six you see in the illustration.

Every line, every curve and contour is the result of painstaking craftsmanship and study.

Frankly, we took the 18 best cars of America and Europe and combined their salient features in this new-type Overland Six.

There is no Six built today that offers greater value . . . no car made in which finer quality of material is used or better workmanship employed.

In justice to yourself, see this wonderful car.

GENERAL STRIKE OF UNION LABOR IN GREAT BRITAIN SCHEDULED TONIGHT

Negotiations Between the Government and the Trades Union Congress Ended at 1 O'Clock This Morning—The Government Has Issued a Statement Refusing to Resume Negotiations Unless the Congress Withdrew the General Strike Order.

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—Any hope of averting a general strike that hung upon Sunday's negotiations between the government and the Trades Union congress vanished at one o'clock this morning, when it was officially announced that the negotiations had broken down. The government immediately issued a statemenb refusing to resume them unless the congress withdrew the general strike orders and repudiated other overt acts, which the government describes as challenging the constitution rights and freedom of the nation.

The overt acts specified include interference with the freedom of the press, an obvious allusion to the strike of the printers and other operatives of the Daily Mail, because they objected to an editorial sent them to set up.

In view of the attitude taken by the Trades Union congress and the miners up to the present, there does not seem the least probability that they will adopt the course the government has demanded from them, and the general strike consequently will go into effect at midnight tonight (Monday).

"War has been declared," H. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of the Railwaymen, said to the newspapermen when leaving Downing street.

Mr. Thomas added: "It is a very sad state of affairs." Asked whether the representatives of the congress had made any reply to the government's statement, Mr. Thomas shook his head and remarked: "We are now going to Eccleston Square"—trade union headquarters.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, said: "We are now going to discuss matters together. The premier has declared war; we must prepare for the struggle."

Some 5,000,000 British workers will be idle after midnight Monday if the general strike called in sympathy with the strike of 1,000,000 coal miners in Great Britain is not averted.

The shipping industry employs the largest number of union members of all industries, except coal mining, which will be affected by the general strike. According to union records, 84,000 unionists are employed as shipbuilders and ship repairers in Great Britain and northern Ireland; 51,000 seamen will be called out and about 55,000 dock and waterfront workers.

Other industries which will be affected include the iron and steel trades, employing 44,000 unionists, the tinplate and steel sheet trades, with 31,000 union workers; the railroads and other engineering trades, with 77,000, the pig iron industry, employing 17,000, iron and slate mining, with 7,000 unionists and the brick trade, numbering 9,000 union workers.

MANIFESTO TO NATION BY NATIONAL TRADES COUNCIL

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—The general council of the Trades Union congress tonight issued a manifesto to the nation explaining and justifying its action.

The council blames the mine owners for locking out more than 1,000,000 miners, and the government for its failure to make any acceptable proposals to enable the mining industry to continue without any further lowering of the standards of life and labor in the coal fields, pending a reorganization.

It declares that the Trades Union congress has been compelled to organize united resistance to an enforced settlement of the mining problem at the expense of the miner, workers' wages, and disclaims all responsibility for the calamity that now threatens. Its action, it adds, is not directed against the public, and responsibility for the consequences lies with the mineowners and the government entirely.

No proposal for a national settlement, the manifesto further asserts, was made by the mineowners until within a few hours of the time fixed for the expiration of the lockout notices and by the government's refusal to insist upon the withdrawal of these notices to enable the negotiations to continue, except upon the condition that the miners agreed in advance to accept wage reductions, government made it impossible for the representatives of the trades union to effect an honorable settlement.

The manifesto concludes: "Even now, with a general stoppage within sight, the trade union representatives believe an honorable settlement can be reached. But it is absolutely essential that the government's demand for an undertaking from the miners' leaders to consent in advance to a reduction of wages be withdrawn; the notices of the lockout must also be withdrawn, to allow the negotiations to proceed without the issue being prejudiced.

STRIKE OF PRINTERS ON THE LONDON DAILY MAIL

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—One of the first effects of the strike is the non-appearance of the Daily Mail, this (Monday) morning, owing to a strike of the printers, who took exception to the Mail's proposed editorial on the strike situation under the caption "For King and Country."

The editorial declared that "a general strike cannot be tolerated by any civilized government."

The Daily Mail informed the Associated Press that the printers took exception to the editorial and demanded that alterations be made by the editor, who refused to comply.

The printers, supported by the machine managers, stereotypers and packers, although not by the compositors, process workers and telegraph operators, ceased work. Consequently the paper was unable to appear.

The Mail's editorial included the following:—

"We do not wish to say anything hard about the miners themselves; as to their leaders, all we need say at the moment is that some of them are under the influence of people who mean no good to this country.

"A general strike is not an industrial dispute; it is a revolutionary movement."

OFFICIAL STATEMENT BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—An official statement issued at Downing street at one o'clock this morning says:

"The following decision of his majesty's government has been conveyed to Mr. Pugh, chairman of the Trades Union congress committee. The government believe that no solution of the difficulties of the coal industry which is both practicable and honorable to all concerned can be reached except by sincere acceptance of the coal commission's report.

"In the expression 'acceptance of the report' are included both reorganization of the coal industry which should be put in hand immediately, and pending the results of the re-organization being attained such interim adjustment of wages or hours of work as will make it economically possible to carry on the industry in the meantime.

"If the miners or trades union committee, on their behalf were prepared to say plainly that they accept this proposal the government would be ready to resume negotiations and continue the subsidy for a fortnight.

"But since the negotiations which have taken place between the ministers and members of the Trade Unions congress it has come to the knowledge of the government not only that specific instructions have been sent under the authority of the executive of the trades unions rerresented at the conference convened by the council of the Trades Union congress, asking their members in several of the most vital industries of the country to carry out a general strike Tuesday next, but that overt acts have already taken place, including gross interference with the freedom of the press."

"Such action involves a challenge to the constitutional rights and freedom of the nation. The government therefore before they can continue the negotiations must require from the Trades Union congress both a repudiation of the actions referred to that have already taken place and an immediate unconditional withdrawal of the instructions for a general strike."

EUGENE V. DEBS SUFFERS A PHYSICAL BREAKDOWN

PITTSBURGH, May 3—(AP)—Eugene V. Debs, 73 year old champion of socialism, is suffering from a physical breakdown at his home in Terre Haute, Indiana.

This was disclosed here today in a telegram from Debs to the national convention of the Socialist Party of America and read at a mass meeting, where Debs was to have been the principal speaker. Debs, in his telegram, declared he had been undergoing treatment for a week and fear of lack of strength caused him to abandon his plan of coming here.

A life size oil painting of Debs was to have been presented to him at the meeting by local socialists, who announced they would ship the painting to Debs.

The meeting was addressed among others, by Congressman Victor L. Berger, Wisconsin; James Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and Dr. Marc Slonim, Russian scientist and lecturer.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon was pictured as the guiding spirit of both the republican and democratic parties by Berger, who said:

"Mellon is a good man in his way for the capital class. He and Representatives Mills (New York), do things only for big business and big business men. Mellon is the guiding spirit of the democratic and republican parties. I hope when I come back to Pittsburgh again, the city will be in the hands of the socialists and not Mellon."

He attacked Premier Mussolini of Italy, and again voiced his opposition to the settlement of the Italian war debt, declaring the United States had given Mussolini, a gift of $2,000,000,000.

25TH ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF NIGHTWORKERS' MASS

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Fifth avenue at Fiftieth street presented an unusual spectacle early today when instead of the lonely patrolman, long lines of men and women waited in front of St. Patrick's for the 25th annual celebration of nightworkers' mass.

The ceremony was a pontificial mass, with Cardinal Hayes officiating—the first time in America that a prince of the church had filled the office at that hour. A precedent also was also set, according to cathedral officials, in the number of non-Catholics who attended, their number being attributed largely a personal tribute to Rev. William E. Cashin, former chaplain of Sing Sing prison, now pastor of St. Andrew's, who assisted at the mass. An imposing array of churchmen attended the cardinal, and Mayor Walker headed a long list of city and state officials among the audience.

The annual mass was inaugurated in 1901 by an organization of newspaper workers for celebrants whose vocations required labor during night hours.

In his sermon, Monsignor Lavelle paid a tribute to journalism, characterizing it as "the telescope of the past, the microscope of the present and the horoscope of the future."

SAYS THERE ARE WHALES THAT CAN SWALLOW HORSE

TORONTO, May 3.—(AP)—Quoting a seaman who had 50 years whaling experience, the Rev. Dr. L. W. Munhall, an 84-year-old evangelist, of Philadelphia, Pa., declares there are whales that "can swallow a horse without winking or a cowboat and a man in it." He was speaking before the World's Christian Fundamentals association convention and described his contribution as "the last word on Jonah and the whale."

The veteran preacher said he believed the Biblical narrative of Jonah and the whale to be literally true, and that in his opinion anyone who did not believe it was an "infidel."

MATTERS TO COME UP IN CONGRESS THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Farm relief and public buildings legislation will occupy the attention of congress this week to the exclusion of most other subjects.

The house on Tuesday will take up the widely divergent measures for agricultural aid and will debate them for four days and then get down to voting on various amendments which will be offered.

Meanwhile, senators will continue their conferences on the subject while the $165,000,000 public buildings bill is considered on the senate floor.

Prohibition will have another day as the senate judiciary sub-committee meets Wednesday to consider the sixteen bills proposing modification and tightening up of the Volstead act. Apparently none of the wet bills has a chance and there is some doubt that any of the administration measures can be put through at this session.

With the major part of the house work done, committees of that body will be inactive during the week but the senate committees will be busy with an inquiry into the sale of the Admiral-Oriental Line, the consideration of radio legislation and a number of other subjects. The finance committee is expected to take up the French debt settlement during the week.

The senate will turn aside from legislation tomorrow to again set as a court in the impeachment case against Federal Judge George W. English, of the Eastern Illinois district. Judge English is to appear tomorrow to answer the indictment brought by the house.

FIRE DROVE 15 FAMILIES FROM HOMES IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, May 3.—(AP)—Fifteen families fled from their homes when one six family building was almost totally destroyed and four other houses partly damaged by fire on High and Cosset streets here at 3 o'clock this morning. Damage is estimated at $55,000 by fire officials. Fire Marshal Frank W. Holland is investigating a rumor that a drunken man trying to find his bed with matches, started the fire.

Beginning in the basement of 68 High street, the flames spread through the whole building, including 64-66-68 High street, practically destroying it. Sparks from this blaze set fire to the two family building at 62 High street, and to those at Nos. 11, 15, and 19 Cosset street, in the rear of High street.

Kentucky which stood 37th in 1924 and led Connecticut by a small margin, was this year topped by $7,428,948.

Compared with 1924, New York jumpjed from second place into leadership as an exporting state, changing places with Texas.

CHICAGO POLICE GET DYNAMITE IN RAID

CHICAGO, May 2—(AP)—Declaration by a witness whose name was withheld that Al "Scarface" Caponi had in his hands a machine gun shortly before the killing of William McSwiggin, assistant state's attorney, and two gangsters last Tuesday night, armed the police with a firm believer today that Caponi can explain the triple machine gun slaying.

The police theory is that McSwiggin was an innocent victim of Caponi's wrath which was directed against the other two victims, Thomas Duffy and James J. Doherty, for infringement in his bootlegging territory.

A raid last night on a resort said to be owned by Caponi revealed another arsenal consisting of a quantity of dynamite, firearms and liquor. Machine gun accessories, weapons and ammunition had been found in a previous raid at the home of Ralph Caponi, a brother of Al.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe said that his new witness told of being in the Circo restaurant about 7 o'clock last Tuesday evening when Caponi, his brother and three other men entered hastily. At the conclusion of an "agitated conversation," the witness said, Caponi went to a panel in the wall of the restaurant and obtained a machine gun, the other four men armed themselves with pistols and all left together. The shooting occurred about an hour later.

Disclosure to the state's attorney of the names of the men to whom Alex Korecek, a hardware dealer, sold three machine guns has set the police on a new trail. Mr. Crowe believes that the machine guns were purchased by members of the Caponi gang.

Korecek has refused information for three days in fear of his life, and yesterday a mysterious writ of habeas corpus filed in his behalf failed when he pleaded that the court permit him to remain in the protection of the police.

A veritable fortress, police said, was found in the Caponi house last night. A secret room large enough to accommodate three men was disclosed by a button under the bar and in panels were holes through which men could fire. Several of the 26 rooms in the house contained secret panels and trap doors.

Shot in the Back in Struggle With Thugs

Raymond Brown of Plymouth Encountered Hold Up Man on Lonely Road in Bristol.

BRISTOL, May 3—(AP)—Resisting the attempts of two thugs who held him up on a lonely road here tonight, Raymond Brown of Plymouth, was shot in the back. The approach of another automobile frightened the robbers who fled through the underbrush. Brown drove to the next house, where Julius Norton telephoned the Bristol police and Dr. Paul A. Park. Brown's condition was not considered serious. A woman companion with him at the time of the attempted robbery was unharmed.

The hold-up men are believed to be the same who tried to steal two cars here tonight, but were foiled in both attempts. Brown was driving on the Mt. Vernon road just over the Southington-Bristol line, when the thugs stopped his car and tried to pull him out of the seat, demanding his money. He resisted and one of the men struck him over the jaw with a blackjack. His companion screamed, whereupon the second highwayman shot Brown from behind.

Suddenly the reflection of another pair of automobile headlights appeared on the road and the robbers fled. When the doctor examined Brown, he found the bullet had twisted around the fifth rib on the left side from the back and lodged in the muscle near the heart. The bullet was removed and Brown went to his home. His jaw was also badly lacerated where he was struck with the blackjack.

Brown was able to give a good description of one of the hold-up men to the police, who promptly surrounded the woods in that section.

VAN ORMAN WON THE BALLOON ELIMINATION RACE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 2.—(AP)—Arrival at Langley field of Lieutenant A. W. Gray, pilot of the United States army balloon S-20 and his aide, Lieutenant Roland Kieburtz tonight definitely accounted for all of the balloons that started from this city Friday evening in the Litchfield trophy and national elimination race.

Delay of the crew of the S-20 in making an official report to the officials of the race here was not explained in dispatches and officers' records could not be forwarded to Washington for the final measurement of distances covered by the balloons.

Ward T. Van Orman, veteran balloonist, for the third time in succession out-distanced all competitors and won the right to try again for the Gordon Bennet cup which last year was retained by Belgium after Mr. Van Ormah landed at sea on the deck of a German steamer. He had covered a distance close to 800 miles when he landed yesterday on the bank of the James river, south-southeast of Petersburg, Va., to avoid being carried out to sea.

The Akron N. A. A. piloted by John A. Boettner was second according to unofficial calculations with the United States army balloon S-23 piloted by Captain Hawthorne C. Gray third, about seven miles farther from Little Rock than the S-21, which Lieutenant James F. Powell, brought down at Hickory, N. C.

Both pilots escaped injury. Several holes were punched in the envelope but the balloon was not seriously damaged. The pilots reported their landing near Ashland was not intended. However, after their balloon had struck the top of a tree with such disastrous results, they were forced to descend and give up the flight.

PLANS FOR CONN. BUILDING AT THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL

HARTFORD, May 3. — (AP) — The Connecticut sesqui-centennial committee appointed by Governor John H. Trumbull to decide on the plans for the building which will form the headquarters of Connecticut's sons and daughters who may visit the exposition at Philadelphia, has decided to base the design of the structure upon the old state house in Hartford. This building served as the home of Connecticut's seat of government from its completion in 1796 to 1878 when the present capitol was first occupied.

This building which occupies State House square, originally known as Meeting House yard, stands upon a site dedicated to public uses by Rev. Thomas Hooker and the founders of the colony in 1636. It was upon this location where the original meeting house stood in which fundamental orders, Connecticut's first written constitution, were framed and promulgated. It was from near this square that in 1687 the Colonial charter of 1662 was rescued from Sir Edmund Andros and hidden in the famous Charter Oak.

Here also was located the first state house occupied from 1719 to 1796, in which Washington and Count Rochambeau were welcomed in 1780.

The Connecticut building at Philadelphia will face Broad street, the principal street of the exposition grounds, backing down toward the street of 1776 which is a street lined on both sides by reproductions of historic houses.

FOREST FIRES MENACING IN PLYMOUTH COUNTY, MASS.

Fire Burning Along a Three Mile Front Threw Embers Ten Miles Ahead of It—Plymouth, Duxbury and Carver Firemen Were Called Out to Fight the Flames—Two Other Forest Fires Have Been Brought Under Control.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., May 2—(AP)—Fanned by a stiff southerly wind, three forest fires, one of serious proportions, raged through Plymouth county woodland today. The largest blaze, burning along a three mile front, was throwing embers ten miles ahead of it. Plymouth, Duxbury and Carver firemen and volunteers, aided by county farm inmates and forest fire department members, were called out to fight the flames.

The large fire, starting in a barn on the old Ward estate in South Carver, spread into the woods. Jumped the Carver-Plymouth and Middleboro-Plymouth roads and raged northerly into the woods. The flames were checked on the Middleboro end, but swept to within a mile and a half of Plymouth, beyond control despite five hours work on the part of firemen.

Several cottages, an ice house and gas station at Clear pond were saved from destruction by the Plymouth fire fighters and Carver volunteers. Kept the flames from a large cranberry bog owned by T. T. Vaughan.

The second fire swept over part of the summer estate of C. A. Stone of Stone & Webster at Manomet before Plymouth firemen brought it under control fight. No buildings were destroyed. Neighbors declared the blaze was set by a man seen running from the scene just before the fire was discovered.

The third fire to sweep the section started late today in Kingston, four miles north of here, but was reported under control soon after discovery.

The Manomet blaze broke out again tonight, but a score of men sent from here again controlled the flames while a heavy fog drifting in from Buzzard's bay helped quench the flames sweeping up from Carver.

COMPLICATIONS FROM AN UNUSUAL FIGHT IN MILFORD

MILFORD, May 2.—(AP)—A special policeman has been suspended, two New Haven youths are under arrest, and the town clerk of Milford is confined to his home suffering from injuries as the result of an unusual fight here early today. Superintendent of Police James M. Maher and the police commissioners are investigating the affair and the suspended patrolman will be given a hearing tomorrow night.

The trouble started when Special Officer James Healy, of the Milford police while off duty noticed an automobile coming toward his car. He stopped this machine which he claims was being driven in a reckless manner. The occupants of the car were Pasquale Montano, 21, and Harry Levey, 22, and two girls whose names have not been disclosed, all of New Haven.

While the officer was talking with the operator of the car, William A. Rose, town clerk, of Milford, approached in another car. The policeman signalled this car and Mr. Rose, thinking there had been an accident, stopped and walked across the road. One of the youths asked him a question and struck him in the face. Rose fought back and the second youth and one of the girls joined in a general tussle. Healy shouted that he was going for help and drove away.

Rose was finally overcome and the three jumped into their machine and drove to New Haven, although the Milford man succeeded in getting the registration numbers. When the Milford police failed to arrive, Rose drove his machine to the police station, where he learned that Healy had not reported the incident at all. New Haven police were notified and shortly after the automobile in which the New Haven group was riding was found and the two youths placed under arrest.

They were turned over to the Milford authorities where they were charged with breach of the peace and assault. Bonds were set at $1,000 each.

Later Montano's bond was raised to $2,000.

Healy was suspended by Superintendent Maher on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. Rose suffered a cut over one eye and multiple body bruises and Levey is minus a few teeth.

SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS ON SALVAGING SUB S-51

NEW LONDON, May 2—(AP)—Captain E. J. King, commandant of the submarine base here, who is in charge of the latest effort to raise the sunken submarine S-51, to the surface, tonight expressed gratification at the progress being made by the salvage fleet. Two huge pontoon of the eight on which the succes of present plants rests, have already been lowered and attached to the bow of the sunken vessel.

No more of the pontoons will be brought out to the scene of operations until divers are certain that the first two can be handled satisfactorily. They will also complete the work of clearing the wreckage from the interior of the submarine and sealing the compartments before the other six pontoons will be attached, according to Captain King.

Correcting the impression that all compartments of the S-51 will be sealed before an attempt to made to raise her, Captain King tonight declared that if this were necessary the divers would be working far into next winter. He explained that the crew's quarters, which were smashed when the submersible was rammed by the steal prow of the City of Rome last September, and the forward torpedo room, which was demolished when the ship sunk, landing on her nose, would not be sealed.

The commandant said he would leave the base tomorrow and proceed to the scene of operations.

"MAD BANDIT" OF RHODE LSLAND STIEL AT LARGE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 2.—(AP)—Arthur Rembiad, fugitive from the Rhode Island State hospital for the insane and believed to be the "mad bandit" who, as a member of a trio of youthful gunmen, has been sought by the police of communities in two states in a series of hunts since last Friday night, is still at large.

Police of Woonsocket, R. I., and Blackstone, Mass., and members of the Rhode Island mounted police spent several hours early today in searches covering miles of territory in unsuccessful efforts to run down rumors that the "mad bandit" had been shooting at automobilists or had been seen.

Police authorities in the sections of the two states where the "mad bandit" or the other members of the trio of youthful desperadoes have been operating are using every effort to apprehend Rembiad. The gangsters are quick to use revolvers at small provocation and lives of life is feared by the authorities if they are not caught.

EXAMINATION IN ROME IN CASE OF J. A. ABBOTT

Abbott's side of the case will be heard tomorrow after which a decision will be given as to whether the case will be thrown out of court for insufficiency of evidence or whether the American will be held on either or both charges.

BISHOP MANNING ATTACKS THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT

NEW YORK, May 2.—(AP)—The present Turkish government was charged with "the unspeakable atrocities as its predecessors" by Bishop William T. Manning in an address today at the annual service of the Girls Friendly society at which he reiterated opposition to ratification by the United States of the Lauzanne treaty.

The special report made to the league of nations in November 1923, and other official documents were quoted by the speaker in support of his assertion.

"It has not been the habit of our country to give support to the persecutor and opppressor," Bishop Manning declared. "Those who are seeking to get this treaty ratified of course wish us to keep silence and say that this should not be brought into the church. If ever there were a case in which the voice of the church should be heard I think it is this one."

BRITISH BATHING GIRLS TO WEAR ARTIFICIAL SILK

LONDON, May 2—(AP)—Even the bathing girls who really want to go into the water may wear artificial silk suits next summer without fear of disaster.

Large assortments of costumes made from this new material are shown at the first British artificial silk exhibition and certified to be strong enough to withstand the attacks of sea water.

A bride walking to the altar entirely clad in imitation silk is one of the great attractions of the show. The young bride's entire costume, from her coliwebby veil to dainty slippers, is of the new material. Bridesmaids arrayed in yellow in contrast to the ivory gown of the principal, are also clad entirely in artificial silk.

Many of the names of materials known to the ladies of great grandmothers' day have been revived in christening the novelties created with artificial silk.

INDIAN MEDICINE MEN CHANT FOR RAIN

SHERIDAN, Wyo., May 4 (—Medicine men of six Indian tribes of Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming will weave their charms and sound their chants trying to convince the "God of Thunder" to loose rain for the clouds in a feature event of the semi-centennial celebration of Custer's Last Stand to be held in June at the battlefield site of the Little Big Horn river.

They will contest to see who can make the "best medicine," on the last day of the celebration.

The medicine men, each representing a tribe—the Cheyenne, Crow, Blackfeet, Assinibone, Flathead and Sioux—will be more than three score and ten years. The chief medicine man of an Indian tribe must be one of the oldest members of the tribe.

Their bodies covered with white clay, and faces and limbs painted with red, orange and yellow hues in weird designs each Indian will carry a staff tipped with brilliantly-colored feathers. With a whistle in his mouth he will ride through the Indian camp on the battlefield, blowing the whistle and chanting weird phrases. All the while his arms will be outstretched to the Great Spirit. Each medicine man will be allotted thirty minutes to "mix the medicine" that will precipitate rain.

In Bear Tail, oldest medicine man of their tribe the Montana Crows of the Pryor reservation have a participant who is expected to "mix heap big medicine." Five years ago, Bear Tail warned the tribe that it would rain on a certain day when a rodeo was to be held. He was jeered by the younger members. But when rodeo day approached, he "mixed medicine" and had his squaw make the tepee fast warning her a big storm was coming.

Not a cloud obscured the sky so the youths prepared for the rodeo. Just as it started a drenching rain occurred supplemented by a strong gale, which blew away all the tepees not securely fastened.

Strength Sustained

"Thou hast forgotten the God of thy Salvation, and hast not been mindful of the Rock of thy Strength."—Is. 17:10.

In self conceit men build upon the sand
Of slippery opinions, ever changing,
Reason exalted, its conclusions bland
From earth to farthest star-worlds ranging;
God oft scoffed, forgotten, fool's increase,
Unmindful of foundations needed.
Laid on the Rock of Strength, or strength
Spurned, cease.
Warnings by Christ Himself given, oft unheeded.

Things shaken will soon surely be removed,
That things immovable ever may remain,
God, in the person of His Son Beloved
A sure foundation stablished not in vain.
Be mindful of the Rock! And, of its strength!
If built upon, they house of soul's secure,
Whatever shakes, will crush thee down at length.
Trust no quicksand, or its seductive lure.

No other than the Christ foundation lay,
Himself the Corner Stone which naught can shake.
Though earth and heaven itself may pass away
Abide forever words His love once spake—
"I am the Truth"; His person bases faith
Of every sincere Christian; Christ the man
Of Galilee, of Man and God. He saith,
For "no man knoweth whence I came," nor can!
Above all other names His name must stand
Not Scripture, in itself, was given to trust.
The Bible carries none to Better Land,
Twas but the writing of His hand in dust.

No statements guarding faith by wordy creeds,
"Do I believe"—or what—of naught I'm sure—
But God, in Christ's Salvation, fits my needs,
The Rock of Strength's the rock that will endure.

The Martins Are Building

I am glad the martins are building again
And the children who wake the green walks with their mirth
And lift the shy heads
Of the flowers from their beds,
By a strange cry stirred—
Desert their dear pastime, look up from the earth
Up, up through the leaves
Where under the eaves
Clings the back of the bird;
And his nest-mate white-throated regards the new day
From her arch of inverted clay.

"CHOCOLATE BARS" TRUCK HELD 350 GALS. OF ALCOHOL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 3—"Dainty Morsels"—"Salted Nuts" were legends artistically emblazoned on the sides of a small closed body truck that yielded 350 gallons of alcohol, when it was opened at the state police barracks on North Main street, Friday evening. The load is said to have a wholesale value of about $1,600.

George Wilkinson, a West Somerville, Mass., young man was the driver of the truck and riding with him was Louis Bronstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., another man in his early twenties.

Sergeant Albert S. Field apprehended the men while they were speeding in the town of Brooklyn, where they were presented for a haring before Justic Frank H. Bedard Saturday afternoon. They had been held at the county jail in Brooklyn during Friday night, in default of $1,000 bonds in each case.

Sergeant Field was not suspicious that the men were rum runners when he put after the truck, which was making about 45 miles an hour. He wanted them for reckless driving. Upon overtaking them adn quizzing Wilkinson, who was driving, he found the young man had no operator's license.

At the barracks, to which place Wilkinson was ordered to drive, was being questioned by Sergeant Field while Bronstein remained outside with the truck. Officer Streamens, sensing the possibility that the men were rum runners, demanded from Bronstein the key to open the truck. Opening up for inspection, the truck was found to contain 60 5-gallon and 50 one-gallon cans of alcohol. It was in new cans, each neatly wrapped in paper. Wilkinson had represented that he had a load of 3,400 packages of chocolate bars aboard.

Discovery of the alcohol places Wilkinson and Bronstein in a much more serious predicament than Wilkinson had been faced for reckless driving.

Held in default of bail, the men asked for and received permission to get in touch with their friends by telephone and early Saturday morning men arrived here, from Boston, it was said, to employ an attorney to care for their case in the afternoon. The car that figured in the seizure is said to have been registered in Hartford. It is believed that the men were bringing the alcohol through Connecticut from its original point of shipmen in New York. Naturally, the men were not communicative as to their destination.

The seizure was the first made of such an illicit load in this vicinity for a number of months.

Before Justice Frank M. Bedard in Brooklyn, Saturday afternoon George Wilkinson of West Somerville, Mass., was fined $100 for transporting alcohol, $25 for driving a car without a license and $25 for reckless driving. Costs were added to the fines.

Louis Bronstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., who riding with Wilkinson, when he was captured by the state police Friday night in Brooklyn was fined $100 and costs, which he paid.

Millard D. Hildreth of Pomfret Landing died at his home in that place Saturday. He was the son of Ezekial and Mary D. Joyce Hildreth and was born in Brandon, N. Y., December 17, 1849. He had lived in Pomfret for many years and had been engaged as a farmer. He leaves his wife and three sons, Walter of Philadelphia, Frank of San Diego, Calif., and Frederick of Chicopee Falls. There is also a brother, Frank of North Bangor, N. Y.

KICKING HORSES SEND TWO MEN TO HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 3—John Stankovitch of Moosup was kicked in the face by a horse that he had purchased at an auction sale at the Matson place in Voluntown Saturday afternoon and so badly injured that a physician who saw him later in the town of Plainfield ordered his immediate removal to the Backus hospital in Norwich. The auction was being conducted by J. Carl Witter of Danielson.

Stankowitch was brought to the Backus hospital in Norwich by Joseph Boris of Plainfield and the wounds about his face were dressed. Stankovitch had lost much blood and all the teeth had been loosened and knocked out of the lower jaw and his lips badly cut. Sunday his condition was considered good.

Boris returned to Plainfield Saturday night but on Sunday evening at 7:45 o'clock was himself a patient at the Backus hospital, suffering with a deep scalp wound caused by being kicked in the head by one of his own horses early Sunday evening. Ten stitches were required to close the wound but it is believed that his injury will not prove of serious nature.

Discussing the newly established Wednesday evening coach service between Goodyear and Putnam a Putnam paper incluoes the following significant line: "It was apparent that there was a desire on the part of the people of the village for some sort of transportation and that they would welcome an opportunity of a bus line to Putnam, or anywhere else for that matter." And again "The people of the village were anxious to have some way of getting out to do their trading."

These things were determined by a committee of members of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce that went to Goodyear and found the mill officials and operatives receptive to the establishment of a coach line service.

Here is the story of the activity that preceded the inducing of the Connecticut company to give a service that Danielson's business interests regard as discriminatory. There would not be the slightest objection here to a Goodyear-Putnam service if such a Goodyear-Danielson service as has been wanted for months was likewise established. It is related that 15 people made the round trip out of Goodyear to Putnam last Wednesday night, and that was a rainy night and the first trip. If these same people had desired to come to Danielson, there was no coach service to rin gthem here.

The cotton textile business of the south is not so much better than it is in the north this spring as many people suppose. Walter Anderson, of the Jacobs Manufacturing company, returned Saturday morning from a week spent in Atlanta and other southern cities. He found the cotton textile business spotty and none too encouraging as a whole. Mr. Anderson said that while he was in Atlanta anpouncement was made of the purchase of one of the largest mills in the south by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, which owns and operates the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of this town. Last year the Goodyear company purchased what is now known as the Devon mills in New Bedford, where about 1,300 people are employed.

Skin Troubles

Come from Constipation

Constipation is the cause of most complexion troubles. Poisons from the waste matter are picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin.

No one needs to have a sallow, muddy complexion. Proper diet, exercise, surface cleanliness and above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents the formation of intestinal poisons that ruin your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

ASK CO-OPERATION FOR CLEAN-UP WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, May 3—This is Clean-up week in Putnam. The city council is co-operating with the chamber of commerce in the city's annual house cleaning. The city teams will collect refuse on Wednesday and Thursday. In order to avail themselves of the offer of the city, householders must place their refuse and rubbish at the curb. This is in order to facilitate the work, as the small number of men available could not accomplish the work in two days if they had to invade back yards and out-of-the-way places.

On Wednesday the teams will cover the east side of the city, that is all of that section lying east of the railroad tracks and on Thursday the west side will be covered which will include all of that territory west of the railroad tracks.

If each individual property owner or tenant will do his share, the work can be accomplished easily. If here and there one will shirk the job the city will not have the uniformly neat appearance that is hoped for. After the winter months there is always an accumulation of dirt. Many people have already tidied up their premises. What is desired that every yard on every street be put in order.

The school children have been asked to take their part in the annual clean-up activities. They have always been enthusiastic workers during this period. Putnam looks to every man to do his spring cleaning during the week beginning Monday, May 3, and ending Saturday evening, May 8.

MASONS OPEN NEW PUTNAM CLUB HOUSE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 3—The most successful affair in the history of local Masonic bodies was the opening night of the auditorium at the Masonic club house on South Main street.

It was limited to Masons and members of their families but more than 250 tickets were sold and more than three fourths of that number were in attendance, including several from Webster, Woodstock, North Grosvenordale and Danielson.

The Order of the Eastern Star sponsored the affair but they had the active held of the other local Masonic bodies including the Masonic club. The second floor of the club house has been converted into one single room with the exception of ample space in the rear which has been made into a model kitchen, equipped with every modern device for serving banquets. The room, a small auditorium, which as a dining room accommodates 300 people, is very attractive. The walls and ceiling are finished in light tones and the hard wood floor is ideal for dancing. It was used for this purpose after the last dinner had been served, although during the serving of the dinner, two little girls Florence Pray and Ruth Bradley, gave an exhibition dance, a novel feature that was greatly enjoyed.

After the tables had been cleared away, five little girls, Florence Pray of Ballouville; Bettie Maitland of Thompson; Ruth Bradley, Janet McIntyre and Pauline Rawley of Putnam danced several fancy dances. Following this the older people danced until a late hour. In the club rooms on the first floor there were 30 tables of whist players.

Those who had charge of the very successful affair were Mrs. John C. Bates as chairman of the entertainment committee of the Eastern Star, Mrs. Hiram S. Whippel in charge of the dining room, and the following who had charge of the tables: Mrs. Arthur D. McIntyre, Miss Emma Roberts, Mrs. James C. McCulloch, Mrs. Ray Bosworth, Mrs. W. E. Moss, Mrs. Walter J. Bartlett, Mrs. Edward Bruce, Mrs. Alexander Maitland and Mrs. Louis Elliott of Thompson, Mrs. Chauncey Talbot, Mrs. Fredreick Baldwin, Mrs. N. B. Burton, Mrs. Ralph L. Kenyon, Mrs Eben Holden, Mrs. Irving Miron, Mrs. Walter E. Wheaton, Mrs. Justin S. Greene and Mrs. George Tefft of Thompson.

Dr. Sharpe's orchestra furnished the music for the dance.

Word has been received by the Cargill Trust company, that Miss Dana Freudenthal, one of its Christmas club members, is one of the winners in the country wide scenario contest, inaugurated last winter by the Christmas Club, Inc., of New York and the Famous-Players Lasky Corp. for original scenarios.

When it is realized that only 93 prizes were offered among seven million club members scattered all over the country, Miss Freudenthal's success is very flattering. She is secretary to John F. Reardon agent for the Grosvenordale company at Grosvenordale.

The judges in the contest were Jesse L. Lasky, D. W. Griffith and James Cruze, all of the Paramount Pictures Corp.

Miss Priscilla Smith spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith of Seward street.

Miss Elizabeth Smith of Bradley street spent Saturday at Worcester.

Miss Nellie White of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of Putnam is the guest of friends in the city.

Mrs. Charles T. Thayer and daughter, Miss Katherine Thayer of Pleasant street spent Saturday in Worcester.

ALASKAN RAILROAD HAS CREW MOSTLY MADE UP OF BANKERS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, May 4 (AP)—Uncle Sam's Alaska railroad is one where the principal members of the passenger crew are bankers.

The regular passenger train between Seward and Curry has the president of the First National Bank of Anchorage as its conductor; a director in the cab, while a heavy stockholder in the same institution is fireman. A lesser stockholder places the step for passengers to alight from the coaches.

The bank to which these railroaders are attached is controlled and financed almost exclusively by railroad employes, ranging from section men to high officials of the operating staff. Frank Knight, the president is a veteran conductor who came to Alaska with the building of the railroad. Charles Matheson, director and heavy stockholder, is an old time engineer. He also came north with the railroad.

There are more than 1,500 depositors in the bank which has a capital stock of $50,000 and approximately $600,000 in deposits.

Nine new passenger and fruit-carrying steamships will be built by the United Fruit company for its European and American service.

THIS HEN IN SIX "LAYINGS" PRODUCES EQUAL OF 12 EGGS

TIFTON, Georgia, May 4 (AP)—Byron Southwell, manager of the Agricultural and Mechanical Hatchery, has a hen that, in six "layings" produces the equivalent of one dozen eggs. Each egg contains two yolks, and measures 7 1-2 to 7 3-4 inches in oval circumference. Southwell is endeavoring to evolve a breed of fowl that will produce similar eggs.

AN INFLUENTIAL ALLY

Along with the good advice that was given by President Coolidge in his address before the National Council of Boy Scouts Saturday night, there was a hearty endorsement of the organization and the service it is rendering in behalf of good citizenship.

"If every boy in the United States between the ages of 12 and 17," said the president, "could be placed under the wholesome influences of the Scout program and should live up to the Scout oath and rules, we would hear fewer pessimistic words as to the future of the nation."

Perhaps there is a disposition in these days on the part of many to cave the training and guidance of the children to various organizations. Such may be forced by circumstances, but it can be easily carried to the point of dodging parental responsibilities. The good that may be obtained through such channels is not to be overlooked but there are duties which the parents should assume and it is impossible for those duties to be shifted to others and expect the right results. Parents should not be remiss or fall down in the discharge of their responsibilities.

There should be no letting up in good home influences. Upon this point there must be the heartiest endorsement given to the president's words when he said the influence of home and religion are the greatest factors in shaping the destinies of the youth of today and that the Boy Scout movement "can never be a success as a substitute, but only as an ally of strict parental control and family life under religious influences."

Great benefits have most certainly been derived from the work of the Boy Scout organization. Its influences have widespread and in the right direction. It is most certainly an ally of the home and through the principles it teaches it is making mighty contributions to the betterment of youth and the training of good citizens.

BALLOON RACES

Probably the number interested in balloon racing is small and yet they can be expected to endure their interest quite the same as the automobile racer or those who participate in other contests. It is a case of every one to his own taste and while these may not be very manly amusements, willing or prepared to engage in balloon racing there is no doubt a widespread general interest in such contests. Every contest has its followers and while ballooning may not be as popular as baseball or football it has its adherents and it must be said in view of the limited opportunities that they make the most of them.

But what is difficult to understand is why people are disposed to shoot at a balloon when it is observed in the sky. According to Balloonist Van Orman, who won cup contests last year and the year before, his balloon Goodyear IV was fired on more than a score of times while passing over the mountains of Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia but fortunately was not hit. The same sort of a complaint has been registered following other balloon contests and it is hard to realize what the motive is of the persons behind the guns in seeking to hit such a target when it must be known to threaten someone's life.

Finding those who fired the shots is out of the question unless companions should tell. From the statement of Balloonist Van Orman the impression is gained that the shots were deliberately fired and intended to reach their mark. Proof of that might be a bit difficult and yet no one who has been the target of riflemen is apt to misjudge the intentions.

There's no justification whatever for shooting at a balloon, but there seems to be a possibility that those who did the shooting were not actually aiming at the balloon but were expressing their interest and elation by the discharge of firearms, about the only way in which they could inform the balloonists that they were observed. Discharging bullets at a balloon, if they were intended to hit, calls for the severest condemnation.

PAROLE POWER ABUSES

New York has had occasion to express surprise and distress over the action of its parole board. Acting as if it were created solely for the benefit of the prisoners and that the public welfare was entitled to no consideration, the parole board has repeatedly released prisoners where it appeared there was slight ground for it and before they had served their minimum sentences. It was simply a case of turning them loose to resume their former habits with no apparent regard for the fact that the public was bound to suffer thereby. On the other hand they have simply been telling the criminally inclined that, no matter how long they may be sentenced to prison for crimes they can expect to go free again in a short time through the clemency of the parole board.

It is a situation that arouses indignation, and it was only a few months ago that a change was made in the board which it was claimed would overcome the difficulty. Regardless of the reliance that may have been placed in that promise it doesn't appear to have been justified. The parole board has in the past week approved the release of a notorious gunman who was convicted of manslaughter and who, since his sentence 11 years ago, has escaped from custody and remained free for a period of three years. The impression is gained that the worse the individual and the less regard he may have for prison rules the greatest consideration he can expect to receive.

The case has aroused a strong protest. It has caused the governor to act to stay the decision of the board and there is a demand to know why there should continue to be maintained a parole board that indicates a seemingly greater interest in bad characters than it does in the proper protection of the public. The parole board may be a power for good, a benefit to those who have recognized the error of their way, but it is also apparent that it can operate in a diametrically opposite manner. There are times when it doesn't seem to think the public amounts to anything at all.

TOWN FARMS

The problem of the town farm changes quite the same as other things as time goes on. It is not to be supposed that we are getting to the time when we shall not have the poor with us, but the number varies, and while there may have been enough dependent poor for the town to maintain a farm for at one time that doesn't mean that it can be expected to continue or to increase.

The fact is that there is many a small town that has come to the realization of the fact that the expense of maintaining a town farm is not warranted and it is much better and more economic to board the town charges than it is to establish and keep up an institution for such purposes. Even where it was once done it has since been found advisable to abandon it.

It is the abandonment of the town farm that is being carried out in several Rhode Island towns. There the plan is to send the town poor to the state infirmary, the claim being that they would be better cared for there with the additional facilities available through the hospital.

In the small town the care of a few town charges involves practically as much overhead expense as if the number were larger. Frequently it is a case of keeping a town farm to accommodate one inmate. In such instances the placing of the poor in homes that are willing to take them is a far better proposition from the towns standpoint and it is not surprising that the farm, actually owned and maintained by the small town, is passing. If it doesn't mean less dependency it means a better solution of this problem.

PIERCING THE NORTH

Even as Amundsen came out of the frozen north after being considered lost, and as relief expeditions were being arranged, so Wilkins has returned to Point Barrow, Alaska, following a scouting trip, on which his continued absence and failure to communicate caused no little concern.

Imagination runs wild under such conditions and it is easy to fear the worst especially when it is known that the explorer has taken radio equipment with him. But there are conditions which present difficulties which are not always easy to overcome, and there are times when the radio does not put the operator in touch with the rest of the world.

It was a combination of circumstances that Wilkins encountered. He was not injured but weather conditions, the unwillingness to try to send a heavily loaded scouting plane over the high mountain ranges and the obstruction which those same mountains furnished to the radio account for the fact that he was unheard of for two weeks and then appeared safe and sound.

Pushing into the unknown involves great uncertainties, particularly when conditions such as those existing in the far north are to be faced. Whether they go over the ice or through the air the explorers cannot escape the difficulties which are created by serious barriers and storms. They must be prepared and naturally they must be resourceful. They recognize the dangers but they go with confidence and it is reasonable to expect that they will return from their adventures unless some accident befalls them. Even at its best, however, it is a severe test of skill against dangers which no one is disposed to rate as small.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

A little ammonia in water cleans white paints beautifully.

Reheat cold pancakes on a pan in a hot oven and they will taste as good as when first made.

Hard-boiled egg and watercress together make a delicious sandwich for the picnic.

A little lemon juice and a few nut meats are a nice addition to peach preserve.

After grating cheese or lemons, a very stiff bristled brush, either dry or dampened, thoroughly cleanses the grater.

Blue, green and yellow are all good colors for the kitchen decorations.

Powdered cloves sprinkled about the pantry shelves drives away ants.

The wire egg beater is splendid for turning and removing doughnuts from the hot fat.

Icing for cake may be prevented from cracking by adding one teaspoon of cream to each unbeaten egg. Stir all together, then add sugar until as stiff as desired.

Before you plan your menu for the week, read the market reports and get the best market prices. This is the best way to get a good return for your money.

In cooking anything in which milk and the acid of vegetables, such as tomatoes, are blended, dissolve a pinch of soda in the milk and there will be less danger of curdling.

If there is a constant smell of something burning when cooking is going on in your gas stove, examine the burners. They are probably filled from "boilovers."

With a cupful of cream, stiffly beaten mix three ripe bananas, put through a ricer, sweeten to taste, chill and serve in sherbet glasses, sprinkled with a little grated chocolate.

When making a juicy pie, brush the edge of the under crust with a paste made of flour and a little water, add the upper crust, press the edges together firmly, and less good juice will escape.

IMMUNE TO BREAKAGE

Lamp chimneys will last a great deal longer if, when new, they are put in a pan of cold water and heated gradually until the water has reached the boiling point. Remove pan from fire and when the water is cold take out the chimneys. The process will greatly reduce the chance of breakage.

TO WASH MOPS

Mops are dirty and unpleasant articles to wash. Try boiling them in an oil pail half full of water into which a tablespoonful of concentrated lye has been dissolved. Rinse thoroughly and the mop will look like new.

INK STAINS

Rub salt immediately on fresh ink stains on carpet and renew until the salt is no longer discolored. The spots may then be washed out with lukewarm water.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Excessive coughing, especially at night, can be relieved by taking a mixture of equal parts of cider vinegar and honey. A tablespoon makes one dose.

If you suffer with tired feet, put one part of cider vinegar, two parts of warm water and a sprinkling of salt into the basin. Soak the feet and let this liquid dry on, do not wipe it off.

Never fill a hot-water bottle to its full capacity. If the bottle is to be placed in a bed to warm it, fill the bottle three-quarters full. If applied to one's body to relieve pain it should not be more than a quarter full. This makes it light and soothing.

To make your hair soft and fluffy try the following remedy: Use a half cup of cider vinegar in the water when giving the hair its last rinse. This is an old English remedy that has been in use for many centuries and is said to be far superior to lemon juice or any proprietary on the market.

DECORATIVE SPREAD

Bedspreads are now being made very long and instead of tucking them in at the top, they fold back over the pillows—looking like an extra bolster piece. Bedspreads of a wide white or cream meshed material with colored threads drawn through are very decorative.

NEW GROUPING FOR THE HALL

Instead of the conventional console table and mirror for the hall a high back chair can be substituted with many turnings and a low seat. To complete the groupings there can be a wrought iron flower basket on the wall and a colorful rug on the floor. This arrangement is especially good for the small entrance.

MIXTURE FOR MOTHS

Dissolve 4 ounces of alum in 1 pint of water. Add 4 ounces of salt and 1-2 pint of spirits of turpentine.

Or dissolve 1 ounce of camphor and 1 ounce of carbolic acid in 1 pint of benzine.

Or dissolve 1 ounce of gum camphor and 1 ounce of red pepper in 8 ounces of alcohol.

CHINA EASILY MENDED

By applying a little carriage varnish with a camel's hair brush to the edges of broken china, the parts being neatly joined together, the fracture will, when thoroughly dry, be hardly perceptible and the china will stand fire and water.

FILL UP THE HOLES

Holes that appear to be Mr. Mouse's entrances should be filled with putty mixed with mustard and broken glass. They are not apt to storm their way through this mixture.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The most intriguing French slippers have jeweled straps and instees and heels incrusted with jewels.

It is quite noticeable that the skirts of the robe de style are considerably longer than those of frocks modeled on other lines.

The smartest gloves are of the slip-on type and have tricky fastenings in the form of double metal circles through which the strap is twisted and caught.

Evening shoes are becoming more than ever a toe, a heel and a narrow strap. The sides are cut away entirely and the stocking must fit with absolute perfection.

Printed cottons from France are decorative enough for any purpose, especially certain designs which have black backgrounds and flower motifs in natural colors.

A charming dance frock for the younger girl is of taffeta in three tones of rose, with flounces which shade from the pale tone to a deeper shade. The waist is plain and has a rounded neck and no sleeves.

Wide square scarfs or mufflers for men reflect the vogue of polka-dots. Some have white dots on a navy ground while others show effective color combinations exploiting the dot either solid or in an open circle.

The colored felt hats of the moment, with small brims and no trimming, are ideal with the tailored suit, particularly if they bring out a color contrast. Models of Parvenche blue, artichoke green and the brownish orange shades are exceedingly good.

A smart version of the jumper frock for evening wear has a skirt of chiffon printed in Persian designs and a sleeveless jumper of green crepe trimmed with silver cloth quilted in intricate designs. A stitched band of the metal cloth finishes the skirt.

MILLINERY TAKES VOGUE OF PLEATS

A new feature introduced into the mode is not necessarily confined to any single type of garment, but may influence millinery and accessories as well. Take pleats, for instance. The Dry Goods Economist spoke about their appearance in new bags, and now one notes their clever employment in new hats. An antelope felt hat from an avenue store has a high, square, creased crown which is laid in a single pleat at one side, from under which comes a loop and an end of grosgrain ribbon. Still further evidence of their influence in new millinery is a straw hat, in which the brim is laid in a double pleat at the side.

WASHABLE COATS ARRIVE

Washable gloves have held sway the start of the recent coal strikes and now the materials used in their construction have been utilized for coats, particularly suitable for chill since the start of the recent coal strikes glove suede and are made in either the sleeved or jerkin styles.

MANY SHADES OF GREEN

Spring itself has not more shades of green than has the wardrobe of the modern woman of fashion today. The newest shade of this color is denominated apple green, so light it is but a hint removed from cholera morbus yellow. In addition to the green tints, the spring color range includes browns, blues, the dove grays, violet and winds up with the bois de rose.

LAUNDRY HINTS

If you use hot water in sprinkling clothes you will find it dampens them more evenly.

Embroideries, laces and linens which have become yellowed are bleached snowy white by boiling in water in which bluing and lemon juice have been mixed.

An excellent way to remove ink stains from linen is to pour melted tallow on the marks. Then wash the article and the ink and grease will disappear.

A little borax should be added to the water in which sateen or any other cotton material with a glossy finish is rinsed. The shiny surface will be retained much longer.

When ironing with the electric iron, do the starch pieces first. After which turn off the electricity and enough heat will remain to iron several other pieces.

Don't let your husband go around with greasy soiled collars when a solution of ammonia and water or alcohol in which salt has been dissolved will make them fresh and clean.

TO LAUNDER BATH CURTAINS

Shower bath curtains, even though they are constantly subjected to the action of water, become soiled and grimy and need to be washed with soap and water.

They cannot be put into the machine or washed with the regular household laundry, as their rubberized surface demands careful and particular treatment.

First the curtain should be spread out on a flat surface covered with towels or soft cloths. Then, with a soft brush or a cloth wrung out of warm water and rubbed with soap, wash the surface clean. Rinse off the soap with clear water and dry with a soft cloth.

The surface is cleansed without damage and even the soft colors of the new waterproofed materials are not disturbed by this treatment, if a mild soap is used for the washing.

ONION MINCER PROTECTS EYES

The flavor of onion in foods is almost universally liked. But so many housewives object to its use because of the disagreeable effect on the eyes, and the odor which clings to the hands almost indefinitely in spite of the many precautions taken to prevent. Here at last is a happy solution—an onion mincer. It is a glass contrivance with a wooden base and cover which keeps all of the onion juice and odor inside. The operation is very simple, you simply chop with the sharp little knives attached to the center rod.

RIGHT GROUPING OF FURNITURE

Arranging the furniture in a number of definite groupings is the modern trend in decorating a room. A grouping will consist of, for example, a console table with mirror above, a torchere on either side and a small rug in front of it. Another grouping will be a desk with a panel hung back of it and flanked on either side with a chair.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The first city to have women police was London, in 1883.

The "Mary Pickford" of Japan is Miss Kurisma Sumika, whose acting in the films has made her the idol of Japanese movie fans.

Seattle, which has chosen Mrs. Bertha K. Landes as mayor, is the largest city in the United States ever to elect a woman as its chief executive official.

Viscountess Massereene is the latest member of British society to open a dressmaking shop in London.

Women's haircuts cost as high as 10 shillings in London, while men only pay about one-tenth of that sum to have their hair trimmed.

AVOID HOT WATER

Wash brushes in lukewarm water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Very hot water will soften the bristles of brushes and spoil them for good service.

DID YOU KNOW

That tomatoes may be placed on the prong of a fork, held above the gas burner for a few seconds to sear the skin and then peeled in less time than it takes to tell it?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time and Fast Time

Mr. Editor: I am very willing to give the Bulletin credit for expressing common-sense views in regard to a variety of matters, as a rule. I am also willing to admit that it is policy, at times, for any newspaper to go contrary to its convictions in support of some movement which seems, for a time to be popular. The rising generation is demanding and indulging in, more and more as time goes on, constant change, and a larger percentage of such change, as time moves forward, is not progress. Merely fads! What is known as daylight-saving time is one, and a very silly one at that; that is, when carried to the extent of having clocks in public places changed, and being recognized as a kind of time. As we have said repeatedly there is not the slightest objection to anyone's going to work earlier in the morning if he wants to, but do it on standard time. Standard time is here to stay. It is a law of the land. And furthermore it is the only proper and sensible guide for the setting of clocks in public places at all times. Every sound argument pleads against the introduction of any other than standard time. It means trouble and extra expense to the railroad corporations that must run trains on standard time. The almanac is the only safe and sensible guide—we cannot go back of it. Of course, if those who go to work earlier want to change their individual time pieces we have no desire to interfere with that right, but we do strongly object to the effort which is being made to oblige others and the public to do the same. As long as there is concerted opposition to standard time there will be a mixup, and those responsible for it should carry the blame, and not try to throw it on to the other fellow. I would suggest to those who have occasion to speak of the two kinds of time in some places that they say "time," and "fast time". The name "daylight-saving time" sounds awfully silly.

Stories That Recall Others

The Shortest Long Road

While not denying that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points Frank N. says he is inclined to agree with the sentiment of the country philosopher whom he encountered recently.

On inquiring the route back to the city Frank was informed by the philosopher that there was a winding road back that was longer in distance but was the shortest way to the city. When asked for an explanation of his "longest but shorter route theory" the philosopher said:

"Well, the way you've come is straight and you keep going without getting any where, but my route has curves and bends in it, so you've always got something ahead to drive to and you get some place all the time."

A Nerve Racking Start

Mr. W. was to be host to a poker party and he had arranged the tables, chips, etc., when the doorbell rang and there stood the pastor of the neighboring church making a social call and incidentally to interest Mr. W. in church attendance.

Mr. W. was greatly embarrassed and ushered the minister into the living room. The pastor's eyes were focused on the layout and he remarked with a twinkle in his eye that he might take a hand if he had any knowledge of the game. Mr. W. was frantically hoping his guest would go when there came another knock and the host ushered in a guest, who began: "If would have been here sooner by that blankety, blank, etc., car had not acted up."

And the air was blue. He then noticed the minister, but the latter relieved the tension by declaring that he also drove such a car and knew what the guest had to contend with. Extending an invitation to all to attend church the minister arose and departed to the peace of mind of Mr. W., who nevertheless says that all card playing in his home in the future will be done in the cellar.

THREE LIVES LOST IN BOARDING HOUSE FIRE

BOSTON, May 2.—(AP)—Three lives were lost in a fire which damaged a lodging house on Columbus avenue in the South End to the extent of $15,000 early today. The victims trapped in their beds were Joseph Addario, his wife, Laura, and their five-year-old child, Joseph.

Jacqueline Devine and Bertha Cashman were taken to the City hospital suffering from severe injuries as a result of jumping from a fifth floor window to the roof of a one-story shed. About 30 other lodgers were taken down ladders or jumped from windows without injury.

The fire started, apparently from a lighted cigarette, on the second floor of the five-story brick building and the flames worked both up and down the central stairways. The only fire escapes were iron grills connecting the fourth and fifth floors with adjoining buildings.

BIG THRONG ATTENDS BLESSING OF ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL BY BISHOP

The blessing of the new $250,000 St. Joseph's school was performed Sunday by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, after the high mass at St. Joseph's church, which had a congregation that filled the edifice. The solemn high mass was chanted by Rev. William J. Topor, curate at St. Joseph's, the deacon was Rev. Peter Bartlewski of Willimantic and Rev. U. O. Bellerose of Taftville was subdeacon.

Father Bartlewski delivered the sermon in Polish. He complimented the people on the beautiful school and the wonderful progress that St. Joseph's parish was making. He also urged the people to send their children to school and to give them a better education and thus to become better citizens.

At the end of the mass Bishop Nilan addressed the congregation, urging them to keep the faith, which they inherited from their forefathers and which helped the Polish people to survive during their persecution and disencumberent. The new school, he said, will help to train the younger generation not only in the services but will give them a good religious foundation which is necessary for good citizenship.

After the sermon the societies formed a cordon around the new building when Bishop Nilan, assisted by Rev. J. J. McCabe of Jewett City, Rev. W. A. Keefe of St. Mary's Memorial church, and Rev. U. O. Bellerose, blessed the school.

After the ceremonies at least a thousand people visited the new school which has been erected through the vigorous and effective leadership of the pastor, Rev. S. A. Ielek. Breakfast was served by the ladies of the parish in the new dining room to over 400 people.

CONSTABLE'S SHOT BREAKS INTO PETTING PARTY

Shots from the revolver of Constable Lucius Fenton broke up an alleged petting party conducted by three West Side young men Sunday evening about 10:30 on Lover's Lane. One of the three made a wild leap from the automobile and an even wilder dash through the thick underbrush, over stonewalls and fences to escape. The other two were captured by the constable, with the two Norwich girls whose frightened screams had been alarming the neighborhood for half an hour until a telephone call was sent in to the Norwich town constable and Norwich police headquarters.

Sergeant John H. Casey dispatched Sergeant Mathew H. Delaney and Officer P. Murphy in the motor patrol wagon, but Constable Fenton was just ahead of them in reaching the slaughter house yard on the Lover's Lane road. As he drove into the yard and turned his spotlight on an automobile parked in the dark, he saw one man jump from the machine and make a break for the woods.

Two shots fired into the air from the constable's revolver, intended to bring the man to a halt, only added wings to his flight and he disappeared in the bushes amid a great crackling of twigs and branches.

The other two men and the two girls were brought to police headquarters where breach of the peace charges were entered against the men and bonds were given for their appearance in court. The girls, who were close to tears, told the officers that the men wouldn't take them home. They will be witnesses against the too strenuous petters.

About two hours after the arrest of the first two men, the third man came to police headquarters and gave himself up. Bonds were given for his appearance in court.

CLASSES CONFIRMED AT TWO CHURCHES BY BISHOP

Sunday at the morning service at Trinity Episcopal church, Rev. E. Campion Acheson, suffragan bishop, delivered the sermon and administered the rite of confirmation to a class of four. In the evening he confirmed a class of nine at Christ church, where a special musical service was conducted in excellent form by the two choirs.

Bishop Acheson's sermon was from the text, We Keep the Charge of the Lord, in which he addressed the confirmation class and urged them to apply to all their acts the test of whether it would be pleasing to Christ. So would they keep the charge of the Lord.

POLICEMAN FINDS $46, RESTORED TO OWNER

While making his rounds early Sunday evening Officer Henry Davis found $46 in money scattered around the street near Falls avenue. He notified Sergt. Matthew Delaney, in charge of police headquarters. About a half hour later four sailors appeared at police headquarters and one of them reported that he had lost $46 somewhere between Summit street and the A. & P. store on West Main street. The sailor identified the money found by Officer Davis, giving the denominations of the bills accurately, and the money was returned to him. He was loud in his praise of the honesty of the Norwich police force.

Magnolia in Bloom

The summer heat of Saturday caused the magnolia in the yard at the Buckingham Memorial to burst forth into bloom. Its beauty is greatly admired.

FORMAL OPENING OF THE NIPMUC PATH

The Nipmuc path from Norwich to Webster, Mass., was officially opened Saturday afternoon by Norwich council, No. 309, United Commercial Travelers assisted by the Boy Scouts of this city. While this trail has its historical background it probably will not be as well known to the travelling public as the Mohegan trail as the latter route traverses roads which are either cement or macadam and have been accepted by the state highway department as a part of the trunk line system.

The southern end of the Nipmuc path passes through a country which is almost unknown to the average tourist and this adds a certain charm and expectancy to those who care to wonder from the well constructed and traveled roads. The Commercial Travelers in their program for the development of eastern Connecticut decided that the route of this old trail should be marked and they are to be congratulated on the accomplishment of the work.

Promptly at one o'clock Saturday afternoon the automobiles and Boy Scouts began to assemble at the Uncas monument on Sachem street and at two o'clock Herbert R. Blanchs, the secretary of the executive committee of the United Commercial Travelers, gave the order for the cavalcade to start. The automobiles were furnished by members of the W. C. T. and 35 Boy Scouts were their guests. The cars presented a very attractive appearance, being decorated with flags and balloons, and the Scouts were provided with tin horns. The trek over the Gallows hill road through Taftville, Occum and Versailles was an uneventful one, but on approaching the village of Hanover many of the inhabitants of the homes came out to greet the procession. At Hanover many flags were displayed and the residents extended to all a cordial greeting. After a short stop there the party proceeded northward following the road which parallels the Little river to "Appasuage". This is a place of great historical interest. Through a bequest from Attawauhod or Joshua (as he was called) the third son of Uncas, a tract of land was granted in 1678 to sixteen gentlemen from Norwich and neighboring towns and was called "Joshua's tract."

Cassacinamon, governor of the Pequots, was commissioned by Uncas to show these gentlemen their lands. Passing through Mamasqueage, a strip north of Norwich, he led them eight miles northward, by an Indian trail known as the Nipmuc path to a flag meadow north of the path which he said was Appasuage the point from which their lands were to be run and stated.

Here they lodged for the night, and the next morning crossed through the woods, ten miles to the Willimantic river where they lodged the second night and then followed Cassasinamon back to Namosqueague.

At Appasquage a picture of the entire party was taken by Scout Executive Bielefield and the Scouts explored among the ruins of the old mill. The party then proceeded through the town of Scotland and while the cross roads were sometimes not of the best, the scenery was wild and the country a new one to almost everyone.

Pudding hill was passed over and the view from the summit had a wide range both to the east and west. The roads through Howard valley were good and Hampton Hill stood like a giant to the west.

At Abington a stop was made, markers put up and then on through Pomfret. On Pomfret street the beautiful spring colorings were just beginning to show, and the sight was a beautiful one. This village is one of the most attractive ones of all New England. Now on to Putnam over the new "Memorial Bridge," and then to Thompson. Here the Nipmucs formerly had a fort about three fourths of a mile east of the village and one of their great sachems had a wigwam near where the Congregational church now stands.

Lake Chargog was the next objective point and about five o'clock the last stop to the northward was made at Bacon park.

Mr. Hill the owner of the beautiful resort on the lake, was there to greet all and extended a hearty welcome to the U. C. T. and Scouts. The boys especially enjoyed the lunches which they had brought with them and had a jolly time in the park.

Arthur Peale gave a historical talk about the towns passed through and a short sketch about the life and customs of the Nipmucs.

Secretary H. R. Branche then spoke of the aims of the United Commercial Travelers in their efforts commercially and various other ways to place south eastern Connecticut in the foreground. Southern Massachusetts he informed his hearers would also benefit thereby and Webster on the Mohegan and Nipmuc trail should co-operate. Scout Executive Bielefield led the Scouts in cheers for Mr. Branche who as the representative of the U. C. T. had provided the trip.

On the trip Charles W. Pearson of the U. C. T. led the cheering all along the route and was an inspiration to the whole trip.

Russell, the Johnsons and W. W. Bromley all contributed to make the affair the great sucess that it was.

The Scouts say that it was the best outing that they have attended and he U. C. T. have added more laurels for their effective work for the advancement of eastern Connecticut.

JARVIS PITCHES THE ACADEMY TEAM TO SHUTOUT VICTORY OVER CROSBY

Pitching brilliant ball Lloyd Jarvis hurled the Academy team to their first shut-out victory of the season Saturday afternoon at the Academy campus beating the Crosby High team of Waterbury 8 to 0. The largest crowd in recent years attended the game and saw what looks now to be one of the best teams that has ever represented the Academy sail through the Crosby opposition to a well earned victory. Only once during the entire game and that in the ninth inning did Crosby really threaten to score but masterful pitching by Jarvis, who struck out two men with bases full, spoiled Crosby's chances.

All through the game Jarvis was in complete control of the game and although nicked for nine hits he kept them well scattered and only twice during the game did Crosby get a man around to third. Jarvis fanned 13 of the heavy hitting Crosby boys and did not issue a single base on balls and the only man to get a free ride was in the first inning when Monaghan stepped into one of Jarvis' curves. The Academy boys gave Jarvis good support and hit well when hits meant runs. Crosby played a loose game in the field making nine errors that some of which proved very costly.

The Academy opened their attack in the first inning with three runs crossing the plate. Cimikoski singled through the third baseman but Sadinsky forced him at second. Jarvis hit to Monaghan who fumbled and Sadinsky went to third and Jarvis to second. Yerrington popped out to Ahearn. Tombari slashed a single to left field and both Sadinsky and Jarvis scored. Tombari going to second in the throw to the plate. Burke hit to the infield but Sutton missed the throw and Tombari scored on the error. Brewer was thrown out, Hartnett to Sutton. The fourth run of the game came when not a hit was made in the third inning. Jarvis walked and advanced when Yerrington was hit by a pitched ball. A passed ball allowed Jarvis to go to third from where he scored when Tombari hit to the infield the play at the plate being close. Yerrington went to third and Tombari was caught stealing while Yerrington held the bag. Burke hit to third and Yerrington was nailed at the plate when he failed to attempt a slide under a high throw. Burke was forced at second.

Mace Goldblatt, who by the way collected three hits in the game, opened the fourth inning with a single to left field and then stole second. He went to third while Greene was being put out by Sutton. Cimikoski hit to short and Goldblatt scored when Fregeau elected to throw out Cimikoski. Sadinsky fanned.

Goldblatt again led off in the sixth inning with a single and repeated his pilfering of second. An error by the catcher advanced him to third and he scored on Johnny Greene's hit. A double by Sadinsky and two errors accounted for two more runs in the seventh inning which wound up the scoring for the game.

A pretty bit of pitching was displayed by Jarvis in the ninth inning and by his work he saved himself from being scored on. After fanning Hartnett Burke let Ratzke's roller go through his legs. O'Leary and Monaghan singled in succession but the runners were held to only one base. With the bases loaded and only one out Jarvis was in grave danger of being scored on. Carroll was the next hitter and Jarvis settled down and fanned him although the Crosby player had singled shortly before. Fregeau was the next hitter and Jarvis fanned him on four pitched balls ending the game and giving the Academy it's first shutout victory.

This game is a large step forward toward the coveted goal of state honors and if Torrington can be disposed of next Saturday two more big obstacles will have been removed. On Tuesday the Academy plays its first league game against Chapman Tech at New London. The score:

FOOTBALL RELATIONS BROKEN BECAUSE OF MUSSOLINI

VIENNA, Austria, May 2.—(AP)—Football relations between Austria and Italy, most cordial in the last few years, have been severed because the Austrian Football association resented Premier Mussolini's attitude toward Austria, as expressed in his recent speech on the Tyrol situation.

The Austrian association declined to participate in an international football congress to be held in Rome, and in return the Italians formally broke off relations with the Austrian association until such time as "adequate satisfaction has been solemnly offered for the insult suffered by the Italian association and nation."

So bitter has the feeling become that both associations have ordered their member clubs to take from the walls of clubhouses all banners and flags, and remove from their cases all cups reminiscent of meetings between teams of the organizations.

RIVERVIEW WINS BOTH WEEK END GAMES FROM FORT TRUMBULL STARS

Riverview won both its week end games, beating the Fort Trumbull Stars Saturday afternoon at the State hospital, 16 to 4, in a free-hitting game, and again on Sunday afternoon at Morgan park, New London, 6 to 4.

Saturday's encounter was an easy victory for the Riverview team and was featured by the heavy hitting of the hospital boys and the pitching of Gibbons. Gibbons pitched a brilliant game, allowing but four hits and fanning 13 of the Stars. Behind Gibbons the Riverview team played well and every man with the exception of Dinty Moore secured at least one hit. Mills led the attack with three hits while Mondi Normandin poled out the first home run of the 1926 season.

Tilly Daniels who pitched part of the game for the Stars was ineffective and wild and Chappell was little better.

Sunday's game was a much better baseball battle, the Riverview club winning out in the seventh inning. West pitched for the Riverview team and Zepp pitched for the Stars, each fanning five men. The Stars took the lead in the first inning but the Riverview team by scoring a run in the second and fourth innings, evened the game, and then took the lead in the fifth when they scored another. In the sixth the Stars scored two runs and went into the gain only to lose it and the game when in seventh inning Riverview scored twice. Riverview scored again in the final inning.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE MEETING ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Another attempt will be made on Tuesday night at the Duwell club toward forming a twilight league for the coming season and it is hoped that the results will be much better than was the case at the last meeting held a week ago. At the last meeting only three teams were represented and not much of anything was accomplished toward getting started for the 1926 season.

Although several matters were proposed, it was decided best not to act upon anything until the managers of all the teams were present and on Tuesday night anyone expecting to enter a team is requested to be present as something must be done real soon if Norwich is to have a league this year. The teams represented at the coming meeting will have the preference of entering teams so that anyone expecting to enter a team and does not attend this meeting will be out of luck should enough clubs be present to form a six or eight team league, whichever is decided upon. In addition to the clubs which made up the league last year the Thurmon Co., Hardigg, Germania club, and Colored Stars have been mentioned as probable entires in the league. All managers of last year's teams who did not attend the last meeting, have been notified of the meeting and have no excuse for not being present if they expect to enter a team.

The Duwell club who last year sponsored the league have again offered to take it over, raising the prizes from one to two hundred dollars should the managers agree to play under the same conditions. While there is no doubt that the league was a paying proposition for the Duwells, they well earned everything they made and every nickle of the proceeds is being put into making the field much better this year. While the grounds are free to be used by any amateur some money must come from somewhere toward improving the field each year and it is only fair that teams playing where any money is being made should do their bit.

WARRIORS BEAT FEDERALS IN SPECTACULAR GAME

The Warriors finally came into their own Sunday afternoon at the West End Community diamond when the fast Federals were sent hurtling down to an 11 to 8 defeat after a ninth inning rally.

The game was fairly close throughout, although the Warriors were never headed. Both teams used two pitchers, for the Federals Mullins started but 4 doubles, a triple and a single in the third inning scoring 5 runs was too much and he withdrew in favor of Pheno Tombari who was also hit freely. Kampf started on the mound for the Warriors but was forced to withdraw because of a sore arm after pitching well. Rankin who replaced him pitched nicely and kept the hits scattered.

Gibbs triple and Courbois running one hand catch in left center were the features of the game.

The Warriors have two games for the coming week, meeting the Slippery Eels, an all star combination from Thamesville at the Academy campus in a twilight game Wednesday evening and clashing with Yantic A. A. Sunday in Yantic. Ed Healy will perform on the mound Wednesday while Couture will be saved for the Sunday contest. The box score:

WESTERLY

THOUSANDS VIEW MILITARY PARADE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 2—With a street parade of nearly 300 present and former military men of Westerly, Battery E, 243rd, Capt. John F. Datson commanding, was tendered a demonstration in Westerly on Saturday night for the dual purpose of promoting and continuing enthusiasm for Westerly's military unit and also a testimonial for their work of the past year. Battery E finished the year with the highest rating in the Colonel's state inspection and was tied with the Pawtucket, R. I., unit in federal rating.

At 7:30 the battery men assembled in the state armory on Dixon street and while waiting the arrival of state officers by auto and the band by truck a preliminary drill was given with the Armstrong 7.5 rifle mounted on the front lawn Special guests were military and former military officers of Westerly, Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion, Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the members of the Fourth company, State Guard, who were stationed at the armory during the World war.

At 8 o'clock a line was formed for parade, which proceeded, Railroad avenue, Canal street, High street, Broad street, West Broad street to the rail-armory, where further gun drills, man-armory, whereof urther gun drills, manual of arms and company drills by Lieut Andrews were made in the armory drill shed. The line of march was thronged by hundreds of people and automobiles and many followed to the armory to enjoy the maneouvers, presentation of medals, guidon, and band concert by the 243rd Regimental band, which continued until 10:15. Dancing to the music of the Crandall Sutcliffe orchestra followed until nearly midnight.

The formation of the parade was: Regimental officers of the 248d Coast Artillery, including Cyril L. D. Wells, commander; Capt. John D. Murphy, C. A. C. instructor; Capt. Henry F. Moore, regimental adjutant and Capt. Charles Nolan, commander of Battery H, of Pawtucket. Members of Battery E, of Westerly followed in line with Capt. John Datson in command, together with Lieut Elwin Andrews and First Sergeant N. Spry.

Other military units in the parade were members of the 243d Coast Artillery band led by Thomas Gall; members of Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Commander James Kane members of Merrill post, American Legion, Commander Walter E. Thorp and members of the Fourth company, Rhode Island State Guards, under Capt Abraham P. Datson.

Upon the return to the state armory the various units were parade about the drill shed, brought to a company front, and dismissed. Thep rogram of the evening was begun with selections by the regimental band, Thomas Gall leader.

Following the drill of the Battery E men, Capt. John F. Datson presented gunners medals to First Sergt. Francis N. Spry, Sergts. Paul Merrill, Edward Smith and Clarence Maxwell; Corporals John Blanchard, William Bredner, Frank Tate, Henry Kingsley, John Sullivan, Elmer Cushman and Louis Blanchard; First Class Privates Gardiner Barber, Harold Clarke, Clinton Durfee Clarence Geyer, Edward Heath, Nathaniel Tinkler, Alton Clarke and Edward Cavanaugh. Silver basketball watch charms were presented to John Harvey, captain, John Blanchard, Louis Blanchard, Walter Killam, Floyd Lamb, Francis N. Spry, Clarence Maxwell and Gardiner Barber

Colonel Everett E. Whipple, in the absence of President Lewis Stanton presented the marker or guidon, the gift of the Westerly Chamber of Commerce, in recognition of the good work for the past year by the battery members. He did this at the request of President Stanton and expressed his pleasure in the presentation of the red silk marker and standard with spear head. Capt. Datson in accepting the marker for the battery said that it represented, "the accumulated result of each man's best effort, its pure silk and beauty a money value beyond the means of the outfit," and closed by saying "with sincerest gratitude it was received, with equal pleasure to ourselves and honor to the community."

Regimental Commander Col. Cyril L. D. Wells was then invited by Capt. Datson to speak for the military organizations of the state. He said in part that the Battery E ought to receive the support of he citizens of Westerly for it was their battery and sustained with their money. Col. Wells spoke of the early organization in Westerly for common defence in 1710 and the expedition to Fort Royal. Westerly furnished in May and sent on Aumgust 14th 57 men to Newport and in June 1711, 34 men and this was the beginning of the military organization 216 years ago. Continuing he said, a charter was granted in 1775 for "the artillery company." Later it became known as the "Washington Guard." In 1873 it was known as the Batallion of Westerly Rifles and these charter organizations were supplemented by quota assignments. Successively it was known as Company E, Fifth company, Nineteenth company and reorganized as the Fifth company in 1920.

Col. Wells said that the people of Westerly were charged with seeing that the battery is kept recruited with high class men. Professional men, merchants, business men and employers of labor should encourage recruiting. Fathers and mothers should encourage their sons and even young girls should not yet young men call upon them unless that young man belonged to the battery. He said there were just as good charlestoners among the battery men as the cigaret smokers on the corner. The battery should have 80 men. Its present strength is 61 and it needs 19 men. Battery 1, he said, took first place in the colonel's inspection and tied with Pawtucket in the federal. He closed by saying "don't forget that it is your battery, take good care of it."

Capt. Datson in closing said that the battery needed more men and wanted 100 per cent instead of a rating of 80 per cent in membership. He told the colonel that it would try to deliver full quota for the annual tour of duty. He said that he would be available and ready to answer all questions of those desiring to enlist and that he would be found ready and willing to meet them in his office.

At the conclusion of the program, the former members of the Fourth company were assigned the company room as their headquarters for the evening and the cooks of Battery E supplied them there with coffee, sandwiches and cake. The company room was turned over to the members of the Fourth company, R. I. S. G., Capt. A. P. Datson, Sergt. H. P Clark, Lieut. William Mitchell, Sergt. David A. Lowry, Sergt. James Rae, Corp. Alexander Mitchell and Thomas Ornberg and Walter S. Price

In the captain's room a meeting was held of the members of the Veteran Board of Control, composed of representatives of Robert Bruckner camp, United Spanish War Veterans; Harley P. Chase post, No. 1265, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Harold W. Merrill post, No 16, American Legion.

The Packard Six
Five-Passenger Sedan

The Packard Six five-passenger Sedan is illustrated. It has proven the most popular of the eight beautiful and distinguished Packard Six body types.

First Cost vs Cost Per Mile

LAST year Packard Six sales were far more than double 1924 volume.

The reason for this greatly increased demand for Packard Six comfort, beauty and distinction is simple. An ever-growing proportion of the public is learning three important facts.

These facts are:

First. That the Packard Six is not high in price, costing far less than most men think. For example, the five-passenger sedan is but $2,789, delivered at your door.

Second. That the Packard Six may be bought on a liberal payment plan which distributes its cost over a year. For example, the down payment on the five-passenger sedan is $950, from which is deducted the value of the used car turned in. The monthly payments are then but $169.

Third. That it is better business and real economy to buy a good car and keep it twice as long than to buy a succession of low-priced yearly-models cars—and pay in depreciation more than is saved in first cost. For example, the car most frequently turned in by Packard Six buyers has been driven an average of only 15,087 miles!

Those thousands who bought Packard Six cars last year expect to keep them at least twice as long as the cars they turned in. And 98% of those who bought Packard cars during the past six years are still Packard owners.

Packard Six ownership costs less by the mile. May we tell you more about this famous car? We will be glad to do it while you ride in one.

Play Lessons

There's always a lesson to learn each day,
'Tis easiest learned when learned at play.

—Old Mother Nature.

Little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows love to play just as much as boys and girls do. But of course they play in different ways. When they are very young their play is a sort of kindergarten. They are learning things all the time without knowing it. Don't you think it would be very nice to go to school with Mother for a teacher and all the time that you were learning things be playing? That is the way it is with the babies of many of the little people in the Green Forest.

"Now, my dears," said she, "I want you to all scatter and hide"

You remember that Mrs. Grouse had ten children—ten worries, so to speak. Now ten all at one age are not easy to keep watch of; but somehow Mrs. Grouse did it. The very first thing she taught them was to hide and keep perfectly still. She began to teach them that almost as soon as they were out of the shell. They had wonderful games.

"Now," said Mrs. Grouse, "when I cluck this way, all of you drop perfectly flat—just as flat as you can make yourselves, right where you are."

So when Mrs. Grouse would wait a moment and the little baby Grouse would be running around this way and that way trying to find something to eat. Suddenly, Mrs. Grouse would cluck. Down perfectly flat would go the ten little Grouse. And really it was just as if they had vanished. It was surprising how they all disappeared! Then Mrs. Grouse would go off just a little teeny, weeny way and presently she would call come. Up would pop the ten little Grouse. Like so many little jack-in-the-boxes, and some scampering to her as fast as ever their legs could take them. They thought this great fun. They didn't know that they were learning a lesson. They didn't know that they were learning how to escape from enemies and at the same time were learning obedience.

But it was when they got big enough to begin to try their wings that Mrs. Grouse took the most pains to give them lessons in play.

"Now, my dear," said she, "I want you to all scatter and hide. I want you to stay hidden until I get very close to one of you—almost ready to step on you. Then I want you to fly and make all the noise you can to scare me."

So the young Grouse would scatter and hide. Mrs. Grouse would wait about until she was close to one of them. Then up almost in her face would go that young Grouse and make all the noise possible with the whirring of the wings. This was great fun. Mrs. Grouse would pretend to be very much startled. If one was a little slow about it, she would make that one do it all over again. Then one day she explained it all to them.

"You think," said she, "that this has all been play, but it has been more than play. Some day when you are big like your father and mother, you will find this very, very useful. The thing to do is to remain hidden until you are quite sure that it is no longer safe to hide. You watch your enemy until dangerously near. Then up you go, making all the noise you can, so as to startle your enemy. This works very well with Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Yowler the Bobcat, but it works best of all with the hunter with the terrible gun. You haven't seen him and you don't know anything about him now, but you will by and by. Now, let's play dodge. When you whirr up into the air, no how quickly you can get a tree between you and me."

So the young Grouse played dodge and it was wonderful how quickly they learned to dodge around a tree. Yes, sir, it was wonderful. They thought this game of dodge the best game of all. At the same time, it was one of the most important lessons of all.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

A Friend in Sorrow

The sorrow in your heart today /
Reflects itself in mine;
The tears that dim and cloud your eyes
Are welling, too, in mine.

So closely are our lives entwined,
So strong is friendship's tie
That when you smile my world is bright,
And when you grieve I sigh.
—By Katherine Edelman, in Houston Post.

Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep

"Now I lay me down to sleep:
I pray the Lord my sould to keep,'
Was my childhood's early prayer
Taught by my mother's love and care
Many years since then have fled;
Mother slumbers with the dead:
Yet methinks I see her now,
With love-lit eye and holy brow,
As, kneeling by her side to pray
She gently taught me how to say,
"Now I lay me down to sleep:
I pray the Lord my soul to keep."

Oh! could the faith of childhood's days
Oh! could its little hymns of praise.
Oh! could its simple, joyous trust
Be recreated from the dust
That lies around a wasted life,
The fruit of many a bitter strife!
Oh! then at night in prayer I'd bend,
And call my God, my Father, Friend,
And pray with childlike faith once more
The prayer my mother taught of yore—
"Now I lay me down to sleep:
I pray the Lord my soul to keep."
—Eugene Henry Pullen.

A Child of Today

O child, had'st thy lease of time such unimagined things
Are waiting for that soul of thine to spread its untried wings!

Shalt thou not speak the stars, and go on journeys through the sky?
And read the soul of man as clear as now we read the eye?

Who knows if science may not find some art to make thee new—
To mend the garments of thy flesh when thou hast worn them through?

'Tis fearful, aye, and beautiful, thy future that may be.
How strange!—perhaps death's conqueror sits smiling on my knee!
—James Buckham.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Do we all value our friends as we should? Do we realize that friendships exert a great influence on our lives? Some of us give very little thought to this very important thing, friendship. Some of us in an unguarded moment of jealousy, hate or envy or some trivial happening cast away friends with no more thought than if we were casting away a wilted flower. We are hurting ourselves by doing this and sometime or other we will come to realize it. Friends mean to us power in the social world, power in the business world and happiness if our friends are of the right sort.

Instead of looking lightly on friendships we should strive to keep them. Without friends we are alone and being alone we can be of little use in the world. A lonely man is an unhappy man however rich he may be. His money will bring him but little happiness if he is friendless. He may be a millionaire, own a palatial residence, a powerful automobile and a handsome yacht, but what pleasure can he get out of his possession if there are no friends to entertain at his home, to take with him on his drives in the beautiful automobile or on ocean cruises in the handsome yacht? Far better were he a poor man, poor in purse, but wealthy in friends.

Cultivate pure and sincere friendships and guard these friendships throughout life. As you grow from children to men and women and as the years roll by you will find that they are a precious possession, more precious than gold. And as a final word, remember that "a friend in need is a friend indeed."

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

Aviation

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first story I ever wrote to you. I hope you like it. I want to tell you about aviation. Aviation means the art of flying. No man can run an aeroplane excepting a good aviator. One who has had a great deal of experience in flying machines. One who can keep his mind on what he is doing and not let it wander off to other things. Running along in the air is a different proposition from running on ground, and the aviator has to be careful about the lay of the land below him or he will soon go astray from his course. The earth looks altogether different when viewed from the sky, then from what it looks at from the levels and when an aviator is five or six hundred feet up he has all he can to make out what is below him. When the sky begins to get cloudy the wind comes up and it makes the sky get dark and the aviator cannot see where he is driving. He should land as soon as he sees an open field where there is space enough for him to land. Because if he doesn't the wind will break one of the stays or make the aerophane turn over and down the aerophane will go and most likely kill the aviator.

One Minute of Embarrassment

Dear Uncle Jed:—It was a very nice day in the month of June when I was in the city. I thought I would go to a show. As I got ready to go my granny reminded me of taking my money, but like all children I forgot. I walked down the street thinking of what I would see in the movies. When I arrived at the door I asked for a ticket. I got it and then stuck my hand in my pocket for my money. Imagine my embarrassment, there was no money! I turned every one of my pockets inside out. I looked again—took out my handkerchief, some marbles, my jacks, and a pile of junk I treasured there, but all my searches were in vain, there was not a penny to be found. Very disappointed, I returned home, and there on the kitchen table was the famous dime. But I felt so ashamed of myself that I had rather stay home than face the ticket lady again that afternoon. My friends teased me for all I missed, but I made them believe that I cared little for that show.

The Butterfly

Dear Uncle Jed: If you or any of the Wide Awakes ever caught a butterfly, you could see that colors rub off and there would be a kind of dust left on your hand.

Each speck or that dust is a tiny colored scale. These scales give the colors to the butterfly's wings. If we stop to think about the butterfly it certainly is a wonderful creature because of its many changes.

First are the eggs. After a time they burst open and from each comes a caterpillar. This at once begins to eat. It eats the leaves that are near it. Sometimes it eats the shell of its egg. It eats until it can eat no more. Then it stays still until its skin bursts, when it creeps out. After that it starts in again to eat, and in time it is a full grown caterpillar.

When it cannot grow larger or eat any more, it fastens itself on a leaf or some other thing. It spins from its mouth a thread of silk which it wraps round and round itself. Covered in this way it grows smaller and smaller.

After a time it bursts its covering, and a new creature works it way out. This stays in one place for some time. Then the skin of this creature bursts open and out comes the butterfly. Its wings are so crumpled up that it is hard to see them. But if we watch we shall see it move about, begin to spread its wings, rise into the air, and then away it goes, looking like a beautiful flying flower.

Celebration of Arbor Day

Dear Uncle Jed and All of the Little Wide Awakes: Do you know a good way of celebrating Arbor day? I do and I shall tell you. My mother once told me that every year in Europe they planted trees Arbor day. I thought it was a very good idea, because so many trees are cut down that shelter us, and if we do not plant some trees in their place there would not be any trees to shelter the future people. So on Arbor day I planted a maple tree which is growing quite rapidly. I am going to try it also next Arbor day. I hope the Wide Awake boys and girls, who read my story will tell their friend to try it. It is not only the fun of celebrating Arbor day, but also the feeling of helping your country.

I remain a Wide Awake.

A Broken Promise

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you a little incident that happened to my girl friend's brother. It is as follows. The mailman came to Ted's house and there among the many letters was one for Ted. It proved to be an invitation to a birthday party in honor of his friend, Tom.

Ted asked his mother if he could go, she answered in the affirmative. The day of the party dawned bright and clear. Ted put on his best suit and promising he wouldn't eat too much he ran over to Tom's house. As soon as he got there he forgot his promise for there were too many goodies on the table. Games were played and then they sat down to eat. Ted ate so much that he couldn't eat another thing. When the party came to an end Ted couldn't move. His mother had to come and take him home.

The next party he goes to he says he is going to keep his promise.

Patriot's Day

Dear Uncle Jed: Today is called Patriot's day because it is the anniversary of the first battle fought at the outbreak of the Revolution which took place April 19, 1775. This first battle was fought at Lexington, not far from Boston. It is here that Americans shed their blood for the first time. This was the beginning of the war which was fought to obtain justice and liberty.

Bobby's First Shoes

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write a story and hope to get a book. The title of it is Baby's First Shoes.

They were lovely, bright red shoes, just the kind to please a baby. They stood there on the floor quietly waiting to be claimed. Baby spied the two bits of red and at once decided to go and feel. He edged quickly along the floor and fearlessly grasped one bit of red. It didn't scratch like Kitty. He pinches it, it didn't squeal like his rubber doll. He shook it, it didn't jingle like his bells.

Evidently there must be some mystery about this last prize. He stuck one red tip into his mouth but took it out very quickly making a wry face. He stuck in the other, too, but it tasted just exactly as bad. He threw them down in disgust and babbled some babyland prattle to them.

Then mamma came to the assistance of the tiny puzzler. She drew baby's two mysterious shoes on over his ten little toes. Baby sat very quiet and looked very thoughtfully at his newly shod feet. They had never been housed before. Baby rather doubtfully wriggled his toes in their pens.

But, oh, bewitching that red was! He leaned over, caught hold of one little foot, watching flashes of red come and go, and cooing in a baby's own happy way. When mamma came later to find him, baby was cuddled down in a little heap fast asleep, with one little red shoe clasped tightly in each chubby hand.

The Panama Canal

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time, so I thought I would write about the Panama canal. France started to build the canal but so many men died on account of yellow fever that they had to give up.

But when the United States began it, they sent many men. They also sent doctors down to the hospital to study how the people got yellow fever.

They found out it came from mosquitoes. Then the United States sent down some poison to put in the lakes around so when the mosquitoes went to breed they would die.

Finally they got it all built.

My Dog "Watch"

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you about my dog. Watch is a white and brown dog. He can do many tricks. He can jump rope. He sits up in a chair and shakes hands with me. He lets my brother and sister ride on his back. He chases the cows home from the pasture, and is very careful not to bite them. We are all fond of him.

Moving Our Tent

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about moving. One day my brother and I went into the woods with my wheel barrow full of boards and tar paper. When we got to a place which I thought would be a good place for a tent we unloaded the wheel-barrow and made a tent.

When I got the two sides on, my brother went in to see if there were any cracks.

When he came out he said there were no cracks between the boards. But he said he saw something moving behind a tree. When I looked to see what it was I saw a chicken hawk. I was going to chase it away with a long stick but it didn't go. I looked to see what was the matter and I saw that his legs were all right and its wings but it had a piece of food which it was digging out of the ground. So I didn't do anything to it.

When I had finished making the tent we both sat down in it a little while. When we had sat in it for about 15 minutes we went back home. When I got back home I looked to see where my brothers was but I could see him nowhere so I went to my neighbor's to see if he was there. The second house I went to he was there playing with a little girl. I told him to come home.

When we got home I looked up to the woods to see if the hawk was flying. And what do you suppose I saw? Three big hawks more than a yard wide. My mother told me not to go to that tent any more. But the next day another boy and I went to break it down and make another in back of the barn.

A Poor Girl

Dear Uncle Jed: A poor girl was once peddling oranges at the railway station of a small southern town. She had made very few sales during the morning and was turning away, tired and discouraged, when a belated passenger came hurrying along and seeing the tempting fruit in the child's basket stopped and asked the price.

"Well you give me two dozen of your oranges." As soon as the girl gave him the oranges the train whistle blew. That was the signal for the train to start. He jumped on the train just as it was to go.

The girl was sorry when she saw that her oranges were gone and she had no pay. She would not go home because she was afraid her stepmother would punish her severely.

With what money and oranges she had left she went to the next station to stay.

The girl slept on the benches in the park for the first night. The next day the man that bought the oranges from her saw her and said, "Let me repay you for waiting. I will give you ten dollars."

The child was much pleased to get the money. She then took the next train home. When she got home her stepmother took her earnings and she got no thanks for it.

Bunker Hill

Dear Uncle Jed: I think I will write to you and the rest of the Wide Awakes about the battle of Bunker Hill.

General Gage had received reinforcements from England under the command of Generals Howe, Clinton, Burgoyne. He now had a force about 8,000 men. Near the middle June, 1775, he planned an expedition to seize Bunker Hill. This hill is in Charleston and overlooks part of Boston. Gage was afraid that the Americans might get possession of it. If so, they could fire into his camp and make him very uncomfortable.

What then, was his surprise when he found that on the morning of the 17th of June the "rebels" had already seized and fortified the hill. General Gage saw that he must drive the Americans out of their entrenchments or they would drive him out of Boston. He sent Howe to make the attack with 3,000 British "regulars." The Americans had about half that number of men. As the British came up the hill the patriots received this order, "Don't fire till you see the whites of their eyes." They obeyed; when they did fire the destruction of life was terrible. The smoke lifted and there lay redcoats stretched in rows. The British fell back, rallied, made a second attack, and again fell back. A third time Howe led his men up the hill. This time he was successful. The Americans had fired their last round of ammunition, and, fighting desperately with the butt end of their muskets and even with clubs and stones, they slowly retreated. They were driven back because they no longer had means to continue the battle.

When General Washington heard how the Americans had fought at Bunker Hill he exclaimed "The liberties of the country are safe."

Peacocks Color Blind

We may be misjudging the peacock and rooster when we call them vain birds. For Dr. H. Erhard of Munich who has been experimenting with the eyesight of birds, says that the shimmering colors in plumage probably mean nothing to the feathered creatures. At least they do not appreciate colors as we do, it, indeed, they even distinguish one color from another.

Birds that fly by day, Dr. Erhard says, see everything in a bright red-orange light, being very slightly sensitive to the short waves that make up blue and violet. Night birds, on the other hand, never see red, but do see blues and violet. Tiny globules of oil in the retina of the eyes act as color screens and determine the birds' color sense, according to Dr. Erhard.

More than 400 navy planes of all types will be afloat with the fighting divisions of the sea fleet next year when the giant plane carriers Saratoga and Lexington take their places as air flagships respectively of the battle fleet in the Pacific and the scouting fleet in the Atlantic.

GIRL GAINED 7 POUNDS NINE YEARS AN INVALID

That's just what McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets did for the Babcock Girl—and is doing as much for tens of thousands of thin, underweight, weak and discouraged people all over America.

These sugar coated, pleasant to take tablets should be given to children instead of the vile stomach upsetting oil itself—they surely do help the frail, delicate little ones and 60 tablets cost but 60 cents at Lee & Osgood Co. or any druggists.

Read this letter if you have a child that needs to gain health and strength.

"My little girl was stricken with infantile paralysis when she was 5 months old and was an invalid for 9 years—when I saw an ad in the paper that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets would build up wasted tissues, I bought a box and she gained very slowly at first and after taking eight boxes, she gained seven pounds. Thanks to McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, after trying almost everything else on the market. She is on the road to recovery and goes to school every day." Mrs. L. Babcock, Appleton, Wis.

Imitations of McCoy's may be offered but be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine and if after thirty days' treatment you are not delighted with results—why, get your money back.

NEW LONDON FIRE CHIEF CHAS. ROSE INJURED IN COLLISION WITH TRUCK

NEW LONDON, May 3—While responding to a still alarm of fire, this afternoon, Chief Charles Rose, 67, suffered injuries that may result in the veteran fire-fighter losing a portion of his right leg. His automobile was in collision with an ice cream truck of the Eastern Dairy company, Mill street. Chief Rose sustained a compound, comminuted fracture of the right leg and is now under treatment at Lawrence hospital.

The fractures were reduced during the afternoon, but there is a possibility that infection may set in and if such is the case the leg will be amputated close to the knee.

The evidence of infection, if it does appear, would not be revealed for several days. If no infection occurs, it will be at least six months before Chief Rose will be able to use the limb.

Shortly after 12 o'clock a still alarm was received at headquarters for a grass fire on Pequot avenue. The chief's car, driven by James Woods, regular driver and with Chief Rose on the seat, started for the location of the blaze, together with Pequot Hose company. When the chief's car was passing through Pearl street the ice cream truck, driven by Arthur J. Page, 73 Riverside Heights, was operated from Green to Pearl street, just as the chief's car was passing Green street. In another instant the two cars came together, the truck hitting the fire automobile between the front and rear wheels of the right side, and beside where Chief Rose was seated. The crash caused both automobiles to climb to the sidewalk on the north side of Pearl street, the chief's car coming to a stop when it hit the building occupied by the New London Printing company. The crash was heard a considerable distance and the first men to reach the chief recognized the fact that he was seriously injured. He was placed in a machine and speeded to the hospital. The chief's car was badly damaged, the windshield and headlights being smashed, front and rear mudguards ripped away, the running board demolished and the body damaged. The truck escaped damage.

Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey investigated the accident and had Page arrested, charged with reckless driving. He was released in the custody of his employer and will be given a hearing in police court Monday morning.

When arrested Page did not possess registration; Page has been arrested on three occasions for violations of the automobile law.

There is a direct contradiction of statements relative to whether the siren on the fire chief's apparatus was sounded as the machine neared the intersecting streets. Several witnesses interrogated declared that no siren was sounded, while as many others declared that the siren was sounded continuously. Chief Rose himself, declared that he sounded the siren numerous times as the car passed through Union to Pearl streets and was sounding the siren as the corner of Green street was neared.

When the two cars climbed the sidewalk, it was considerably damaged and a young man who was passing the corner barely escaped being hit by the colliding automobiles.

One of the longest lists of charges to claim the attention of the police court will be that which is presented Monday forenoon, for tonight there are 30 cases scheduled to be called. Most of the cases are for intoxication. But there are three for breach of the peace, eight for frequenting a house of ill repute and one for conducting a house of ill repute.

The members of the orchestra that has been playing at the Crown theatre, were discharged Saturday night, the organ recently set up there being ready for use. It furnished music for the first time this evening. Another organ is being installed at the Capitol theatre and will be ready for operation during the month and then the services of the orchestra at that vaudeville house will be dispensed with.

Hobart C. Russell, manager of a towel supply company, was fined $5 in the police court Saturday for parking his car on State street exactly where cars are forbidden to park. He was there fifty minutes. The police officers doing duty along the principal streets or the city are wondering when drivers of automobiles are to heed the traffic ordinances. The average of autos tagged daily for violation of the ordinance is a dozen or more and still the operators do not heed the law. Russell endeavored to pass the buck to another employe of the company for whom he is at work, but the facts were against him and the fine was imposed.

Hot weather brought an increase in the number of strollers that get to this city. They are mostly without employment, but they are fruitful in stories that indicate that they came here in anticipation of getting work, though where and how is not known. They manage to get the booze that intoxicates them and they are generally taken into custody by police officers to get them away from the public eye and to convince them that they must labor or get out of town. There were four such in court Saturday. They are not wanted here, so they were given the chance to keep on the move. Whether they will take advantage of their opportunity and escape arraignment in court Monday will be known when the court assembles. The time of year is at hand when these hikers can be of service at the county jail so unless they desire to work for their board they will skip New London on their tour of the towns hereabouts.

The conditions of traffic on Bank street was such Saturday evening that they indicated congestion when auto travel is at its height so great that the street will not accommodate the machines. The autos traversed the street four abreast early in the evening, a double line going in either direction. Trolley cars could not get through and traffic from intersecting streets running into Bank was long held up. A police officer at Bank and Truman streets who would direct every other car that came along bound north would put an end to much of the congestion. An officer stationed at the head of Main street who would send every other car bound south through Williams or Huntington, St., would also create conditions that would be a relief to the congestion that now occurs on Main and Bank streets. It is contemplated by the city manager making Bank street a one-way highway, but the understanding is that the new rule will not be put into operation till the 1st of June. The opening of Green street to Tilley and the extension of Washington St., to Reed street would put an end to much of the annoyance that exists at present.

The body of Alfred B. Haynes, formerly of East Lyme, whose death occurred at his home in Washington, D. C., Thursday, was brought to East Lyme Sunday afternoon for burial in Stone church cemetery.

William E. Markham, 68 Riverside Heights, died Saturday night at Lawrence hospital. Mr. Markham's death following a surgical operation several days ago. He was a stable employe and is survived by a niece, Mrs. Herbert H. Scaplan.

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Phillips were held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at 15 Masonic street, Richard W. Mansfield, of the E. P. Learned Mission, officiating. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

The funeral of Walter H. Moyles, former New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad freight conductor, held this afternoon at his residence, 39 Georgiana street was attended by a large number of mourners, including a representation of employes of the railroad and members of Palestine commandery, who attended the services in a body. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. The bearers were Harry M. Darling, H. H. Smith and Ernest A. Phillips, representing the railroad employes and Henry Morgan, Charles Moffitt and Charles C. Perkins, representing Palestine commandery. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Giselda Fattorini, 50, wife of Edward Fattorini, died at her home, 118 Pequot avenue late Friday night after a lingering illness. Besides her husband, Mrs. Fattorini is survived by two brothers, Attilio Pierfederici, of New London, and Antonio Pierfederici, Italy and three sisters, Mrs. Sarah Ollvieri, New London and the Misses Josephine and Mariana Pierfederici, Italy.

Mrs. Charles Loper of Waterford; Miss Glennadel Williams, Westerly and Miss Salena Beal, Stonington, patients at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Frank DuBois, 48 Perry street, complained to the police Saturday afternoon that while his automobile was parked on Huntington street, near the corner of State street Friday night some thief stole a motor meter.

Charles L. Banta, 14 Shaw street lodged complaint with the police Saturday afternoon, alleging that neighbors, Mrs. Elmer Allen and Mrs. William Collins, had called him vile names and requested that the women be ordered to refrain from repeating the offense.

Several more autoists were guilty of violation of parking restrictions Saturday, but all were released with a warning. Among those to be warned for violation was Frederick W. Stanley, R. F. D., Norwich, who was summoned to the police station by Patrolman Frank Philopena, when the officer discovered Stanley's car parked at a restricted zone on Main street.

An automobile owned and driven by Miss Hazel Craddock, 37 Washington street, collided with a machine owned by John H. James, Bellaire place, Saturday evening while the latter car was parked on Pearl street. Neither car was damaged of consequence.

Mrs. Bernard Parker, 78 Truman street, reported to the police Saturday that her Ford touring car had been stolen, the machine having been taken from the garage in the rear of the Parker home during the night. Sergeant John Cavanaugh was assigned to the case, but could not find any trace of the crook, nor any clue that would lead to the recovery of the machine. Last evening two Bank St. youths returned the car to the garage and Mrs. Parker established their identity. Later in the night Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray and Patrolman Frank Philopena arrested the two youths and later two other youths who are alleged to have been implicated in the theft of the machine. One of them, a minor was held in bail of $250 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. The other was unable to furnish a surety on his bond and was locked up. The other two youths were allowed to go to their homes in the custody of their parents, but will be presented in court Monday.

There was a greater number of drunks about the city Saturday night than has been the case in a long time and as a result of the conduct of the users of strong drink there will be a half dozen or more presented on a charge of intoxication in the police court Monday morning. Five drunks were presented in court Saturday morning, but there will be a greater number to answer to that charge Monday.

Three sailors, Leonard Jones, 23, United States coast guard Mojave; Edward Smith, 23, United States coast guard destroyer Cassin and Roderick LaFlamme, 22, United States coast guard, state pier, engaged in a free-for-all fight on State street, near the Union station about 10 o'clock and all three were arrested by Patrolmen Dennis Murphy, Frank Corcoran and Edward Riordan. Jones suffered a severe cut over the left eye as a result of the fracas and was attended by City Physician George P. Cheney.

PROVIDENCE PRISONER HAS HEMORRHAGES IN CELL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 3—Frank McGill, 53, residing in Providence a blacksmith by occupation was arrested late Saturday afternoon by Patrolman John Courtney charged with intoxication. This afternoon McGill suffered two hemorrhages in his cell at the police station and was transferred to Lawrence hospital for treatment. McGill was presented in court Saturday on a charge of intoxication and vagrancy, but he obtained his liberty, judgment in his case being suspended. He apparently started out to get drunk again and succeeded, for he was found on North Bank street by Officer Courtney and again was lodged in a cell.

RAID ON MAIN STREET NEST DISCLOSES BAD CONDITIONS

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 3—The police Saturday night raided the house, 572 Main street, occupied by Jordan Manning, colored, and arrested Manning on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. Jordan failed to obtain a surety on his bond for his appearance in the police court Monday and was lodged in a cell to await the session of court.

Robert B. Coleman, 20, colored, and a coast guard sailor, was arrested, charged with soliciting and frequenting and he was held in bail of $250 for hearing in court, his wife furnishing the bond.

Mary Peterson and Lucial Morgan, both colored and both residing at the Main street house, were arrested on a charge of frequenting, as were Carlonis Washington, colored and Jake Reone colored, both sailors, attached to the coast guard section base; Urban W. Breault, James C. Hurley, Carl Johnson and Frank Bowling, all white, and all members of the crew of the United States coast guard destroyer Downes. All procured sureties on their respective bonds of $50 for appearance in court.

Coleman, it is alleged by the police, has made a practice of getting male companions to go to the Main street house where female company was provided them in the Peterson and Morgan women. When a large number of sailors were known to be in the house, shortly after midnight, the bluecoats swooped down on the place and arrested the entire gang found there.

Palace Theater

Comedy's the thing. That's what the public is asking for and getting, this year, more than ever before. Look at the big successes of the past few months and you'll discover comedies leading the field.

People want to be entertained, and that means, they want to laugh. How much truth there is in that old saying, "Laugh, and the world laughs with you. Cry and you weep alone." Tears form a large part of the normal life anyhow, and when you're sitting in a theater chair, you want to relax, and laugh and enjoy yourself.

Which, perhaps, is the reason I have made comedies my trump card. Since joining the Paramount forces, I have made four pictures. Three of them were laugh-getters. My latest film, Behind the Front, is a concrete example of what people like.

While working on that picture at the Hollywood studio, our lot was always the center of activity. If a player engaged in making another production could not be found elsewhere, a call was sent down to the "Sutherland Set" for the missing person. Why? Because those people engaged in pictures are always looking for laughs. They want something to vary the drab, colorless monotony of life. And in watching Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton and Mary Brian, our featured players, go through their antics, they got a peculiar satisfaction which is impossible to transfer to paper.

So you see, I like comedy. And after all, a champion is the chap who does best, whatever he attempts to do. And if I can make comedies better than any one in the business, I'll be satisfied to leave drama, tragedy and spectacle to the Griffiths, Von Stroheims, and Cruzes.

Strand theater

A few years ago a woman pleading the case of her client before the bar or justice aroused no little excitement, warranting even much comment in the local newspapers. But in Counsel for Defense which opens at the Strand theater today for a run of two days that versatile film star Betty Compson interprets the role as an entirely new type of female barrister.

The star appears as a young woman just out of college who is confronted by one of life's most tragic situations just a few days after she has received her diploma. Her father, an esteemed resident of a small town, is being victimized by political forces who would rob him of his invention. The daughter is confronted with the problem of not only saving him from financial ruin but preventing his reputation from being ruthlessly shattered. She is not an experienced attorney and yet she must defend her father on hard legal technicalities because of the cunningness of the scoundrels and their success in intimidating every lawyer in town against accepting a retainer from the old man.

It may readily be seen from the little so far told about the story that Betty Compson has one of the most gripping and compelling roles of her long and brilliant career as a screen star.

Others in the cast besides Miss Compson are House Peters, Jay Hunt and Rockliffe Fellowes. The story is from Leroy Scott's novel.

Jimmy Adams furnishes the laughs in For Sadie's Sake and a Kinograms completes the program.

Music furnished by the Strand Ladies' orchestra.

Broadway Theater

A complete new program opens at the Broadway theater today with Keith-Albee vaudeville on the stage. There will be five acts, which is promised to be a May carnival of joy.

There are plenty of thrills and breathless moments in the newest Tiffany production, Out of the Storm, which will be shown for the first time here at the Broadway theater starting today.

Jacqueline Logan as the heroine of this interesting film was never seen to better advantage than in her role as Madge Lawrence, while Edmund Burns as the young newspaper editor won for himself a host of friends for his meritorious portrayal of a rather difficult role.

In the supporting cast some excellent work was done by Eddie Phillips, Montague Love, Tyrone Power, Crawford Kent, Frona Hall, Leon Holmes, Jay Hunt and Joseph Girard.

The story was suggested by The Travis Coup by Arthur Stringer. Miss Logan and Burns were loaned to the Tiffany organization through the courtesy of Cecil B. DeMille.

Out of the Storm will be at the Broadway theater until Wednesday.

Breed Theater

What is so rare as a beautiful fashion show on the screen? Only the the day in June, of course.

When the show comes, however, as it did last night in the premises at the Breed of Colleen Moore's Irene, it is worthy of all praise. This reviewer is delighted to give it.

Gowns on beautiful women are like peals on a rose. Colleen Moore and a troupe of rapturously beautifully Hollywood coryphees parade in dress creations that give them the semblance of gorgeous flowers.

Miss Moore herself is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Irene, like Miss Moore's former triumph Sally, is based on a musical comedy hit. Lloyd Hughes, George K. Arthur and Charles Murray are featured. The picture was produced by John McCormick, directed by Alfred E. Green and released through First National.

Mr. Sunshine

A real mystery man, one of the strangest characters that has been seen in this city for many years, arrived in town yesterday, bringing with him a weird tale of buried treasure that rivals the stories of Captain Kidd and Treasure Island. The visitor, who declined to disclose his identity, other than to say he might be known as "Mr. Sunshine" was accompanied by a parrot which, like his eccentric owner, was a most peculiar sort of bird.

The mystery man first attracted attention by the squawking of the parrot in captivity. The bird's shrieks of "Old Gold, Old Gold" and its refusal to be quiet during the wee small hours of the morning resulted in "M. Sunshine" being asked to dispense with his plumaged companion or else leave a well known local hotel, where other guests were complaining that they could not sleep.

"M. Sunshine" protested in vain that in Egypt, where he claimed to be a character of no small prominence, though he would give no details of his personal history, parrots were welcome in any hostelry. He demanded that his bird be allowed to remain in his room and raised all sorts of a fuss when he was informed that either the parrot must go to the basement or he must leave the hotel. Hotel employes sought in vain to convince him that it just wasn't done in American hotels but the mysterious stranger was obdurate. And when an ultimatum was delivered "M. Sunshine" wrapped the gilded cage of his shrieking bird in a green baize cloth, paid his bill and indignantly left.

To reporters who talked with him he announced that he is a well known philanthropist and that he has plans for spreading "Old Gold" all over New England. Asked to explain his rather rambling assertions, he said, "I cannot say who I am or where I come from. But in good time you shall know. And when my secret is out there will be old gold for every man in this city." Hotel employes said he appeared to be plentifully supplied with money, but was eccentric in many ways. He talked ramblingly of "guineas," "bags of old gold," "my treasure chest" and such things and appeared to be a harmless sort of old gentleman.

While reporters talked with him, he lighted a cigarette and after taking a puff calmly handed the weed to the parrot. The bird proceeded to take it in his claw, puffed away at it and then blew smoke at the newspapermen. "It's his favorite pastime, I taught him to like cigarettes when I first had him" the strange old gentleman said.

The last seen of the old man he boarded a taxi with the bird still screeching "Old Gold," "Old Gold" from beneath the green baize cover.

SCHOOL PUPILS ASKED TO PREPARE A BUDGET

A number of Norwich school children who are depositors in Norwich Savings society through thrift stamps, have joined the long list of those adults who are making a budget. This idea was given them by the little publication Zest, the national savings bank newspaper.

A girl of 13, Fannie Kalakuniak, of Rome, N. Y., began the school pupils' budgeting. So much interest was aroused that the Savings Bank Journal, New York, which publishes Zest, has started a contest among all school children, who have the privilege of submitting budgets before May 10th. Zest of May 28th will announce the winners. Each child is to make out a budget for the month, taking as an allowance two dollars and as earnings one dollar and the child who apportions this $3 the most wisely will be announced a winner. Budgets must be signed with the contestant's name, school, grade, age, then must be mailed before May 10th to Zest, 11 East 36th St., New York City.

Here is the budget which Fannie Kalakuniak prepared, but contestants are asked to prepare one which will be original, not a mere copy of hers. President C. R. Butts and Secretary-Treasurer Guy B. Dolbeare of Norwich Savings society are greatly interested in having Norwich pupils try.

PREVENTION OF POISONING FROM GARAGE GASES

Preventing carbon monoxide poisoning in garages is the caption of an article in the weekly health bulletin issued by the state department of health. Carbon monoxide poisoning from all sources, fires, automobile exhaust, industrial accidents and manufactured gas has recently been declared to be a more serious medical problem in the United States than poliomyelitis or smallpox. This form of poisoning does not always end fatally but mild poisoning resulting in severe headache and at times other symptoms is common among those who work in garages and automobile repair shops.

A very simple device has been found effective in removing automobile exhaust gases and preventing headache in a garage in New Britain. The device was installed after conference with health officer, and consists of a large size flexible metal pipe for carrying off the gases. One end of the pipe is carried out through the roof of the garage and the other end fitted with a piece of rubber hose eight or ten inches long for slipping over the exhaust pipe of an automobile when it is necessary to run the motor in the garage. By means of a rope and pulley the entire pipe is pulled up out of the way when not in use.

This device was installed in the garage in question early last fall and it is reported that only one case of headache has occurred since that time. This case was in a man especially susceptible to headache from automobile exhaust gas, and who suffered very greatly from such headaches prior to the installation of the device for conveying the exhaust gases out of the garage. From this experience it would appear that the device is satisfactory in its operation.

The flexible metal pipe used is about one and five-eighths inches in diameter and is said to cost about ten cents per foot. A larger size pipe might have some advantages in carrying off the gases more readily with slightly less leakage in case its connection with the automobile exhaust were not perfectly tight. In buildings with other stories above the garage such a pipe could be carried out through a side wall and the exhaust so placed as not to annoy others in the vicinity, including occupants of the upper floors.

The cost of installing such a device in garages would appear to be small compared to the possible benefits to be derived. Garage owners themselves may be annoyed more or less by headache. In case of severe effects on employees the question of employees' compensation would be involved. In any event the prevention of severe headache among workmen would make for greater efficiency which alone would soon pay for the installation. The use of some effective device to take off exhaust gas, is recommended in garages and other buildings in which there is occasion for running an automobile motor or other gasoline engine.

It has been predicted that homes will be heated by radio in a few years

MADGE TITHERADGE SUCCUMBS TO PRESSURE FOR SEX PLAYS

LONDON, May 4 (AP)—Madge Titheradge, who has long been associated with Shakespearian drama, has finally consented to be leading woman in a shiek play, Prince Fazil, which Henry Ainley is to produce in an effort to recoup losses in Shakespearian productions.

"Ever since the wave of advanced plays began I have refused to act in them. But I am convinced now that all London wants is sex plays, so I have accepted the inevitable." Miss Titheradge admitted. "It is distasteful to me, but wholesome drama is not successful."

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my mother HARRIETT SPICER

Who passed away two years ago today

Well do I remember two years ago today
We sat by Mother's bedside,
Through the long and lonesome day.
Loving hands did all to help her,
We tried so hard to have her stay,
But as the day drew near its close
God called her, far away.

GUSTIE CHESBRO.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(By The A. P.)—With some of the uncertainties which have characterized the year's trade recently eliminated, the business outlook last week began to take on a more promising aspect.

One of the most potent factors in restoring confidence was the exceptionally favorable showing made by most of the large railway and industrial corporations in the first quarter. Net operating income of the class one carriers, it was estimated would exceed $50,000,000 for March, breaking all records for this month and giving the roads an unusually good start for the year.

Two of the country's largest industrial companies — the United States Steel Corporation and the General Motors Corporation—also reported earnings substantially above those of the corresponding period a year ago, attesting the huge volume of business transacted in the early part of the year. The steel corporation at the same time indicated its confidence in continued prosperity by establishing a fixed rate on its common shares equal to the combined extra and regular dividends previously paid.

Effects of the recent cut in the New York Federal Reserve bank rate were discernible last week in the larger volume of rediscounting attracted to this center. Since the speculative flurry which followed the change soon subsided, financial authorities concluded that the freer employment of credit represented the demands of expanding trade rather than any general increase in stock market operations.

An indirect but important influence in shaping the more encouraging business sentiment was the agreement reached at Washington for the funding of the French war debt. The elimination of this vexing problem, bankers agreed, would remove the outstanding sore spot in Europe and should aid materially in improving international financial and trade relations.

Signs of a wholesome industrial situation were seen in the recent adjustments of many manufacturers to the slower pace of new buying which developed late in the first quarter. Well fortified by a year or two of good earnings, producers in the important industries indicated that they would take precautions to guard against over-production and its attendant dangers. Lighter operating schedules were put into effect in the steel, motor and textile industries, but in some instances it seemed probable that a higher rate of activity might soon be restored.

The weekly trade reviews continued to sound a cautious note, explaining that weather irregularities were retarding the distribution of merchandise and the progress of crops.

EMPLOY SERICULTURE AS MEANS TO REVIVE PHILIPPINE SILK

MANILA, May 4 (AP)—Before the Spaniards came to the Philippine Islands, Chinese and Japanese exported a considerable amount of silk but in recent years it has not been an important industry in the territory.

Now, however, a serious effort is being made to add to the prosperity of the Islands through sericulture. The "Association Sedra de Visayas" has been formed in the province of Occidental Negroes with a capital of $250,000 and 1,500 acres of land well suited to the purpose has been set aside.

As early as 1821 a good quality of silk was exported to Europe from the Philippines.

DOCTOR GUEST OF JACKSON LATER SENT PHYSICIAN'S DUN

NEW YORK, May 4 (AP)—A doctor who called at his home for dinner and "a glass of grog" only to leave and send in a bill for minor services rendered while there, did not merit the approval of General Andrew Jackson in the Americana collection of the late William Green Shillaber of Boston, sold at auction here, was a physician's bill to the general. On the back, Jackson made this notation:

"Receipt in full of an extraordinary and unjust acpt. called to take dinner & a glass or grog on 3rd. of July 1804. bled Mrs. J. & charge $8. No medicine was given."

Henry B. Collins, Jr., a representative of the Smithsonian institution, who returned to New Orleans from Plaquemines parish, about 40 miles below New Orleans, reported the discovery of the largest known temple mound of the Chitemacha Indians.

DIVORCES GRANTED TO THREE BY JUDGE AVERY

In the superior court at New London late Friday afternoon Judge Christopher L. Avery, granted three divorces. Mrs. Mary King Gately, a bookkeeper in New London was granted a decree from Edward A. Gately, former chauffeur for W. H. Bindley of the Pequot, on grounds of cruelty. The couple were married June 16, 1920. In September, 1922, Mrs. Gately testified, she left him when his treatment of her became intolerable. She remained away for eight months she said and then returned at his earnest beseeching. He continued to beat her and abuse her, she said, and she finally left him again and returned to the home of her father, George F. King. Mr. King, testifying in his daughter's behalf, corroborated his daughter's statements as to the cruelty. Mrs. Gately was allowed to resume her maiden name, Miss Mary King.

Mrs. Myra Frank Ward of this city was given a divorce from Harry W. Ward on grounds of cruelty. The couple was married June 1, 1917, and there are two minor children. Mrs. Ward was given the custody of the two children, and Ward was ordered to pay $70 per week toward their support. Several witnesses corroborated Mrs. Ward's testimony regarding the cruel treatment accorded her by Ward.

On grounds of adultery, Rose Lange Davidson of New Bedford, Mass, formerly of Versailles, this state, was granted a divorce from Walter H. Davidson of New Bedford, formerly of Norwich. Davidson originally brought suit for divroce from his wife on the grounds of adultery between September, 1920, and November, 1925, and also claimed that she deserted him on Dec. 3, 1921. Mrs. Davidson filed a cross complaint accusing her husband of adultery with one Mary Blackburn at Norwich and it was on the cross complaint that the divorce hearing was held. Mr. Davidson did not contest his wife's counter-action, and she was the only witness. She said that her husband was the father of a child born to Miss Blackburn, and identified her husband's signature to an agreement that he and the Blackburn woman entered into regarding the support of the child. The agreement was introduced as evidence.

At seven o'clock on May day morning the seniors of Connecticut college sang their annual May day hymn from the steps of New London hall. Then they all rolled over to Thames hall where breakfast was served. The dining hall was decorated with red and white festoons. The seniors sang many songs, several to their sister class and the sophomores responded. Altogether the breakfast was a most jolly one. Then at nine o'clock there was outdoor chapel on the library steps. All the posts and lights of the college had been decorated as well as the banisters in New London hall by enterprising seniors. During the early morning hours the sophomores had hung May baskets filled with fresh spring flowers outside every senior's door.

Doctor George A. Gordon of the Old South church, Boston, spoke at the vespers service on Sunday at 6.30.

TEN GREAT MILESTONES IN THE CHRISTIAN'S LIFE

The assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church, Rev. Myles P. Galvin announced Sunday that the pastor had appointed him chairman of a committee to carry through the drive this week to add to the fund for the work of the local branch of the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service. Father Galvin has asked his committee to meet with him Tuesday evening.

Sunday was the fourth Sunday after Easter, the epistle of all the masses being James I: 17-21 and the gospel John XVI: 5-14. Father Galvin, preaching at the 9 o'clock mass, directed attention to the fact that for the past four years his sermons have been on the Ten Commandments; now, at the close he would have his hearers in the crowded church realize that these are God's laws for man, the foundation of the Catholic religion, unchanging and unchangeable through the years. He quoted the prominent Knights of Columbus lecturer, Peter Collins, who had said in a homely but striking way that the Ten Commandments will be doing business at the old stand when grass is growing over socialism, communism and every other "ism" which has emanated from the mind of puny man.

Christ has said, "If you love Me, keep My commandments." It was the preacher's thought that the commandments should be obeyed in the spirit of love. They are the ten great milestones along the road of life designed by the Creator for man's guidance. The Christian religion is intended by its founder to be a religion of love; reduced to its lowest terms, the Redeemer's doctrine was love of God, love of neighbor. True, too, they should be obeyed in holy fear; but chiefly man should take them as his guide fearing to offend that God who has been so good to him. Father Galvin expressed the hope that whatever he might have said in his series of sermons would have the effect of impressing upon his hearers the greatness of the commandments, the obligation to follow them, to avoid those sins against which they warn, also to practice the virtues which they inculcate. Not only should they be obeyed with love and proper fear, but in their entirety. It will not do to seem to follow them outwardly, yet in reality to be unchartiable, unchaste, or in any other way unchristian. And he urged all to perseverance in their observance—not to live up to them for a while, then unhappily drop back, risking displeasure of a loving Father and an eternity of exile from His presence, perhaps an eternity of companionship with devils. No so called earthly happiness gained by infraction of God's laws can take the place of the good conscience which comes from a knowledge that one is doing God's will.

In administering communion to the great number who went to the sanctuary railing, following confession the previous day, Father Galvin was assisted by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May.

NEW LONDON, May 3—One of the best plays ever presented in the history of Connecticut college was given in the gymnasium on Saturday evening, May 1, "Quality Street," by J. M. Barrie was the play chosen for the annual spring presentation of the dramatic club. It would be a hard task to choose the outstanding actors, since each one chosen acted her part to perfection. Miss Van Horn, as the winsome Miss Phoebe, heroine of the play and Miss Bayley as the dashing Captain Brown, played their parts in a manner that savored much of professional ability. Miss Cloyes, as Susan, the prime minister, but highly ludicrous elder sister of Phoebe acted in the very manner that a highly respectable maiden of advanced years would assume. Miss Constance Clapp, daughter of Principal and Mrs. Henry Clapp or Lincoln avenue, Norwich, portrayed the role of Miss Mary Willoughby, neighbor of the Throssels, most realistically

MISS CONSTANCE CLAPP

Miss Clapp is a senior at Connecticut college, majoring in English. During her four years at college she has been a member of the history club, psychology and dramatic clubs. She showed great skill in her interpretation of the difficult character part of Miss Mary Willoughby, rendering the role in a most life-like manner. She received several bouquets of roses and sweet peas during the curtain calls.

The cast follows:

Miss Phoebe Throssel, Hilda Van Horne, Cleveland; Miss Susan Throssel, Edith Cloyes, Lexington, Mass., Miss Mary Willoughby, Miss Constance Clapp, Norwich; Miss Fanny Willoughby, Barbara Bell, Plantaville; Miss Henrietta Turnbull, Miss Luna Somers, Lynn, Mass.; Patty, the maid, Miss Katherine Foster, Boston, Mass.; Miss Charlotte Parrot, Miss Marguerita Briggs, Westfield, Mass.; Harriet, Dorothy Davenport, Rochester, N. Y.; Valentine Brown, Miss Dorothy Bayley, New York city; Ensign Bladee, Lucy Norris, La Molle, Iowa; Lieutenant Spicer, Ione Barrett, Katonah, N. Y.; Sergeant, Ruth Mc Caslin, Cleveland, O.; children: Arthur, Edith Clark, Montclair, N. J.; Georgie, Frances Jones, Hartford; Isabella, Margaret Battles, New London; Virginia, Elizabeth Platt, New Rochelle, N. Y.

The staff for the arrangements of the play proved highly capable. Much credit is due Miss Katherine King of New York city for her efficient coaching. Miss Eleanor Wood was stage manager. Miss Madelyn Smith of Montclair attended to the properties. Miss Katherine Sembrada of Brooklyn, New York, was property man; and the Misses Margaret Merriam of Wallingford and Margaret Ebsen of Hoboken were costume mistresses. Miss Marjorie Lloyd was make-up mistress and Miss Harriet Stone, director of the music. Miss Louis Gunther acted as head usher.

The patrons and patronesses were: Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall, Dean Mary K. Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. King, Dr. Leonie Setchanove, and Miss Caro Ernst.

Altogether the presentation of "Quality Street" was a huge success. It is to be given again on the week end of May 8th, Junior Prom week end at the

MOTOR VEHICLE DEATH RATE GROWS IN STATE

It has been determined that 30.6 per cent of all accidental deaths which occurred in Connecticut last year were caused by motor vehicles, whereas the ratio for the United States as a whole was 20.5 per cent. Fifteen years ago, motor vehicle deaths in Connecticut were only 3.4 per cent of all accidental deaths in the state and ratio for the country was 2.3 per cent.

The ratio for Connecticut and the United States was the same in 1911 but the proportion of motor vehicle deaths has increased in Connecticut more rapidly than in the country at large in every succeeding year. During 1925, 354 people met death as a result of motor vehicles in Connecticut and about 2,000 as a result of motor vehicle accidents throughout the country. The years of 1918 and 1919 saw the sharpest increase in the Connecticut percentage of motor vehicle deaths.

The annual motor vehicle death rate has greatly surpassed the diphtheria and typhoid death rates in Connecticut. Last year typhoid fever caused 2.5 deaths per 100,000 population in this state, while diphtheria caused eight deaths and motor vehicles 23.

Charts prepared by Sheffield scientific school for the state motor vehicle department show a practically steady increase in the motor vehicle death rate in the past 15 years, while the general tendency of both the typhoid fever and diphtheria death rates has been downward. In 1915, motor vehicles and typhoid apeared to be equally deadly in this state, being responsible for 12 deaths per 100,000 population. At that time diphtheria was still taking more lives than motor vehicles, but the following year, the motor vehicle, as a death-dealing instrument, overtook diphtheria and, with slight fluctuations, ran practically parallel to diphtheria in that respect until 1930, when the diphtheria rate fell sharply to an unprecedented level and the motor vehicle rate advanced gradually for each year, except 1922.

The authorities are attempting to educate the people of the state to combat the motor vehicle menace as they have with considerable success combatted the typhoid and diphtheria menaces.

DRIVER OF WRECKED CAR RUNS AWAY AFTER CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 3—A Hudson touring car, bearing Mass. license 504,591, with the initials D. T. W. on the side, when operated down Vincent Carr Hill, High street, Sunday afternoon, about 2.30 o'clock failed to make the turn toward Pleasant street, crashed through the stone wall and capsized on the land of Miss Hannah Crandall. The machine was a total wreck. The driver crawled out from the wreckage, asking the way to New London and ran quickly away. The two young men, occupants of the rear seat, were taken to the nearby house of Henry E. Chase, where they were treated by Dr. M. H. Scanlon for bruises and scratches. Patrolman George Madison investigated the accident. The two young men are detained at police headquarters.

It is thought by the police that the automobile was a stolen one. The two men are reported to have said they came from Milford, Mass., where they were picked up by the driver, whose identity was unknown. It is also reported that they told the police that it is better to have detained two men instead of one. The police are of the opinion that they may change their story when the vanished driver is brought back to Westerly from New London, where he is supposed to have gone.

GAVE RECOGNITION TO YOUNG PEOPLE IN CHURCH

In connection with the observance of the Lord's supper at the Central Baptist church Sunday morning there was special recognition of the young people and their share in the work of the church. Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt extended the right hand of fellowship to Dorothy Blatherwick, Ruth Blatherwick, Doris Brown, Ruth Brown, Allyn L. Brown, Jr., Sarah Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Freeman. Following the challenging words of the pastor to the new members, the young people who were seated in the front of the church rose and stood in silent prayer that they might always by word and deed be a help and inspiration to these new members.

Since Sunday was the closing of the benevolence year, a special offering was made and the total given by the Central church during the year was reported as $7,000, the sum which the church had set out to reach.

5,000,000 WORKERS WENT OUT ON GENERAL STRIKE IN GREAT BRITAIN AT MIDNIGHT; BAFFLING ECONOMIC CRISIS CREATED Organized Labor of Great Britain is Backing Up the Miners in Their Demand For More Pay—Unless Speedily Terminated Acute Suffering and Loss of Millions of Dollars Will Result—Chancellor of Exchequer Churchill Asserts the Outcome Will Mean Either the End of Parliamentary Government or Its Decisive Victory.

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—Organized labor of Great Britain is in revolt; it is backing up the fight of the miners in their demand for what they consider a living wage and proper working conditions. At midnight a general strike of the industrial workers became effective throughout the country.

This widespread demonstration by some five million workers will, unless speedily terminated, cause untold suffering, with the loss of millions of dollars.

The last hours before the general strike call went forth were anxious ones. Thousands of citizens assembled in Parliament square and the adjoining streets, while within the house ministers of the crown and former ministers, representing labor, battled in support of their respective contentions.

Premier Baldwin criticized the labor leaders, on the ground that, in ordering the general strike, they were threatening the basis of orderly government and were nearer to proclaiming civil war than Great Britain had been for centuries.

Ramsay MacDonald, the labor leader, said the country faced a situation, whose end and evolution not even the keenest observer could visualize.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, asserted that if this conflict were fought out to its conclusion it could only mean the end of parliamentary government or its decisive victory.

SCENES AT WESTMINSTER REMINISCENT OF WARTIME

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—A general strike in all the great industries throughout the country began at midnight. It effected close on to five million workers, including more than a million miners who had already given up their labors in the coal fields.

Another day of suspense, of hopes and fears, ended with a complete breakdown of last hour negotiations between the government and representatives of the trades union congress, who had been delegated as spokesmen for all th men.

Throughout the day and night every effort was put forth to bring about an agreement, and even at a late hour there was promise of a renewal of the negotiations, which gave the anxious national hope that a way out would be found.

The final conferences developed out of the debate in the house of commons, but it is still difficult to ascertain exactly what happened in the house, although it is believed that Premier Baldwin and the other ministers had further interviews with the negotiating committee of the trades union council.

The debate in the commons adjourned about 11:30, with nothing accomplished, and large crowds remained assembled outside the parliament buildings waiting the final announcement.

The scenes at Westminister were reminiscent of the warlike days of July 1914. Downing street was completely impassable, and the crowds lining both sides of Bridge street, leading to the houses of parliament, and Parliament square itself were estimated at many thousands, silently but anxiously watching the comings and goings of the members of parliament and other prominent personages.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, on leaving the precincts of the house shortly before midnight, said to the newspaper men: "They have failed; the general strike is on tomorrow."

Similar scenes were witnessed around the headquarters of the trades union congress in Eccleston square, which throughout the evening was besieged by volunteers offering their services. Late in the evening from the room where the council was sitting came the strains of "Glory, Glory Hallelujah," and the singing continued for several minutes.

It seems as though a general stoppage of the press will be immediate, as many of the London papers were only able to issue early editions for the country, the printers quitting at midnight.

All the wartime routine measures so far as concerns vital supplies are being put into effect at once and there will probably be wartime regulations for the protection of the public. Theatre managers held a meeting last night to discuss whether they should close down during the strike period, but no decision was reached.

A section of the crowd outside of parliament amused itself for nearly an hour by singing "The Red Flag" and cheering for the miners. Another section vigorously sang "God Save the King." It looked at times as though trouble were brewing, but the police managed to keep the crowds moving and thus prevented disorders.

A. J. Cook, in a statement, said: "The government right up to the last has taken the side of the owners, and has interpreted the royal commission's report to mean an immediate reduction of wages for the miners. That we have refused to accept and will continue to refuse by the help of the whole trade union movement.

"The only terms of peace that are possible are terms that will ensure the status quo for the miners in the coalfields while reorganization is taking place."

STATEMENT MADE BY LEADERS OF THE MINERS

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—The actual position in dispute as between the government and the miners is, the miners' leaders contend, that the men should not be asked to accept reduced wages and lengthened hours until the government has taken steps to put into operation the recommendations for the reorganization of the mining industry made by the royal commission.

According to estimates by impartial experts, the miners' wages vary from 75 shillings ($18) weekly for the highest paid skilled workers to 45 shillings for unskilled men, and, in addition, the men generally receive gratis supplies of household coal.

The commission's report, although it did not precisely exclude the possibility of longer hours of work, emphasized the hope that such lengthening would not be necessary, because, in the commission's opinion, longer hours would bring increasing unemployment and probably would have the effect of causing an extension of hours of work in the continental coal fields, thus increasing competition and leaving the situation as bad as before.

Up to the present the government has only made promises of putting the commission's recommendations into effect, but no step of any kind to that end has been taken in parliament.

The labor leaders argue that the mine owners, in demanding an eight hour day, as well as a reduction in wages, are going beyond the commission's recommendations, and they also complain that the government, instead of being impartial, is distinctly supporting the owners.

The ministers contend that the miners ought to be satisfied to accept a temporary reduction of wages along with the undertaking by the government that it will put the commission's report into legislative effect. The miners retort to this that the reorganization of the industry as advised by the commission would take three years or more to complete, and that the miners cannot be expected to suffer a reduced living for so long a period.

STRIKE MAY DISRUPT BOOKING OF TOURISTS

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Disruption of what promises to be a record transAtlantic tourist service may result if the general strike in England, scheduled to go into effect at midnight, extends through the month of may, shipping line officials and representatives of British seamen said here tonight.

Estimates of the number of the tourists going to Europe this summer based on advance bookings, reach as high as a half million persons.

Bookings have been so heavy that several of the larger lines are already sailing ships on an average of one a day.

At a late hour today there had been no cancellations of booking on the Cunarder Aquitania, due to sail for England tomorow night. All inquirier as to whether the ship would leave port despite the strike were met by officials of the line with positive assertions that it would. The 537 seamen and stewards aboard the vessel, all of whom are members of the British Transport Workers Union, said that they would sail the Aquitania for home regardless of the strike, but that immediately upon reaching England they would be compelled to walk out if the strike were on.

Prospective European tourists besieged shipping offices today with inquiries as to whether the strike would interfere with their journeys.

INVESTIGATING PRISON CAMPS IN ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3—(AP)—While the Jefferson county grand jury today was inquiring into reports of mysterious deaths at state-operated convict camps in this county, word reached the jury that Mose Thomas, negro prisoner, had been killed at Flat Top during the day by coming in contact with a live wire in the underground workings of the pit.

Maimed convicts from Flat top, some of them mere youths in appearance, continued to tell their stories to the jurors. One of today's witnesses was Bill West, 24, who lost a hand after he was sent to camp. Authorities summoned West when they had been told that he lost his hand by an explosion of powder, self inflicted, so that he might be disabled from performing the arduous tasks imposed.

Sam Dockery, another white convict, also went before the jury bearing a crippled hand. It was charged Dockery received the injury when a straw boss deliberately pushed him under a mine car.

The grand jury was expected to call Wiley Pugh tomorrow. Pugh is a white convict who instigated the first inquiry into the death of James W. Knox.

SCORE OF PERSONS INJURED BY FALL OF THEATRE CEILING

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 3—(AP)—A score of persons were injured, several seriously, when a section of the ceiling of the Savoy theatre fell this afternoon. The theatre was only partly filled at the time. Eleven tons of plaster and steel lath dropped upon the audience.

A wild scene followed as those who had escaped injury fled in a mad rush for the exits, men, women and children being trampled and the clothing of some virtually torn off in the rush.

Charged electric wires were carried down by the debris and several persons received severe shocks and burns in addition to lacerations and bruises.

The Savoy is one of the largest picture theatres in the city. City officials after an inspection, expressed the opinion that the collapse of the ceiling had been caused by the vibration of a large electric motor used to operate the pipe organ.

He will "reign" under the regency of his mother, born Princess Clementine of Belgium. Col. Crosfield, who arrived from England Friday for a two weeks tour of America, pledged his federation to peace, but not "a peace at any price." To Arrest Communist Member of Commons

Shapurji Saklatvala is Charged With Making a Seditious Speech in Hyde Park.

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Shapurji Saklatvala, communist member of the house of commons on a charge of making a seditious speech in Hyde park yesterday, the Westminster Gazette says today.

The action against Saklatvala, it is stated, was taken at the direction of the attorney general, but the execution of the warrant was purposely delayed so that the communist member could attend today's session of the house of commons without interference.

While Premier Baldwin pictured the calamity which would overtake the nation if a general strike was not averted, Saklatvala listened intently and smiled occasionally.

"I can understand the member for Battersea (Saklatvala) smiling, because that is what he has dreamed of for years," said the prime minister quietly."

The prime minister's remark was answered by laborite cries—"He had nothing whatever to do with the present situation."

Saklatvala, who is the only communist member in the house of commons, came into notice in the United States last year when the department of state barred his entrance to the United States as a revolutionist. He had been appointed a representative of Great Britain at the Interparliamentary Union conference at Washington but abandoned his visit when Secretary Kellogg announced that he would be barred.

The Civil Liberties union in the United States protested against his exclusion but President Coolidge endorsed the ban on him.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY TO OSCAR S. STRAUS

NEW YORK, May. 3—(AP)—Death today ended the long career of Oscar S. Straus who, coming to America at the age of four with his parents, Jewish immigrants from Bavaria, rose to prominence as a merchant, financier, philanthropist, diplomat and ever willing servant of the public.

He was 76 years old and for two years had been troubled with heart attacks. He returned two weeks ago to his Fifth avenue home from a winter in Florida. Suddenly and without pain death took him as he was enjoying his breakfast in apparently no worse health than he had been for several days. His wife and Roger Williams Straus, his son, were with him at the end.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at Temple Beth-El in Fifth avenue and burial will be in Beth-El cemetery on Long Island.

Mr. Straus entered upon a career as a lawyer at the age of 23 but forsook this for business a few years later, becoming an important factor in the department store field, from which he retired in 1907.

His public life began in 1887 when he was appointed minister to Turkey by President Roosevelt, as secretary of commerce and labor under President Roosevelt he was the first member of the Jewish race to become a cabinet member. In 1912 he was progressive candidate for governor of New York. Five presidents of both political parties honored him and the latter quarter century of his life was given up to public service and philanthropy.

ALLEGED RUM RUNNER STAGING HUNGER STRIKE

DOVER, N. H., May 3—(AP)—Charles Spilos of Dover, alleged rum runner held here without bail for assault with intent to kill, completed 60 hours of fasting in an attempt to starve himself to death after two unsuccessful attempts at suicide.

"I want to die so my enemies can't laugh at me in prison," he told jail ofcials. He has refused even water.

In Portland, Maine, last Saturday, Spilos, despite continuous guard outside his cell, slashed his wrist and head with a combination match safe and watch fob. He wa sbrought here in a weakened condition and some time Sunday night picked out 11 stitches in his writ with his teeth. He was lying unconscious on his bunk when his guard noticed blood on the floor. Spilos has been identified as one of two men who shot at city police officers April 25 when they approached his liquor-laden automobile stalled in the mud near here.

PICKETING RESUMED AT MILLS IN PASSAIC

PASSAIC, N. J., May 3—(AP)—Resumption of picketing by striking textile workers at the mills in Garfield today was prevented by sheriff's deputies and the arrest of two men and a woman followed the attempt. In Passaic police broke up a move to increase the number of pickets permitted at the several mills.

Albert Weisbord, strike leader, addressed an afternoon meeting of strikers at Belmont park, Garfield and urged the resumption of picket lines. He said he expected moves for settlement soon because otherwise the strike could be prolonged through the summer and destroy the fall business of the mills.

Effect of Strike on New York Markets

Reaction in Practically All the Principal Securities and Commodities Markets.

NEW YORK, May 3—(AP)—The threat of a general strike in Great Britain, accompanied by official references to "civil war," brought about a general reaction today in practically all of the principal securities and commodities markets.

Active securities on the New York stock exchange recorded extreme declines of 3 to 10 1-2 points, a small part of which were recovered by the more reassuring cables received just before the market closed; British government bonds sank to new low levels for the year; sterling exchange, which was within striking distance of gold parity last week, dropped nearly a cent over the week end; French and Belgian currencies sank to record lows for a time at 3.27 and 3.28 cents, respectively; wheat futures broke 3 to 3 cents a bushel, and moderate recessions took place in cotton and most of the other important commodity markets.

The selling of stocks reached its maximum intensity in the early afternoon when extracts of Premier Baldwin's speech, with its reference to a challenge 'by an alternative government" and labor leader bringing Great Britain "nearer to civil war" that it has been for centuries reached the financial district. Trading, which had been only moderate in volume during the first half of the session, total sales up to 17 p. m. failing below 800,000 shares, picked up rapidly in the last two hours, the day's total transactions running above 1,500,000 shares.

Ordinarily, labor disturbances are regarded as poor reasons for selling stocks, a familiar maxim of Wall street being "never sell stocks on strike news." In this case, however, the vista of a civil war, opened by responsible British government officials, aroused widespread apprehension, which bear traders were quick to take advantage of.

While the origin of selling in the foreign exchange market is rather difficult to trace, local dealers were inclined to regard most of the offerings here as domestic in character, the London market closing relatively firm. Sterling cables sold down to $4.85 1-2 after having been within 3-32 of gold parity—$4.86 21-32—last week. One of the principal effects of the strike news was to widen the "spread between demand bills and cables, and to materially reduce offerings of the latter.

JUDGE ENGLISH ASKS FOR DISMISSAL OF CHARGES

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Sitting as a high court of impeachment for the tenth time in history, the senate was asked today by Federal Judge George W. English, of the Eastern Illinois district, to dismiss the charges of usupation of power and other "high misdemeanors" in office brought against him by the house.

The judge appeared at the bar of the senate both in person and through counsel. He entered general and specific denials of the allegations set forth in the five articles of impeachment approved by the house, and contended that even if they were true they did not constitute impeachable offenses.

Flatly denying he had committed any act as judge for the benefit of his friends, members of his family or any one else, Judge English declared that at all times he "discharged his duty honestly, concientiously and without partiality and according to law, to the best of his ability."

After the 30 page reply of the judge of the charges had been read, the senate adopted an order giving the house two days in which to adopt a rejonder. After its receipe Wednesday five days will be given for the filing of briefs by counsel for Judge English and managers on the part of the house, who are to prosecut the case.

At the expiration of that time, the senate will be called upon to fix a day for the taking of testimony. This subject was discussed by the judiciary committee, but without decision, some members favoring a trial at a special senate session immediately after congress adjourns and others urging that the proceedings be put over until after the November elections.

POLICEMAN SIGHTED RHODE ISLAND MANIAC

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 3—(AP)—Only the narrow span of the Blackstone river kept Arthur Remblad, Woonsocket's mad bandit, from capture tonight when a Blackstone patrolman in search of him sighted the escaped maniac on the opposite side of the stream from himself between Blackstone and Millville. LONDONERS REALIZE THE STRIKE IS CALAMITOUS

Apathy Gave Way to Consternation When It Was Learned Negotiations For a Settlement Had Failed—Preparations Are Being Made on All Sides to Meet the Emergencies—Receiving Stations Are Enrolling Volunteer Workers, Recalling Scenes of World War Times—Only One Evening Paper Was Published in London Yesterday as Printers Have Gone Out.

LONDON, May 3—(AP)—Any apathy the public had displayed toward the prospect of a general strike was completely dissipated today when it was learned negotiations for a settlement had failed. Refusal of the printers to set up an editorial for the Daily Mail, aimed at the pending walkout, led the government within an hour to issue a double ultimatum—withdrawal of the general strike notices and disavowal of the action of the unofficial strikers.

After this unfortunate incident the public realized the utter impossibility of reaching any compromise and spent the day in intense suspense. Only one evening paper was published in London today, all the others suffering from printers' strikes, in one case due to attempt to reprint the Daily Mail editorial.

The situation might be compared with the days in July 1914, prior to the declaration of war.

"We seem to be blundering into civil strife, much as the weary diplomatists blundered into the great war," says the Star. "We shall muddle through, but at what cost!"

The Daily Mail office, the centre of this extraordinary incident, presented a strangely deserted aspect, in contrast to its usual bustling activities, and as a symbol of its loyalty to the national interest it had hoisted a huge Union Jack over the roof, but for some unexplained reason it was a very tattered flag, with two big holes in the centre.

Throughout London this evening, at the close of business hours, knots of workers gathered outside their business houses earnestly discussing the problem of transport and cognate subjects in preparation for the strike.

In the meantime preparations are visible on all sides to meet the emergencies, and receiving stations are busy enrolling voluntary workers, again recalling the scenes of the war. Parliament gathered, evidently in a sober mood, every member instinct with the feeling of the gravity of the situation.

All the ministers were in their places on the treasury bench, and Ramsay Macdonald, H. H. Thomas and other former ministers were also in their accustomed places. The debate proceeded in solemn, almost oppressive silence, while the ministers and ex-ministers presented their differing viewpoints.

Nobody seemed ready to make the first move to rescue the negotiations from the unlucky impasse into which they wandered last night. Yet both sides were ready to catch at a straw, if it gave an opportunity to renew the negotiations which had eventually broken down. To everybody's surprise this opportunity came from a most unexpected quarter, namely, from Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, who may perhaps be considered one of the most bitter opponents of the labor party and socialism.

In the course of a strong speech denouncing the general strike, Mr. Churchill gave an opening which was immediately seized by Mr. Thomas. The chancellor announced the government's willingness to resume patient negotiation, provided the notice of the general strike was withdrawn.

Mr. Thomas immediately encountered with a query as to whether, if the strike notices were withdrawn, the government would prevail with the mine owners to withdraw the lockout notices.

Mr. Thomas remarked that he did not expect an immediate reply, and no reply was given. But the ice was broken and the members realized that something had happened, and streamed into the lobbies to talk it over.

Troops have already been sent to sections, where disturbances are most to be feared, but it is the expressed intention of both authorities and the labor leaders to do nothing of a provocative nature.

The men necessary to keep the mines from flooding will be held at their posts. The railway managers will run skeletonized services, and the trans-Atlantic steamship companies have promised to maintain their sailings if that can possibly be done. The labor men have agreed also to aid inbringing food supplies to the people, having emphasized that their fight is not against the people, but against the attitude of the government in the present crisis.

London has now had the unusual experience of a partial stoppage of the newspapers on account of the strike, a thing heretofore almost unheard of in England. The printers strike is largely the outcome of the Daily Mail incident. That paper succeeded in publishing its Manchester edition Monday, but as it contained the editorial the London printers objected to, orders were sent from London, and refusal to print any more editions followed.

The king came to London from Windsor yesterday afternoon, and received first hand accounts of all phases of the crisis.

MINIMUM SENTENCE OF MABEL KENYON REDUCED

HARTFORD, May 3 (AP)—Two commutations of sentence and one conditional pardon were granted by the board of pardons in session today at the state prison at Wethersfield.

The conditional pardon was awarded to Michele Carpinelli, 46 year old lifer, sentenced at Waterbury, December 3, 1907, following his conviction on a charge of second degree murder. Joseph Spoth, serving from 1y to 15 years for manslaughter, had his minimum sentence commuted to three years, and Mabel Kenyon, serving a similar sentence on a similar charge, had her minimum reduced to six years.

As a result of the board's action, Mrs. Kenyon has now served her minimum sentence and is eligible to appear before the board of parole. Spoth, due to his commutation, will be eligible to appear before the board of parole in eight months.

Mabel Kenyon, 50 years old, was represented in her successful endeavor by Lawyer W. W. Rathbun, of Westerly, R. I. Mrs. Kenyon was convicted of manslaughter October 22, 1924, after shooting a doctor at Pawcatuck with a gun which she claimed she had purchased with the intention of committing suicide. The shooting took place June 13, 1920.

Mrs. Kenyon's attorney said that she is a native of Westerly, and he presented a number of petitions of citizens, asking that she be pardoned. Her husband, he pointed out, has forgotten her affair with the doctor and is keeping a home in Litchfield.

MAKING ENDEAVOR TO END GANG WARFARE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Charges by the court with the task of forestalling "a reign of terror" in Chicago, a special grand jury set out today to fix responsibility for internecine gang warfare which culminated last week in a triple murder whose principal victim was Assistant State's Attorney William H. McSwiggin.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom of Illinois, intervening at the request of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, took charge of the panel after it had been sworn and instructed by Judge William V. Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal court.

An inquiry of possible relation of the gang warfare with politics was suggested by the fact that the first two witnesses to appear before the grand jury were Coroner Oscar Wolff, political foe of the state's attorney, and Harry Eugene, president of the Union League club of Chicago, and an advocate of an inquiry into gangdom's possible relationships with law enforcement officials.

State's Attorney General Carlstrom will conduct the inquiry with the assistance of the state's attorney's office.

Judge Brothers told the jury that at least 19 of 20 murders since January 1 are what might be termed gang murders. He recounted the use by the slayers of sawed-off shotguns, rifles and machine guns; the commission of all the murders by night, the refusal of victims to name their slayers, even when they could.

"The primary motive inspiring the gangs," said Judge Brothers, "appears to be indissolubly linked with the illicit traffic of liquor and beer.

"If the present condition of afaire continues much longer without the intervention of the stern and implacable hand of the law, a reign of terror will be upon us. Mob rule will prevail."

The court called the jury's attention to the fact that he had "purposely refrained" from limiting the scope of its inquiry in any fashion

"If bribery or corruption suggest themselves, look closely and present the guilty one for trial. The citizens of our country are aroused."

BRUSH FIRES IN THE VICINITY OF SOUTHBORO, MASS.

SOUTHBORO, Mass., May 3.—(AP)—Brush fires destroyed one house, threatened another and burned to within inches of a New Haven railroad bridge today before the flames were controlled by the combined efforts of the Southboro and Marlboro fire departments and volunteers. St. Mark's school supply wagons pressed into service and the Southboro department pumped water from the school swimming pool through 2,000 feet of hose.

The fire started on the outskirts of the town and driven by a strong wind licked up the residence of P. J. Callivan on the Southboro-Marlboro road. The house was unoccupied. Nearby the home of A. W. Fitzgerald caught fire several times, but the Southboro department saved the building.

The flames next veered toward a heavy road bridge over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, but railroad employes, aided by all available firemen, saved the structure. Twenty-five acres of woodland were burned over before the fire was controlled.

ENCOUNTER BEAR IN THE BASS HILL DISTRICT

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 3—Fishermen and others have been avoiding the Bass Hill district off the back road in Windham since the circulation of a report by Winfield Dyer of Windham that a bear is at large in the wooded swamps of the section. Dyer says that a few nights ago as he was leaving the Charles Smith woodlot where he had been chopping wood he saw the bear shuffling along about 100 feet away from the Bass Hill road. He stopped and looked at the animal and it stopped and looked at him. Apparently there was no desire for companionship on either side for Dyer hastened out of sight and bruin continued about his business. As far as is known the bear has not been seen by anyone else but the animal is believed to be one that made the hair of the natives of the Killingly woods stand on end when a lonely bruin was stopped in that section.

One week ago he started to work with the Chaney Bakery company in Hartford. On the same day he bought a second hand Ford sedan in Hartford on a conditional bill of sale. The agent placed Connecticut markers on the car and told Brazil that his registration would be mailed to him in a few days and it was all right to use the car. He did not use it until Sunday when he started to go to Providence and got into trouble here. The court learned that the car had been properly registered with the state motor vehicle department and an original charge of not having his car registration was nolled. I do my own wash

—yet my hands stay soft, white

I used to hate Monday, for my week's wash was always very heavy. But washday is now so easy for me.

I just use Rinso. It's granulated and dissolves in a jiffy—forming wonderfully thick, lasting suds.

I soak the whole wash in these suds for about two hours—then rinse. The dirt soaks right out and everything becomes spotless without a bit of hard rubbing. And oh, so much whiter than ever before. Sterilized, too!

And with Rinso my hands never get red and parboiled any more. They stay white and soft.

Just ask your grocer for

If a child

doesn't like oatmeal, win over with famous "Quaker Flavor"

THE reason some children don't eat their oatmeal without urging is that they're not given the right kind.

There is a great difference in the flavor of oats. And flavor, above all things, is needed to win a child's appetite.

Quaker Oats has a unique flavor; a rich and toasty flavor you'll find in no other brand. That is why millions will accept no other kind.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats—which makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins and this "bulk" make Quaker Oats an excellent food balance.

Today, get Quick Quaker (cooks in 3 to 5 minutes), or regular Quaker Oats as you have always known them. Grocers have both kinds.

AN OPEN MIND MAY LEAD TO A FIND

UNLESS you have crammed a load of Prince Albert into that favorite pipe of yours, you simply haven't given your pipe a chance to do its stuff. No matter how contented you may think you are, there's a revelation in store for you—in the store where they sell P. A.!

On a sporting chance, you might say, thousands of others have tried Prince Albert. They've stayed with it! Because—they found P. A. cool as a breeze on a hill-top; sweet as a raise in pay; fragrant as springtime flowers. It didn't bite and it didn't parch.

There's one big reason for all of this: Prince Albert is real, blown-in-the-bottle quality tobacco. No other tobacco is like it—in fragrance, taste and performance in a pipe. That's why P. A. is known as the National Joy Smoke wherever pipes are smoked.

Keep an open mind on this subject. Maybe, after all, there is something to the wonderful tales you've been hearing about jimmy-pipe joy. Maybe? Why, there's no question about it. We know you've been missing the time of your life if you don't know Prince Albert.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

JEWETT CITY

THIS BIRD KNEW HOW HE WANTED HIS MEALS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 3—A new stunt for a crow-black-bird was noted at Dr. Jenning's bird bath near his home Sunday.

The grackle came with a crust of dry bread, too hard evidently for him to break. Alighting on the rim of the basin he dropped the crust in the water, then when it had sufficiently softened, he ate it between sips from the pan, flying away to a nearby pine tree with the last morsel in his beak.

He lived in his family for several years, later conducting a blacksmith shop on Mathewson St. The family attended the Congregational church and have warm friends in Jewett City now, although they left here 40 years ago.

DANIELSON

DR HIBBARD WRITES OF BIG HAWAIIAN DEFENSES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 3—Writing from the University club at Honolulu to The Bulletin under date of April 20, Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard of Reynolds street tells of interesting sights and experiences in the Hawaiian Island where he and Mrs. Hibbard have been sojourning there the past few months. They are returning to Danielson in the near future.

Dr. Hibbard tells of a wondrous land where it is always summer, of 8,000 acre sugar plantations and 12,000 acre pineapple farms—and of such asides as earthquakes and volcanic eruptions that have come during his stay to add to the variety and spice of life.

His son, Lieut. Charles Hibbard, U. S. N., is in charge of submarine maintenence operations at Pearl Harbor. Dr. Hibbard, with Mrs. Hibbard, has had an unusual opportunity to see things that the average visitor to the island never is allowed to see. Mentioning that he is not allowed to give any details, Dr. Hibbard says that the United States defences of the islands are so comprehensive and complete that no fleet operating in the Pacific can ever hope to successfully menace the western coast of the United States.

The United States constantly keeps 20 ocean-going submarines, everyone in superb condition, at Pearl harbor. Eleven hundred men man and attend these undersea boats. There are 12,000 soldiers on the island, professional fighting men who fear nothing. The total naval and army contingent is 20,000 men.

The defence arm includes fleets of aeroplanes, tractors, trucks, big guns and all other necessary appurtenances of war—and plenty of them.

Dr. Hibbard tells of marvelous hidden defences blasted out of the solid rock of Oaku island. These are just below the top of promontory and are connected by tunnels hewn from solid rock. These defences hide monster guns and all of the works are invisible from the sea. Dr Hibbard mentions that the style of the defences resemble those he had a chance to partly inspect when he visited Gibralta a few years ago.

But 10 per cent of the population of the islands is of white people—Americans, English, Germans. The remainder are largely Orientals, Japanese predominating, but with numbers of Chinese, other Asiatics and hyrid peoples that have resulted from inter-marriages.

Stressing the fact that the Hawaiian islands are part of the territory of the United States—The Territory of Hawaii—and of the excellent school system this government has developed and maintained wit ever increasing efficiency during the past 25 years, Dr. Hibbard says it is inspiring to witness the patriotism of these descendants of peoples of the Far East. They know they are not residents of possession by conquest or by purchase, but of a real unit of the United States. All these people, old and young, are proud of their United States citizenship. There are no exceptions to this, the doctor says. He writes: "I have been to the movies when pictures of Washington and Lincoln were on the screen and the applause of the Oriental and native Hawaiians was pleasing to the ear. The elder Orientals, especially the Japanese, continually direct the loyalty of the younger Japanese toward Japan. They try their best, but with no success, for to growing Japanese children boldly say 'We are Americans and will remain Americans at all times'.

"This Americanism," continues the doctor, "is due to the efficient public school system on the islands, where the only flag seen anywhere is our flag. The Parent and School association of teachers and parents of pupils is here conducted most efficiently. If our public schools at home do not have this organization, I believe it should be adopted at once, as such an organization would be highly valuable."

Of his ramble about the islands Dr. Hibbard relates the mints of revenue that are produced from the cane sugar ranches, some as large as 8,000 acres, and abundantly irrigate dby excellent water that may be had in limitless amounts, as the rainfall over there is from 3 to 5 times the normal for New England. He tells of the pineapple growing industry—of ranches where 12,000 acres are under cultivation the yea round. So intensive is this culture that high grade properties produce 2,500 tons of pineapples to the acres, and the finest of their kind in the world. The apples average six to seven pounds in weight each.

Dr Hibbard does not dwell much on the earthquake shocks, which have been frequent the past few weeks, nor of the volcanic eruption that he witnessed. He merely mentions them in passing. Wondrous as is this land," he says, I should not care to live here permanently. I miss New England with its changing seasons, its ice and snow, its snappy mornings and its months of warmth and roses. I shall be pleased to be at home again in the near future."

STATE POLICE STILL HOLD THE BOOZE TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 3—There is a practically brand new enclosed body motor truck up at the state police barracks on North Main street. It may be there some considerable time, and then again, it may not. It all depends. This particular truck is in the hands of the state police because they found it loaded with 350 gallons of grain alcohol last Friday night. The man who was driving it, George Wilkinson of West Somerville, Mass., and the man who was riding with him, Louis Bronstein, of Brooklyn, N. Y., have paid the penalties exacted of them in court and have gone their separate ways. Apparently they have no further interest in a machine that is said to have cost approximately $2,000 within the last month. Wilkinson, who was driving the truck, when it was halted by Sergeant Field of the state police had no operator's license. He was fined for that. He was carrying a registration on the car issued to a fictional address in Hartford. It would appear that neither Wilkinson nor Bronstein had any financial interest in the truck. The state police—and the state of Connecticut—have a right to know who has. The state police will be glad to interview anyone who wants to claim ownership and stand a bit of questioning about how the registration was obtained, and other such things. If is not unlikely that someone will appear and undertake the grilling. Motor trucks that are new and cost about $2,000 are not often fooled away if there is a chance to get them back. Getting this truck involves some tall explaining and a prospective court appearance and fine for obtaining a registration for an address that is said by the state police not to exist. It will be interesting to watch the developments in this truck case.

Miss Jenny Louise Dean, 73, died Monday morning at the home of Mrs. James M. Paine, Broad street. Miss Dean was of a family, through marriage of her mother, Mrs. Helen Louise Frost Dean Danielson, from which this community takes its name, and she had been a resident there the greater part of her life.

In frail health for many years, Miss Dean had lived a quiet, retired life, yet the announcement of her death came as a surprise. Miss Dean was born in Cambridge, N. Y., December 15, 1857, daughter of Dr. Anderson and Helen Louise Frost Dean. Following the death of her father many years ago, her mother married for her second husand Hezekiah Danielson, long a prominent resident of this community. Miss Dean was a member of the Westfield Congregational church of Danielson. She leaves no relatives nearer than cousins, resident in Providence.

For three weeks Chief John McFarland of the borough police has been puzzling over the solution of a problem that involved getting back a bicycle that was stolen from a pupil attending St. James' school while the lad was at his studies and the bicycle parked outside the building. Monday he found the answer. It now appears that the bicycle was stolen by another boy, just a boy, and has since been hidden away over in the Horse Hill district of the town. To the meantime the stolen bicycle had been taken apart, painted a color decidedly different than the bike it bore when it disappeared. Incidentally the lad that stole it had disposed of the front wheel to a third boy who needed one to replace another that had gone out of commission. That slip led to the detection of the thieving boy by Chief McFarland, the recovery of the repainted bike and happiness for the lad from whom it was stolen. It is a long story and it cannot all be told here. It may suffice to remind that Chief McFarland is everlastingly on his job.

KAMMILLIAN NOW HELD UNDER BONDS OF $5,000

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 3—It was indicated Monday that the case of Mandzig Kammillian will be presented before a grand jury sometime between now and next September, he to answer to a charge that his assault upon Pierre Charron, late of Putnam and Killingly, resulted in Charron's death. It is charged by the state that Kammillian beat Charron with a club so viciously that Charron died. This followed an alleged drinking party at the Kammillian place in the Tucker district of this town, where Kammillian has lived on a worn-out farm for a number of years and has been regarded as an amiable, harmless person. The accused is well along in years. If a grand jury is assembled, and that is at the discretion of the state attorney, it is not unlikely that an effort will be made to indict Kammillian for second degree murder.

In the town court Monday morning, Judge W. Fenner Woodward found probable cause for holding Kammillian for trial by the superior court, and the man's bonds were fixed at $5,000, this being a material increase from the bonds fixed when he was first arrested and held in default during April. Attorney Charles L. Torrey of Putnam, counsel for Kammillian, filed a formal demurrer to the charge against his client, but this was overruled and Kammillian ordered held. Kammillian was unable to furnish the bonds, so is likely to languish at the county jail in Brooklyn throughout the summer months.

This particular case is strange in the sense that Kammillian is no other than one to be regarded as a friendly person. He is not of the fighting or killing type. He has no money. He is an old man. He has been convicted in this town of violation of the liquor laws. It appears that he became involved in an unfortunate affair with a group of men who came to his place to drink. Charron is dead. Charron's companions have told their stories to the authorities—and Kammillian is in jail. An unprejudiced person might regard the entire episode as unfortunate. But the state has a vital interest. Charron died of a fractured skull, and the state says that Kammillian was responsible for that injury. He must answer to the commonwealth.

Kammillian was arrested several weeks ago, immediately after his alleged assault upon Charron, was presented in the Killingly town court and his case continued to await the outcome of Kamillian's injuries. Meanwhile Charron has passed on. Medical Examiner Dr. F. A. Morrel of Putnam reported to Coroner Arthur G. Bill of this town that Charron died of a fractured skull.

Pupils of outlying schools in the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn usurped the limelight in the week-end declamation and spelling contest held here at the week end. They won each and every honor, to the exclusion of Danielson. In the declamation contest Andrew Havelas, pupil at the East Brooklyn school (West Side) won first prize and Theresa Golec, of the Goodyear school, second prize.

In spelling, first honors went to Donald MacLean of the Attawaugan school, and second to Arthur Cooper of the Brooklyn Center school.

There were eleven contestants in the declamation contest and 23 in the spelling contest. All of these competitors won their privilege to appear in elimination contests held in their own schools against their fellow pupils before a board of judges made up of teachers of various schools of the town. No favoritism was shown to anyone.

Likewise when the winners from each school came up for the finals their efforts were passed upon by a board of judges who knew the contestants only by numbers and weren ot informed as to individual identities or as to the schools represented. Rev. Leonard R. Richards, Principal E. R. Warren of Killingly high school and Agent C. W. Young of the Goodyear Mills, Inc., were the judges in the declamation contest. The judges on the spelling contest were Miss Emma F. Pilling, representing the Killingly town school committee, and E. C. Babcon, representing the Brooklyn town school committee. Only Supt. W. E. Parker of the schools in Killingly and Brooklyn knew the numbers under which the contestants appeared, and not until he consulted his list were the names of the winners known to the judges or the audience.

When planning your summer vacation, do not forget to include in your arrangements the placing of your valuables and valuable papers in a safe deposit box in our burglar and fireproof vault. The Windham County National bank, Danielson, Conn.—Adv.

It would appear that all who own dogs in the town of Killingly did not get around to registering them by May 1. Now when they see the town clerk there will be an additional charge. And if they do not get around, the dog warden will have them in court a bit later.

W. H. Barron of Boston, engaged in business here for a number of years, was a visitor in Danielson Monday.

PUTNAM

SOON TO MAKE REPORT ON NEW PUTNAM VALUATIONS

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 3.—At a meeting in the chamber of commerce rooms recently, a representative from the Municipal Service company of New Britian addressed the committee in charge of the reassessment and equalization of the property of Putnam for taxation purposes.

The committee has listened to a number of experts in the valuation of property and is now about ready to make a report. The representative from the New Britian concern agreed to send a man to Putnam and to have him make a survey of the town without charge, and then to give an estimate of the cost of a revaluation. They have done similar work at Middletown, New Britain, Berlin, East Haven, West Haven and other towns in the state and has many recommendations for the results obtained. It is estimated that it will take five or six months to complete the work.

Friends in Putnam have received notice of the death of George F. Jewett of Newton, Mass. He is remembered in Putnam as a former principal of Putnam high school. Mr. Jewett was the founder and principal for many years of the Mt. Ida school for girls at Newton, Mass.

Before coming to Putnam, Mr. Jewett was instructor at Cambridge Latin school and principal of the Marlboro high school and Rutgers grammar school at New Brunswick, N. J. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Easton Carr of Oberlin, Ohio, and Mrs. Frederick McGill of Newton, Mass. He was born in Pepperell, Mass., March 18, 1850 and graduated from Bridgewater State Normal school in 1870. In 1886 he received his A. B. degree from Harvard and later studied in Europe. He received his master's degree at Harvard in 1911.

Many neighbors and friends called on Mrs. Sarah A. Downing on April 30th, to congratulate her on having attained her 85th birthday. Mrs. Downing makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. H. L. Pease on Tremont street, whose birthday occurred on the same day. Refreshments were served.

Because of a fractured hip sustained several years ago, Mrs. Downing is obliged for the greater time to keep to her room, which made the occasion all the more enjoyable for her. Notwithstanding her difficulty in getting around, Mrs. Downing is very bright and cheerful, sews and reads a great deal and is thoroughly conversant with the current events.

Rev. and Mrs. George N. Thompson of Greenwich have been at the Ben Grosvenor inn for the past week and are making arrangements to return to Pomfret early in July for the summer.

Mrs. Rowley Phillips and little daughter of Waterbury are the guests of Mrs. Arthur M. Wheeler at Pomfret.

Miss Helen Caffrey and Miss Rita McDermott, teachers at Norton, Mass., have been the recent guests of Mrs. Helen M. Willey on Oak Hill.

Clarence O. Lyon of West Woodstock, Conn., has been appointed executor of the testate of George N. Lyon, late of Woodstock, by Judge Robert E. Harris.

Mrs. Rose Bizaillon of South Main street has returned from a visit with her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Bizaillon at Milford, Mass.

UNITED STATES TIRES ARE GOOD TIRES

A train of tank cars containing rubber latex on a United States Rubber Company Plantation

Answering some more questions about the United States Rubber Company's Rubber Plantations

Q—When did the United States Rubber Company first start to grow its own rubber?

A—In 1911 the company planted 14,000 acres, or about 22 square miles in Sumatra. This represented then and still does, the largest planting operation completed by any one company in a single year.

As new property has been acquired the work has gone steadily forward until today the company has 136,000 acres, approximately 60% of which is already planted.

Q—Does it take long to grow a rubber tree?

A—It takes about 4 to 6 years from the time a seedling is planted until a tree is ready to be tapped, and its initial yield is only small. Clearing the jungle, removing stumps, draining the land, breaking ground, growing seedlings from selected seeds, budding, grafting, transplanting and carefully tending the young plants, to say nothing of constructing roads, railways, wharves, storage tanks, and buildings to house power plants, equipment, and employees in a wild tropical country—all take time and money.

Q—Why did the United States Rubber Company make this investment?

A—Because it foresaw the time coming, when in the interest of greater economy and better and more uniform quality, it would be advisable for it to know all there was to know about rubber growing, and to be producing a considerable portion of its own rubber. Recent events have justified this farsighted policy, and every man who buys a United States Tire or any other United States Rubber Company product is today benefiting by it.

Q—Is the United States Rubber Company's Plantation well regarded by authorities on rubber?

A—Yes. Herbert Ashplant, the British Rubber Mycologist of Southern India, in his report entitled "Recent Developments in the Rubber Planting Industry," refers to the United States Rubber Company Plantation at Kisaran, Sumatra, as follows:

"Of all the areas visited, none produced so much useful information. Kisaran, the headquarters of these plantations, has become the Mecca of all planters who wish to keep abreast of recent rubber research. It is astonishing to find how many of the familiar problems of rubber planting have been satisfactorily settled during the last few years by the researches of the scientific staff."

FAIR WARNING

While President Coolidge has been insistent that congress must not give way to the temptation to pile up big expenditures just because certain conditions seem to indicate a flush treasury, he has felt the flood of making it undeniably clear that he will use his veto power if it becomes necessary to do so in order to give the treasury the proper protection.

The folly of piling up a big deficit and nullifying the effect of the tax reduction should be apparent, and the inclination to finance coming campaigns through such expenditures made without due regard for the conditions, deserves to be stepped on.

When the president signed the bill for $19,000,000 for Spanish war veterans pensions he directed attention to the fact that it was a continuing appropriation, that it doesn't apply solely to next year but each year following. Without a doubt there was reason why these veterans should be placed upon a similar basis to others but the appropriation of money which is not going to be received according to the estimates cannot go on indefinitely. Thus the president warns that no more of such appropriations will be approved, not because he might not be favorably disposed toward them but because there's a limit to the resources and it is bad business to put the treasury in a hole and force the levying of new or larger taxes.

We have not as yet reached the point where we can disregard the commendable practices of the past few years in keeping the expenditure of money within bounds. The president makes it clear that he stands just as firmly for the country's welfare in this respect as he ever did and that he is going to go to the limit of his power to uphold it. It is a stand that is needed and the president's leadership and courage are not lacking when it comes to meeting the situation. He has clearly presented the situation to congress and it should get the attention that is demanded. The president has given fair warning of conditions and what he is going to do.

PROTECTING MIGRATORY BIRDS

Why shouldn't there be a healthy interest manifested by the sportsmen in behalf of the bill which is now before congress for the purpose of retarding the extermination of migratory game through the reduction of bag limits and open seasons?

For the protection of game that was in danger of extermination the migratory bird law was enacted. It has been a benefit but in the belief of those who have closely studied the situation the time has come when additional protection must be given in order to have the law accomplish all that was intended. It is pointed out that there are 83 species of game birds that are not getting a square deal.

There are those who go out after game quite the same as they would stand up in front of clay pigeons and kill till they get tired. They may exhibit their bag of game with pride but they have killed simply for sport and are ready to go again the next day and slaughter just as many, regardless of the other fellow or the fact that through such great inroads the game will be quickly exterminated.

And then sometime later there is no one shedding more tears than the pot hunter because there is no game, because hunting isn't what it used to be and because something isn't being done to insure more game. Not every hunter is to be put in such a class but the class is so large that the added restrictions are demanded and they of course would apply to all alike.

The fight against the wasting of America's game birds is a commendable one. Giving it his enthusiastic backing is Congressman Merritt of Connecticut, who is standing with others in an effort to meet the threatened situation before it gets to the point where help will be useless. Many birds are not to be found today through lack of just such protection, and many others are getting the most careful and expensive protection, like the heath hens at Martha's Vineyard, in order to preserve them for posterity. The legislative efforts in behalf of wild life deserve more than passing attention.

SALES OF FIREARMS

Much crime is encouraged and many needless deaths are caused each year through the ability of criminals, children and irresponsible persons to get firearms. Such weapons are relied upon by the lawless to accomplish their purposes and they figure conspicuously in connection with all kinds of crime.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the National Crime commission should have been slated during its recent meeting in Washington when the representative of one of the large firearms concerns in this country made an announcement to the effect that his corporation was desirous of cooperating with the commission in the securing of a proper uniform pistol regulation law.

Whether this represents the sentiment of the one corporation, or whether he was speaking for all manufacturers, it shows the proper spirit and discloses a recognition of the fact that some such step is inevitable and the best thing to do is to meet it half way and endeavor to obtain satisfactory rather than unsatisfactory results.

What the firearms manufacturer is ready to do is only what certain of the mail order houses have undertaken on their own responsibility through abandoning all trade in firearms, the purchase of which through the mails made it possible for many to obtain weapons who might have had more or less trouble otherwise.

There are already states which have laws restricting the sale of firearms and making it necessary to have permits to possess such weapons. The effectiveness of such laws would be far reaching but for the fact that it is possible to ignore the law by purchasing through the mails or going into other states where no such law prevails. Thus the demand for uniformity is well put forth and the commission has reason to be pleased over the attitude of the firearms manufacturer. Firearms for defense are going to be needed but the situation will be admirably met by regulation such as is proposed through uniform state laws and the exclusion of such weapons from the mails.

THE BRITISH STRIKE

However much it may have been hoped that it would be possible to reach an agreement concerning the coal industry in England whereby a general strike would be prevented, the efforts have been fruitless. The strike is on and the British government is faced with putting into effect the emergency act that will prevent hardships for the public.

Even though the threatened strike had seemed to arouse no interest on the part of the public, which apparently believed as well as hoped that some method of adjustment would be agreed upon, the actual fact faced as it must be can be expected to bring a different reaction. The government is standing by the report of the royal commission which investigated the coal situation and it remains to be seen whether the pressure against the government through the general strike can budge it from its position.

It is an unsual emergency but under the British government the authority of dealing with such an emergency is absolute. It isn't hampered by the handicaps that would be experienced in this country. It can go ahead, without waiting for legislation to meet the situation, in the manner which it deems necessary. The general strike is expected to embarrass seriously but it is not to be supposed that the government has been caught entirely unprepared in view of the threats that have been made.

Coal mining in England needs a readjustment. It has been apparent from the time that the government began paying the subsidy last year, which has cost the government $100,000,000, that this situation could not continue. But the demands during that period of adjustment are such that the operators will not meet them, and it now remains to be seen whether through the general strike the miners can actually force their own terms from the operators through the hardships inflicted upon the country.

CROSSINGS AND CAUTION

In pointing out the many who are killed each year at grade crossings, the Automobile Legal association declares they are more deadly than the drunken driver, and urges that more states join in the expenditure of the hundreds of millions that are being spent for the elimination of grade crossings.

Grade crossings in many instances should go and gradually they are being removed, but with the elimination of such danger spots there doesn't appear to be any decrease in the carelessness displayed by the automobile driver. It is quite as much the lack of respect for the menace at railroad crossings as it is the crossings themselves that is responsible for the many fatalities at such points. It will cost billions of dollars to cater to the carelessness of the auto driver and after it is spent there will still be just as much carelessness to be reckoned with.

After referring to the manner in which other states are spending huge sums for the removal of grade crossings the Automobile Legal association, a Massachusetts organization, asks, "When will Massachusetts start in like manner to remove the menace created by the most dangerous of these crossings?"

It might also be asked, "When will the automobile driver display that small amount of caution that is needed to avoid the danger that is known to prevail at any kind of a railroad crossing?"

It would be a magnificent thing if the hundreds of millions that are being spent to end grade crossings would mean a corresponding increase in care on the part of auto drivers.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—Not long ago President Coolidge made it clear to the members of the press who attend white house conferences, that he believed it was a matter of state rights to regulate the movies, and not a matter for federal interference. The house committee on education held a number of hearings on a proposed "reform" movement under national regulation, but apparently they fell flat. It will not pass at this congress and unless the matter takes a sudden turn, it will not be up for serious consideration in the early future.

President Coolidge expressed confidence and appreciation in the oversight work done by former Postmaster General Will Hay, but when it came to putting censorship of movies under federal control he drew the line with no uncertain hand, so far as his approval goes.

Congressman Andrew of Massachusetts was especially interested and called attention to the set-back the move against federal movie censorship would have against many of the proposed movements to add bureaus to the government, and so practically take away from states many of the rights they now possess. Mr. Andrew referred to the present tendency of "bureaucracy to run amuck." He cited numerous instances where great power had been wrested from states and turned over to the federal government, and spoke of the great expense to the country involved under needless bureaus and federal appointments. The proposed bill not only aimed at a censorship of the pictures shown but of the press as well, was the comment of men working against the measure.

Col. John Q. Tilson, republican floor leader and member of congress from the New Haven district, finds being a leader is "nothing to be sneezed at" as they say way down east, and that in addition to his official duties as leader; he, like the president, the vice president, and the speaker of the house, is expected to hold up his end of the official line when it comes to social affairs. Col. and Mrs. Tilson, with their two young daughters, are living as nearly a normal domestic life as is possible for a man holding the second highest position in congress.

But Washington official life and a domestic life do not often travel hand in hand. The Tilson leased for the season a big old fashioned house up in the residential section, and found its big rooms, its big fire places and general air of comfort much to their taste. But as wife of the floor leader Mrs. Tilson has entertained the highest of political, diplomatic, judicial and congressional circles; moreover she has been lavishly entertained by them, and has proved herself a very charming and popular hostess.

But as Washington customs demand that men of high political degree attend official receptions whether in afternoon or evening, even the speaker of the house and the floor leader do not escape: Tilson has worked hard, his responsibility as leader is very heavy; on his shoulders falls the burden of smoothing out factional difference in his party, saying "no" when necessary; and marking out the party program. Moreover he must listen to the complaints and suggestions of every one with a grievance or a "prospect", and it's a safe guess that nothing will look so good to him at the close of the session as his home city of New Haven, or his camp on the shores of Lake Sunapee.

They tell a story here of how a wife of a congressman from a small western town, was appalled by the number of dinner invitations thrust upon them when they entered official congressional life. Writing home to her daughter in the little home town, the lady said: "We've et out four times this week" and even that fails to cover the dining out craze that strikes Washington each winter.

Once, in the early days of his vice presidency, Mr. Dawes remarked to a friend: "The chief duty of a vice president seems to be dining with people he does not know and who do not know him." And that phrase and the old lady who "et out" tells the story of Washington society. Dinner engagements are frequently made six weeks or more ahead of the date on which a formal dinner is to be held, so to secure the presence of especially desired guests. As the winter season wanes garden parties and teas take the place of more formal dining, to some degree, but does not supplant the more formal entertaining.

It is whispered that this year the white house will not continue its practice of large garden parties, to which all the official set is invited, but will give but one garden fete and that will be in honor of the wounded veterans at the great Walter Reed military hospital in the suburbs of the capital.

The Coolidges have cut out all but strictly official entertaining since the recent death of the president's father.

Various pension bills are before congress and testimony concerning pension affairs in general shows that there are now living and drawing pensions five Civil war mothers, whose sons died in the service during the Civil war.

The age of these five mothers range from 96 to 102 years, and are scattered over five states. The oldest is Mrs. Louisa Shelden of Ohio, aged 102. Her son was George W. Shelden and he died in a confederate prison.

And now the farm bloc of the senate threatens to refuse to permit an adjournment of congress until the farmers have got the legislature they insist shall be theirs. Whether this will result in the passing of such legislation or merely create a deadlock on adjournment is not yet easily determined.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rev. John Thomson Dallas, who today becomes bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New Hampshire, has been vicar of the Cathedral church of St. Paul's in Boston, where today's consecration ceremony takes place. The new Bishop is a native of Waterbury, Conn., and was graduated from Yale in 1904. He then went to Union Theological seminary and graduated four years later. His first church was in his native city of Waterbury, where he was a curate from 1908 to 1910. For ten years thereafter he was assistant headmaster of the Taft school near Waterbury, and it was during that period that he made a special study of psychology of youth. In 1920 he returned to the active ministry as pastor of a church in Hanover, N. H., where his man fashion, straight-from-the-shoulder preaching made him greatly beloved by the Dartmouth college students.

FAMILY RIFTS

"Didya see this?" the Woodlawn man inquired excitedly when his friend from Hyde Park appeared. "Right on the front page—the Bickles are getting a divorce! Now what under the sun could break up that family? They seemed contented and happy!"

"H'm!" the Hyde Park man uttered gloomily, "Much the public knows of what goes on beneath the surface! Why, there are so many things which could cause a divorce that it makes me stutter tryin to relate them! Why man alive—"

"What a sunshiny person you are!" said the Woodlawn man.

"Didn't you ever observe," continued the Hyde Park man, "that whenever Henry Bickle was going to say anything to you he began by giving a little cough? Not a loud enough cough to interrupt even a train of thought and something scarcely noticed by the casual person, but when you consider that Ada Bickle heard that cough several dozen times a day for ten years; it is merely a matter of surprise that she has not before this rushed to the divorce court and sobbed out her troubles on the judge's waterproof desk!

"And a 10-cent package of cough drops might have changed completely the map of Henry Bickle's future life.

"Also whenever he enters the house he has the habit of dumping his overcoat and hat down on the hall table, instead of hanging 'em up. There simply is no telling what that little trick is likely to do to a woman's nervous system, especially if she has carefully arranged a single long-stemmed rose in a vase in the precise center of the table.

"Wait a minute and save your breath! I was just going to add that nearly any man without a strong character and rigid self-control would long before this have mussed up Ada's perfect marcel, pushed her face in and disappeared galloping over the far horizon, leaving behind him a trail of bitter, maniacal laughter! That girl has the habit of calling her husband down in public when all he can do is to maintain a sickly grin and look as though he appreciated the joke, knowing full well that there are laws protecting poor weak women from being shaken until their teeth rattle.

"However, much a man may grit his jaws at hearing how funny he was when the fiddles called and caught him hiking for the front stairs in his pajamas, or how he insisted on trumping his partner's ace all evening in the dumbest way, or how he picked out the most atrocious ties in town—he can't do much about it except pay a lawyer to say it for him.

"Besides which, while they were engaged and Henry was quite unresponsible and in a rosy dream no doubt he told her it was cute when she did babytalk and gurgled. But when a lady arriving at stoutness and married ten years persists in gurgling something just has to be done about it, and so Henry is doing it, and may he live to have many happy divorces.

"No doubt you have read that Rowena Whoons has sailed for Europe and I expect that means she is going to get one of these Paris decrees and set poor Oscar free from his constant misery. Yes, I know that Rowena is a howling beauty and that he seemed crazy about her, but I was there one night at dinner and she couldn't eat celery without crunching it. Every time Rowena's little white teeth gave a crunch Oscar shivered from stem to stern like a stricken deer—and, moreover, she has a sharp, nasal voice.

"Oscar himself has some tricks, such as surveying himself complacently in all the living room and hall mirrors and no woman alive can long endure a man who likes his own looks. I've seen him sharpen a pencil over the grav chenille rug. A child of 6 could have seen where the Whoops were headed! When I consider the hidden sufferings of meat anybody I wonder there is any one left married—"

"Imogene has no bad tricks," defended the Woodlawn man warmly, eying his friend narrowly.

The Hyde Park man said nothing for three minutes. "Oh, nothing personal about my theory," he said, "nothing at all, of course. But between you and me, if Imogene doesn't stop matching up my socks all wrong and cutting things out of the newspaper before I get hold of it—say, there are limits, you know!"—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

America at the Crossroads.

Mr. Editor: "Not what I have, but what I do, is my kingdom," said the wise Mr. Carlyle. As I have followed the "wets" through their testimony before the senate prohibition committee, it seemed to me that their ambition was to have a chaotic kingdom, occupied by a population seeking only their own personal interest. This warfare between the drys and wets will pass into history as one of the most bitterly contested battles ever waged before our congress. It is a battle between good and evil that will be continued to the end. It is the old, old story that had its inception in the Garden of Eden, a rebellion against so-called personal liberty. The wets argue that their individual liberty has been infringed upon by prohibition of alcoholic drinks. That it is an arbitrary law rushed upon them by the minority. Their knowledge of the ethics of life must be very feeble if they have not learned that there is no such thing as absolute individual liberty and never has been except in the olden times, when men were all—and women and children were their slaves. It is license they are asking for. They would go back to pre-prohibition days when women and children were virtually slaves to the vicious appetites of men. Christian civilization demands curtailment of personal liberty. Personal service is the keynote of life today. The kingdom of righteousness can never be built up on the free use of light wines and beer. I shall never forget a banquet of the medical association I attended with my husband. There were just four women invited to this distinguished banquet and light wines were served throughout. As I looked down the long line of men at the table I thought I had never seen a finer looking set of men. Before the evening was half over most of these men had ceased to be intelligent men; for they had changed into worse than idiots through the indulgence in light wine. This was personal liberty. God forbid the coming of the return of the use of "light wine and beer" into the social life of America! Such freedom infringes upon the well being of the whole community.

The Carnegie Institute published an elaborate, careful, scientific study of alcohol and human efficiency. "On the question of beer," the report says: "There is no longer room for doubt in reference to the toxication of alcoholic beverages." In each of the tests made (too long to put in detail), some degree of harm was noted. In four, the loss of efficiency has rated as high as 20 per cent. or over. In five, between 15 and 20 per cent.

In type writing the loss of efficiency rated over 50 per cent. From the economical standpoint it would be folly to return to beer of any per cent. No matter from what point of view you consider the question — whether from the ethical or economical, the return of "light wines and beer" would be disastrous, and the "wets" know it, from past experience.

I have been told time and time again by college men, who have risen to high positions, that before prohibition it was very difficult for young men to come out of college decent men.

Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston university recently at a public meeting said: "The contribution of prohibition to student morality had been immeasurable, that in days previous to prohibition drunkenness was more prevalent by 100 per cent. than today." He added "It is worth all the time and trouble it has caused." This testimony is especially timely as Nicholas Butler, president of Columbia college, New York, a few days ago declared that prohibition had no place in the Constitution of the United States. Mr. Butler may be well informed along his line, but sadly deficient in law.

Blackstone, of international fame, said: "The law is a rule of civic conduct prescribed by the supreme power of a state commanding that which is good and prohibiting what is wrong." John Lock said: "The end of government is the welfare of mankind." The functions of the federal government are paternal.

Mr. Butler has joined himself to the wets in his run for governor of New York state. He may try to twist the Constitution to help the wets and further his own personal interest, but he does not fool any one. Those who insist that prohibition does not prohibit and the Volstead act is futile will do well to consider a suggestion made by Mrs. Peabody, chairman of law enforcement in a recent meeting: "That if the state of New York lacks money to enforce prohibition, it should borrow from Massachusetts which by virtue of enforcing the Volstead act had closed seven jails and sold two." If this is not sufficiently convincing they may consider the report just given by Theodore A. Lathrop, general secretary of the Massachusetts society of cruelty to children. "Temperance, as a cause of child abuse and neglect has (since national prohibition), at all times been less than half and now is down to nearly one-third, of what it was before national prohibition." If Massachusetts can under the Volstead act close seven jails and sell two and can protect the children from abuse and neglect, every other state can if they have men honest and sincere. That is all that is lacking. If they can not enforce the Volstead act, they can not or will not enforce any laws. If they choose not so to do. What the world needs is a few more public officials with backbones like Mrs. Willebrandt, the assistant attorney general of the United States. She says, "It is not as expensive to enforce the prohibition law, as it is to breed criminals." That is just what our country has the reputation of doing—breeding more criminals than any other civilized nation. This is not the fault of prohibition but the fault of our public officials who are corrupt."

America stands at the cross roads. Maintaining the Volstead act and enforcing it points to a happy, prosperous and excellent nation, that shall lead the world with the green pastures of a perfect civilization. This is the sign board at the right: to the left is the sign board of the "wets," that would make our beloved America, the laughing stock of the whole world. Which is it to be?

From Small Beginnings

Ivar Aasen, the Peasant, Maker of a Language

What have you done for your country? people sometimes ask. "Not much," most of us answer. If any one had asked that question of Ivar Aasen about 1895 he could have answered with a smile. "Oh, not much; simply made the language that most people in the country use!" That was the remarkable thing that Ivar Aasen accomplished: he actually made over a language, invented new phrasings, made a new grammar, made a new dictionary; in fact he treated language much as a tailor treats cloth; he made it to suit himself and he ended by suiting his people. It was the most remarkable language accomplishment of modern times. The inventors of Volapuk and other artificial languages never met with great success; Ivar Aasen met with the most astounding success, and in his own lifetime saw his artificial language become the common language of the ordinary people of Norway.

Ivar's father died and left the lad of 13 to carry on the hard farm work. Still, forced by some impulse, he read every book on which he could lay his hands. They were not books of sensational stories, but good substantial books that were worth while. In five years he had gained a real education—and had carried on his farm work, too. A school teacher was needed, and the young farmer offered himself for the work. He was only a boy but he had far greater ability in learning than had most men. His learning won him a place in the home of an author who owned numerous books. Here, once more, Ivar Aasen read everything he could find. He studied Latin, Greek, English, French, German, Danish—anything he could find to study. He was one of those remarkable young men to whom grammar is no mystery; almost by instinct he mastered the grammar of any language that he studied. By the time he was 30 he had an education such as college professors do not usually have.

Around him he heard the peasants singing old songs. He loved these old songs, listened to them, wrote them down, and finally gathered them into a book that won popular favor. Another thing that he enjoyed was the peasant dialect. He noticed that people from a distance spoke in a dialect peculiar to themselves. He set out on his travels, went to every place in Norway, and studied the many dialects. After some years, he devised a new dialect language, made up from all the dialects, made a dictionary and a grammar, and wrote books in the composite speech. That new language became at once popular. Honors were heaped upon the peasant-scholar. The government gave him a pension, and he lived a serene life of study until his death in 1896. Perhaps better than any other person he knew and understood the Norwegian peasants, their folk songs and folk lore, and the language that sprang from their hearts.

William H. Cruickshank of No. 121 Broadway has been appointed a member of the Norwich gas and electrical commissioners for a term of five years, dating from May 15th. Three Sewer Hearings

About 8:30 o'clock, d. s. t., the committee on sewers held hearings on the proposed assessments for the Oakridge street, Mowry avenue and Orchard street sewers. The first hearing was on the Oakridge street sewer. Among those heard in opposition to the proposed assessments against their property were Daniel Zerosek, Anthony Domiski, Mr. Povel and Eliza Bowen Daly, the latter being heard by proxy. Most of those heard objected to the assessments claiming that they already have sewer connections with the sewer in Boswell avenue or Hickory street. One man stated that his land is so low that he couldn't connect with the Oakridge street sewer.

In Mowry avenue sewer hearing, Andrew B. Davies appeared in behalf of the Peck-McWilliams company which owns property there. He stated that the company has already paid an assessment for the Smith avenue sewer and is down for an assessment on the Roosevelt avenue sewer. A good part of the land is only sand and gravel and is unfit for building purposes. The company uses the sand and gravel in connection with its business. Mr. Davies stated that the company is not trying to escape assessment but feels that only 100 feet should be assessed. He exhibited a plan of the company's property to clarify his statements. An objection was also received from Harriet E. Douglass against the assessment against her property.

The Orchard street sewer hearing was next taken up. Thomas Vittalini, No. 14 Orchard street, stated that he is already connected with the sewer in Baltic street. His land is so low that he can't use the Orchard street sewer, he claimed.

Mrs. Lucy Quarto complained that she has no use for the new sewer. Her land is on the low side of the street. Mrs. E. M. Boyer, by proxy, stated that her property is already connected with the sewer in Baltic street. Her land is too low for the Orchard street sewer. Mrs. E. A. Fell, by proxy, claimed that she has already paid an assessment for the Baltic street sewer. Anthony Zeroll told the committee that he has full benefit of the sewer and is proud of the sewer. However, he felt that the assessment against his property is a little too high.

The hearings were then declared closed and the council assembled for its regular monthly meeting, being called to order at 8:55 o'clock, d. s. t.

Council Meeting

The minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading, according to custom, after which City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read him return of publication on the petition of the Connecticut company for the relocation of poles on Franklin street, from the square to Boswell avenue. Mayor Waters declared the hearing open, Louis Nelkin, who runs a tailor shop on Franklin street, was the only one to be heard on the petition. He called attention to the fact that the relocation would place a pole right in front of his store window. He has an awning in front of his store and the awning overhangs the curb. The pole would interfere with the awning. He suggested that the pole be moved north about 18 inches.

The hearing was then closed.

The ordinance proposed at last month's meeting prohibiting parking in front of the Otis library and on the Chestnut street side of the city barn was read by the city clerk and Mayor Waters declared this hearing open. No one appeared to be heard and the hearing was promptly closed.

Petitions Presented

The meeting proceeded to petitions, which were acted upon as follows:

From James J. Sullivan, et al., for a sewer on Division street extension, a distance of about 300 feet. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Thomas K. Hartley, et al., for a tarbound macadam from Main and Hamilton avenue to Hamilton avenue and Corning road. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From John L. Moody, et al., for a bug light on pole 4547, Cahoon street. Referred to the police committee with power.

From Isaac Fishkin for permission to erect a two story garage at Washington square. A motion was made and passed that the petition be referred to the fire commissioners. T. J. Kelly, counsel for Mr. Fishkin was granted permission to speak. Mr. Kelly asked if the council could not act on the petition without referring it to the fire commissioners for report. Alderman Gebrath said it was the usual procedure to refer such petitions to the fire commissioners for investigation and report. Mayor Waters concurred.

From John Holland and John Pillar asking removal of a tree in front of their properties on Asylum street. Referred to the public works committee with power.

From Rev. Frederick M. Coholan and others asking that bug lights at Convent avenue and Central avenue and near the residence of Rev. W. A. Keefe be replaced with arc lights. Referred to the police committee.

For More Police Protection

From Plaut-Cadden and a number of other merchants asking for additional police protection on Main and Water streets, between Shetucket and Market streets, from 4 a. m. daily until officers are relieved by day men. Referred to the police committee.

From J. Frank Corey and others asking for a macadam street on Slater avenue. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Charles D. Noyes, et al., asking that $4,000 be included in the estimates to provide for the sprinkling of the city's trees and for the care of city parks. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Louise L. Jones, et al., asking the establishment of a grade on the westerly side of McKinley avenue, upper end. Referred to the public works committee.

From Gurdon L. Bidwell, et al., for a tar bound macadam on McKinley avenue, Broad street to Rockwell street. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Morris Bass asking the extension of the sewer on West Thames street to the city line. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Josephine Murtagh, et al., asking the privilege of constructing at their own expense a private drain from Coit street to Ann street. Referred to the public works committee.

From Nathan Belt, et al., for a cement road in North Thames street. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

From Antone Zunsick and Antonio Alfera, No. 23 and No. 33 Hickory street, calling attention to the fact that the city's brook passing their premises and used for sewerage purposes is left unfovered and that offensive odors coming therefrom are injurious to their health and to the health of others. Petitioners asked that steps be taken to cover up the brook. Referred to the public works committee.

From James J. Finnigan, et al., asking for the extension of the macadam on Asylum street from Newton street to Sherman street. Referred to the finance committee to be placed in the estimates.

The committee on public works recommended that the petition of Louise L. Jones, et al., for the establishment of a grade on the westerly side of McKinley avenue, upper end, be granted. The council adopted the recommendation.

Usual Reports Presented.

The monthly report of the street commissioner, monthly report of the city treasurer, the quarterly report of the chief of police and the quarterly report of the cashier of the water department were received and accepted.

The council accepted the annual report of the water commissioners, and referred it back to the water board for printing, the usual number of copies to be printed for distribution.

The annual report of the board of park commissioners was received and accepted.

The council then adopted a resolution approving the Connecticut Company's petition for a relocation of poles on Franklin street, with one or two minor changes in location. The council, in approving the petition, acceded to the request of Mr. Netkin.

The police commissioners recommended that the petition of Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, to change lights on Golden street from bug lights to arc lights be granted. The recommendation was adopted.

Mrs. Lucy Quarto complained that the council then approved the action of the water board in awarding the contract for the construction the dam at the new Deep River brook reservoir to Louis Petrossi of Hartford, for $154,420.

City Clerk Pullen read a communication from the Duwell Athletic club calling the attention of the council to the fact that the club is to hold a five mile marathon race, open to all entrants from the eastern part of the state, on Memorial day, and inviting the city to donate a prize or trophy. After some discussion of the matter the communication was referred to the amusement committee, the council allowing them up to $25 for a loving cup as the city's prize.

Donations Voted.

R. S. Griswold camp, No. 6, U. S. W. V., through its adjutant, Frank Q. Smith, asked, in a communication to the council, if the council would make its usual $100 donation towards the Memorial day expenses.

Sedgwick post, No. 1, G. A. R., through its commander, in a letter to the council, invited the council to take part in the Memorial day exercises and requested the usual donation of $300. The invitation was accepted and both appropriations were voted.

Adopts Traffic Ordinance.

The council then adopted the new traffic ordinance, prohibiting parking in front of the Otis library and on the Chestnut street side of the city barn and ordered it published in accordance with law.

Mayor Waters announced his appointment of William A. Cruickshanks to be a member of the board of gas and electrical commissioners for five years dating from May 15th. The appointment was approved by the council.

Department bills were approved as follows:

Recreation commission, $647.89; water department, $7,751.56; cemetery department, $705.74; gas and electric department, $60,074.27; finance department, $26,596.09; fire department, $6,142.91; police department, $5,-860.72; street lighting, $2,657.49; public works department, $7,823.53; Deep River reservoir, $8,464.65; park department, $176.41.

Adjournment was taken at 9.40 d. s. t., until May 20th, at 7, standard time, at which time it is expected that the estimates will be acted upon.

CITY RECEIPTS, $50,982.48 FROM WATER DEPARTMENT

The board of water commissioners, as shown by their annual report accepted by the court of common council Monday evening at the council's May meeting, at the close of the fiscal year, March 31, had on hand a balance of $23,488.54 to be turned over to the city treasurer, which will make $50,982.48 total coming to the city from the water department in the year. Accompanying the report are the reports of the supervisor of outside work and also the reports of cashier and inspector.

The report says in part:

At the beginning of our fiscal year, we estimated our receipts at $105,000, our expenses at $65,000 and the balance to be turned over to the city treasurer at $40,000. As shown in the financial statement (made a part of the report), the receipts exceed the estimate by $9,540.69 and the amount to be paid over to the city treasurer exceeds the estimate by $10,982.48. The gross receipts for the year exceed those of last year by $9,115.62.

During the past year the board has started its largest project since the history of the works. On August 4th, 1925, the city meeting on recommendation of the board of water commissioners voted to appropriate $1,086,000 for the construction of a dam and reservoir on Deep river, in the town of Colchester, with a pipe line from the dam to Marland's corner. The board immediately began to acquire the necessary land for the reservoir site and authorized Chandler & Palmer, their engineers, to proceed with the necessary surveys, plans, investigations, etc.

The board purchased four farms outright with all their buildings and also acquired parts of other farms at an acreage price of $35. The total price paid for the real estate at this date is $40,177 and the total area is 723 acres. Options will be taken up shortly on an additional 25 acres at $25 per acre.

Pipe line rights have been acquired where necessary and the price paid from the dam down toward the city has been at the rate of 20 cents per lineal foot, except when a material saving was made by a cut off when more was paid. From the dam to Fitchville about 50 per cent of the line will be on private right of way. The land and pipe line rights of way were all obtained without condemnation.

The length of the line from Marland's corner to the dam is 21,700 feet of which 14,500 feet will be 24 inches in diameter and 7,200 feet will be 20 inches in diameter. The pipe was bought from R. Nicoll & company, New York, and is shipped from France. All of the 24 inch pipe came last season.

Contracts have been let for laying two sections of the pipe line of about three miles each. One section from the dam toward the city was let at $2 per foot and the other section at $1.85. The board furnishes the jointing material and distributes the pipe. The board plans to lay a substantial amount of pipe with city men.

The plans for the dam have been approved by William G. Smith, a member of the state board of engineers. The work on the dam will be started in May.

One of the important problems on the project was the water diversion from the mill owners. There are six mill privileges in use on the stream below the dam, starting with Gilman Bros., and ending with the Falls company. The board retained the services of Charles T. Main of Boston to make a report on the damage to each of these properties and at the present time, two of the mill owners, the Falls company and the American Woolen company, have accepted the amounts set by Mr. Main as fair. The other owners have not been interviewed in regard to the settlement but the board expects to make a settlement with all of them.

It is the aim of the board to be able to use some of the water from the new supply next spring. About 2,000 feet of 24 inch pipe was laid under the supervision of the water department last fall and it is our intention to continue that part of the work early this spring. With the completion of the Deep river project the city of Norwich will have a supply of water adequate for many years, if not for all time.

The members of the board are Frank H. Quinley, John J. Corkery, Charles A. Hagberg, Arthur E. Story and John A. Mitchell.

CONNECTICUT BUILDING AT PHILADELPHIA SESQUI-CENTENNIAL

CONNECTICUT BUILDING AT PHILADELPHIA EXPOSITION

The building which has been selected by Governor Trumbull's sesquicentennial committee in which to house the exhibits of Connecticut's state activities and form the headquarters of Connecticut's sons and daughters, whether within or without the state, who may visit the exposition at Philadelphia has been based upon the old State House in Hartford, designed by the celebrated architect, Charles Bulfinch. This building which served as the home of Connecticut's seat of government from its completion in 1796-1873 when the present capitol was first occupied is not only beautiful in its architecture and setting, but also beautiful in its history.

This building which occupies State House Square, originally known as Meeting House Yard, stands upon a site dedicated to public uses by Rev. Thomas Hooker and the founders of the colony in 1636. It was upon this location where the original Meeting House stood in which The Fundamental Orders, Connecticut's first written constitution, were framed and promulgated. It was from near this square that in 1687 the Colonial Charter of 1662 was rescued from Sir Edmund Andros and hidden in the famous Charter Oak. Here also was located the first State House, occupied from 1719-1796, in which Washington and Count Rochambeau were welcomed in 1780.

It was in this State House Square that the patriots and soldiers during colonial times, the Revolutionary war and the War of 1812 assembled, and from this place, during the Civil war, the soldiers of Hartford departed, and here they were received upon their return. Here also was the site of the Liberty Cottage and the center of many of Connecticut's war activities during the World war, 1914-1918.

It is an adaptation of this historic building recently restored by Connecticut citizens and various patriotic societies as centered about the old senate chamber that Governor Trumbull's sesqui-centennial committee has decided to erect at Philadelphia. The cut above shown shows the building as it will appear, facing Broad street, the principal street of the exposition grounds, backing down towards the Street of 1776 which is a street lined on both sides by reproductions of historic houses. The porch, classical in design, here shown is 45 feet in length and 14 feet in depth and is approached by means of steps 12 feet long which are reached from the Broad street walk by a commodious brick walk of colonial design.

Entering the front doors which are to be a reproduction of the front doors of the old State House, one enters the main exhibition room which is 45 feet square, with 5 windows on three sides with intervening pilasters and crowning cornices. The side facing the front, however, is to be occupied by two fire places and the beautiful panelled wall and facade on which will be hung various portraits.

The exhibit of the several state departments will be arranged in this room in various alcoves and along the walls as may be best adapted to the exhibit to be installed.

Passing through the doors at the farther end of the exhibition room, one enters the two-story annex which is to be constructed to furnish the necessary rest rooms for the public and living quarters for those in charge. The central feature of the outside of the building is a re-adaptation of the dome from the old state house crowned by the figure of Justice in which will be installed a clock made possible through the favor of The Seth Thomas Clock company of Thomaston, Connecticut. The lighting of the building, both within and without, has been made possible through the favor of The Hartford Electric Light company and The Miller company of Meriden co-operating in the perfection of these features of the building which stands in the midst of a beautiful sloping lawn 150 feet square. For purposes of safety as well as architectural beauty, the roof will be protected by slate-gray asbestos roofing, and the sides of the building by ewalls of brick; thus maintaining the general appearance of the old state house in Hartford.

The contract for the construction of this building has been placed with the H. Wales Lines company of Meriden who have already built so many Connecticut buildings at other "centennials" and are so well known throughout the country. It is expected that this building, an example of Connecticut's best architecture, centrally located on the exposition grounds, will serve not only as a fitting home of Connecticut's official exhibits, but also as the comfortable headquarters of Connecticut people and their friends.

The special committee which Governor John H. Trumbull has selected to take in hand Connecticut's participation at the sesqui-centennial is composed of State Librarian George S. Godard, chairman, Ex-Governor Frank B. Weeks and State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers. Their official designation is "The Governor's Sesqui-centennial Committee."

REPORT MISSING MAN (WAS SEEN IN NEW HAVEN

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 3—In an endeavor to ascertain whether William Shragowitz, 39, of 851 Bank street, is dead or alive as the result of his sudden disappearance a week ago today, the police tonight caused postal cards giving a description of the man to be sent to two score police departments. The police are without the slightest clue to follow in the endeavor to obtain trace of the missing man and because of that fact it is not known whether he has committed suicide at Ocean Beach, where his automobile was found abandoned last Tuesday, or has met with foul play, or even whether he took a sudden desire to leave New London. Today the police received information that Shragowitz was in New Haven and a check-up of that report is being made. But the fact remains that ever since Shragowitz disappeared last week Monday afternoon, nobody has been found that saw him later than 4.30 o'clock that day.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Emerson, formerly of Greenwich, who a few months ago purchased the house near Bill hill, Lyme, known as the Anderson place and owned by H. G. Hall of New London have arrived and plan to make their permanent home there.

SUSIE EXPERIENCES THE USUAL THRILLS IN LEARNING TO DRIVE AUTO

After recovering from her most uncomfortable experience of horseback riding Susie has, tried her hand at navigating a more modern vehicle of transportation, namely, the automobile of the boy friend. She writes of her experience of learning to drive as follows:

Dear Sports Ed:

There ain't no use talkin' a horse ain't no means of gettin' over the ground fast. When it comes to speed a auto has got a horse lookin' like a 1893 model hat it's so far behind the times. A horse is all right to peddle milk and meat with but when you wanta see the world climb into a auto. Step on the gas and you get some wheres without havin' to use crutches for the next week. Yes I is quite a booster for autos and my enthusiasm is cause I is learnin' to drive. Of course there is more things to remember than on a horse but you don't hafta hang on so tite.

Well my learnin' to drive come about like this. The boy friend got over his grouch all right and the other afternoon he shows up at the house wantin' to go for a ride. I ain't turin' down no travelin' dates so I says sure. Well we gets out on the asphalt patta and the boys says where to and I says anywhere but what about showin' me how to drive. Nope, says he, autos ain't no things what girls should drive. Well, says I, lets go down to the farm and ride the horse a while. No, says the boy in self defense, I'd better teach you to drive and he did.

Gosh aint it a great thrill when you get in back of that wheel. You may have rid miles and miles but when you get in back of the wheel for the first time everything looks different, believe me. Well, the boy drives out on one of them country roads where them Slaughter-House Sheiks take their Shebas at night. Remember Ed this was in the afternoon cause I don't want you to get no wrong steer about me. Well the kid stops the car and says now do your stuff. I climbs over in behind the wheel.

When I gets there feels kinda helpless so I says whatda you first. Throw out your clutch says the boy. I looks around and I glimpses a coupla things sticking up through the floor and one says "Clutch" on it so I reaches down and grabs it. I give it a pull but it don't move. Watcha doin' says the boy. Tryin' to throw the clutch out, says I, but the darned thing is tied down. Dont be so dumb, says the kid, just push it with your foot. Well I does and says whatda you do now? Shift into low says the boys. Well a that has me stopped a couple minutes but I remembers how I'd seen the boy pull a rod stickin' up in the car so I gives it a pull and takes my feet offa the clutch and the first thing I knows we is goin' backwards. Put on your break yells the boy and I pushes something and we goes back all the faster and the first thing I knows we is in the ditch side of the road when the boy grabs something and we stops. 'Course I ain't scared much so I says that was pretty good for the first time only I wanted to go front ways instead of back. I guess I musta done something wrong. I'll say you did says he. Then he shows me how to do things the way they auta be did and after a half a hour I gets so's I know the clutch from the break and the break from the thing what you push to make the car go. Well I gets along pretty good only I runs over a coupla chickens and near hits a pole (telephone pole I means). The kid pays for the chickens what ain't got no business in the road anyway but we don't do no damage to the pole which is lucky. Well thatw as the first day's session.

I goes out again in a coupla days, seein' how the boy ain't workin' and I gets so's I drive pretty good when there ain't nothin' in the road. Then the boy says your goin' to drive in traffic now and we heads for the city. 'Course I ain't afraid but as we get into the city I see it ain't like drivin' in the country. Every car what comes towards me I kinda think is goin' to hit me so I holler not loud but just so's the driver will see I'm comin'. Well we gets down town all right me bumpin' into one machine what stops kinda quick. Well we gets down to the corner of Broadway and Main street and there's that good lookin' officer on duty, you know who I mean, Bert Lamphere. Bert is wavin' to all the autos whats goin' by and as they is a lotta cars ahead of me I stops my car and is lookin' around to see if they is anybody what I know. I sees Mame Jones on the sidewalk so I yells Hello Mame so's she'd be sure and see me drivin' a car. Just about that time the boy says go on the officer is givin' you the signal. I looks up and Bert is wavin' at me. Just to be social like I waves back and yells YooHoo Bertie and then looks back to see if Mame sees how strong I is with the traffic cops.

Then the boy says for the love of Mike will you get goin' before we gets pinched. Imagine that, me gettin' pinched for wavin' at a officer what I knows. I looks back at Bert and he is motioning for me to come to him so I hops outa the car and walks over to him thinkin' he wants to say somethin' to me. He did all right. When I gets to him he says, "Say young lady do you want me to give you a ticket?" "Sure" says I, thinking maybe he is got a extra pasteboard for a dance or something. Well I will he says if you don't get that car outa here and stop blockin' traffic and it'll cost you about ten bucks. When he speaks about the admission price I says I guess I don't want no ticket to them high class affairs. Well I goes back to the machine and gosh they is a line of autos all up the street and they is cheerin' for me by blowin' their horns or at least I thinks they is until some feller says watcha doin' goin' to camp there all night. Well I give him a look what didn't carry no love with it, I hops back into the car and bein' a little excited I stalls the dam thing so I says to the boy you better get this outa here and he drives the car home.

Let me tell you though I ain't goin' to give up and someday maybe you'll see me drivin' down the pike without no male coaches along with me.

Well since I got outa the politics I hadda lotta questions about the politics of Norwich and I just finds out that I wasn't so far wrong when I handed you that dope about them two drug store fellers. I hear now that the feller what was mayor oncet has dropped dout but that the feller whats run that drug store at the corner of Broadway and Main street is goin' to be nominated by the republicans.

Well Ed, I hopes I see you at the game at New London Tuesday afternoon when the Academy's play Chapman's Tech. Them Academy boys is playin' pretty good baseballs and if they don't get no swelled heads they oughta have a good season. Them cheerin' leaders is the berries and I is sure glad to see that the old school has at last woked up and ain't dumb like so oysters no more but can cheer like a regular school outfits.

Well see you again sometime.

SUSIE.

ACADEMY TO PLAY AT CHAPMAN TECH TODAY

The Academy team will play its first game of the season in the Eastern Connecticut league today at Chapman Tech. The game will be played at Morgan field and a large body of undergraduates will accompany the team to New London.

Coach Brigham will send Johnny Greene against the Whalers and from the way Johnny has been pitching this season there is little fear that he will not be able to hold them. Of course there is that element in baseball whereby the best laid plans of coaches and players are caused to go astray. Chapman was beaten by Windham 3 to 2 an dthe Academy trimmed Windham 9 to 2 so by comparative scores the Academy should win but it is never certain until the last man is out. Mish will do the catching for the Academy and the remainder of the lineup will be the same as beat Crosby on Saturday. The game is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Moosup Town Team Wants Games

CHICAGO, May 3—(AP)—Detroit bunched hits in the first and second innings today, and broke Chicago's winning streak of five in a row, 3 to 1. Manush's circuit drive, Cobb's single and Heilmann's triple put the Tigers in the lead and they were never headed.

Ashland Swamps Danielson Club

Sunday afternoon at the Connecticut mill's grounds the Danielson team met a tough proposition in the Ashland A. A. of Jewett City, being defeated, 14-4. "Spike" Liberty on the mound for Ashland, pitched mid-season ball allowing but four hits in the six innings he worked. He was relieved by Stanley, a promising youngster, who snowed up exceptionally well.

Bourden and Lagasse pitching for Danielson, were both hit freely.

One of the features of the game was the hitting of the Ashland team. "Lefty" Zavistoski, a recruit, socked one of Bairclen's shoots to deep right, over the wall for a homer.

"Chip" Dugas and "Court" Whitney have signed up for the season, both are mighty good ballplayers and should be a great addition to the Sateenmakers.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL BASEBALL LEAGUE WILL GET UNDER WAY NEXT WEEK

Much interest is being manifested by the younger baseball fans of the city in the opening of the annual grammar school baseball league, which is scheduled to start next week. Teams representing Broadway, Greeneville, Elizabeth Street, Town Street and Taftville schools have entered and indications are that there will be some exciting contests when the teams get together.

The games will probably be played on the Academy grounds and Duwell field, with each team playing three games per week. To encourage the competition, The Norwich Bulletin has again contributed a handsome trophy cup, which is to be awarded to the school which captures the league honors.

This will make the fourth season for the league, the last series resulting in a tie between Greeneville and St. Patrick's which on account of the late season, the schools were unable to play off. The committee in charge of the event consists of Frank Clapp, J. B. Stanton, J. E. Murphy and E. J. Fritz, and the committee is hoping to make the coming season the most interesting season yet played and develop some good baseball material.

BASEBALL TO HELP WITH TWO MEMORIES FOR MATTY

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Organized baseball's support of the separate projects memorializing Christy Mathewson, one located at Bucknell college and the other at Saranac Lake, N. Y., were disclosed today, together with the appointment of a group of the game's leading officials as members of a memorial committee.

The proceeds of two major league benefit games will go toward the erection of the memorials to the famous pitcher of the old New York Giants. The first will be played May 28 at Braves field, Boston, between the New York and Boston nationals for the benefit of the fund being raised by the American Legion to erect a welfare center and club-house at Saranac Lake, where Mathewson died last October.

The second contest, on July 7, will be played at the Polo grounds between the Giants and the Washington Senators, American league champions. The proceeds of the game will be devoted to the erection of a useful memorial to "big six" at Bucknell, the scene of his boyhood days and later his triumphs as a college athlete.

Baseball Commissioner Landis, as honorary chairman, heads the memorial committee.

PUTNAM SILK SOX BEAT ROCKVILLE TEAM, 7 TO 5

The Belding Heminway Silk Sox, of Putnam, added another scalp to their collection when they visited Rockville and administered a seven to five beating to the Belding team of that city.

Coffey, the Putnam twirler, displayed good form and although touched for three hits was not crowded at any time. In the seventh inning Plantier and Chase replaced the Coffey, McClean battery. Rockville evidently scented this combination as a weaker one and staged a rally, scoring four runs. This, however, was not sufficient as the Putnam nine had crossed the plate on seven occasions during the contest. Kirby and Nelson both poled out triples into deep center and shared the batting honors of the day with Graft who dropped a three bagger into right.

The Silk Sox will visit New London next Sunday and play the Fort Trumbull Stars in the first of a three game series.

AGGIES PLAY CLARK TEAM AT STORRS WEDNESDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, May 3.—The Connecticut Aggie ball team got down to work here this afternoon in preparation for two contests that will be played this week, both with Massachusetts nines. The first will be with the Clark university club here at Storrs on Wednesday afternoon and the second will be with the Springfield nine at Springfield on Saturday.

Coach Dole dopes the Springfield game as the more severe test of the two, and he will accordingly save Makofski as his pitcher for that game. Eddy, sophomore twirler, will pitch against Clark, according to Coach Dole.

Nanfeldt, who played a great game at first base against Trinity, has apparently won a regular berth. Not only was his fielding of high order in that game, but he also connected for two hits, one of which was for extra bases.

EVERYTHING READY FOR GOLF EXHIBITION MAY 16TH

The weatherman is the only one that may dampen the success of the golf exhibition at the Norwich Golf club on May 16th when Walter Hagen and E. S. Stimpson, captain of the Harvard golf team, will play Jouny Farrell, Quaker Ridge pro, and J. E. Wa[illegible]s, Jr., captain of the Yale golf team, in an eighteen hole match. The committee in charge of the exhibition has been entreating the weatherman to provide a day with clear skies and warm weather.

Telegrams have been received from all of the players stating that they will be here and are anticipating playing over the course which they have heard is one of the best natural courses in the state. Tickets for the exhibition are going fast and a gallery of close to 1,000 is expected if the weather is favorable.

THREE COLTS PICKED AS POSSIBLE WINNERS OF DERBY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—Three colts loom large in the calculations of turf prop'ets as possible winners of the Kentucky derby, to be run at Churchill downs on may 15.

Pompey's easy gallop to victory in the wood stakes yesterday and Canter's smashing second to Rockman in the Chesapeake stake Thursday served to fortify the two eastern thoroughbreds in the posts of mild favoritism accorded them on their records as two-year-olds.

With the big race less than two weeks away, however, it seemed certain that horses running in the colors of E. R. Bradley, Lexington Turfman, would attract a tremendous volume of play from Kentuckians.

Sluggers Win

The Taftville Sluggers defeated Miah's All Stars Saturday at the Providence street grounds, by a score of 8 to 1. Sunday they defeated the Cardinals by a 11 to 6 score. It was a pitcher's dual until the sixth inning when heavy hitting by Steamboat Genaro, LeGare and A. Raymond put the game on ice. Lemieux pitched a good game.

Stock Gets His Release

NEW YORK, May 3. — (AP)—Milton Stock, infielder of the Brooklyn Nationals, who held out for a salary increase this spring, today received his unconditional release.

JESS PETTY IS BIG SENSATION OF EARLY SEASON

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Another week in major league baseball has brought to notice an exceptional defense in Chicago and redoubtable pitching in Brooklyn.

Slugging, with hits bunched, has given the New York Yankees eight straight conquests, two over the Boston Red Sox and three each over the Philadelphia Athletics and the champion Washington Senators and behind this attack has been strong mound work and an excellent performance in the field. The American league lead is in the hands of the New Yorkers where last season they were no better than six.

But the Chicago White Sox, led by the veteran second baseman, Eddie Collins, and bolstered by Everett Scott who shortstopped in the American league for a record number of consecutive games have gained six contests in the past week and lost only one. In their magnificent rush a single fielding misplay was recorded, that by Catcher Crouse on Saturday.

Collins' men actually out-hit and out-scored the Yankees in the seven days and a worthwhile forecast on hte result of the 1926 race must await the first visit of the western teams to the east late this week.

Brooklyn's effort, a victorious streak broken by Philadelphia Saturday when Fred Leach and Cy Williams found Dazzy Vance for home runs, is, perhaps, the most amazing development of the season. The Dodgers, with an infield shattered have been pulled together by the sensational play of the little veteran, Rabbit Maranville, and now lead the National league.

Jess Petty, a big lefthander, native of Los Angeles, has won four of the Dodger victories, permitting only 17 hits in 33 innings while Vance, the ace of 1925, has lost his only two starts. Johnny Butler, the 30-year-old infielder from the American association, has been installed at second base after a brief illness and should be a fixture. Although to date he has failed to meet expectations in the hitting department.

The St. Louis Browns, among the pre-season favorites, have failed dismally up to this time, having won only five of 18 starts. During the past week they offered no noticeable improvement and made 21 errors.

Pittsburgh's world champions, after a poor start, appear to have found themselves. They turned in five conquests in seven games last week and outscored all other teams in the National league.

The best pitching performance of the seven days was registered by "Sad Sam" Jones of the Yankees who held Philadelphia to three hits on Wednesday.

Home runs were about even, with the American league getting 28 and the National 27.

WESTERLY

PROTEST KEEPING SWINE IN POPULOUS SECTIONS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. May 3—The May session of the Westerly town council was called to order in the council chamber of the Westerly town hall on Monday morning at 9:45 o'clock by Council President John D. Nichols. Among matters considered by the council was the unsanitary conditions on Pierce street, payment of town and police bills and the receipt and acceptance of reports of town officers. Westerly Town Treasurer James M. Pendleton appeared before the council relative to accounting system of Wall and company of Providence which was inaugurated by the previous council.

Treasurer Pendleton told the council that he came before them to obtain something definite on the town accounting system. He said that Miss Mary Quinlan, assistant in the town treasurer's office, if she was going to carry on the new accounting system, preferred to have Mr. Wall come to Westerly from time to time. The town treasurer and Councilman Trainer said that they had each talked to Mr. Wall, who could not understand why there should be any difficulty with the system. It was the opinion of those of the council who had looked into the system that services of someone at least once a month would be required and at the end of the y ear even more.

A plat was presented, prepared by Engineer Thomas McKenzie of the Westerly sewage department, whereby a right of way was obtained in back yards on the side of Quarry Hill, bounded by Summer, Granite and Spruce street, whereby the sewage of the higher level on Summer street could be cared for by main sewer drains laid in the right of way. The council gave its approval to the releases to the town of Westerly by the property owner.

The council voted its approval of the payment of the regular bills.

In the discussion of payment of bills President Nichols called attention to the dog disposal charges. Clerk Whipple explained that the usual price was $2 but that Talbot had disposed of the body of a dead dog from the Pierce street brook and did not blame him for the $ 3 charge.

Before the police bills were taken up Clerk Whipple said he had received complaint from a motorcycle traffic officer having his muffler cut out open on Saturday night at the time of the street parade. The matter was referred to the police committee of the council to take up.

The report of Health Officer Dr. Samuel C. Webster, was voted approved, showing 64 cases of contagious diseases—German measles 3, chicken pox 5 and measles 56 cases.

Chief of Police Thomas H. Brown's report for the month of April was voted approved, showing 6 arrests, all for intoxication and 2 taken into custody.

The following deferred sewage payments were approved:

April 20, Charlotte P. Stanton, Granite street, $330.07; April 21, estate of George W. Lanphear, $93.56; Est. George C. Lanphear, High street, $41.90 and Mary B. Lowry, $12.30.

Approval was voted on the action of Westerly Town Treasurer James M. Pendleton issuing his notes for $125,000 ,dated May 1, 1926 and due Nov. 1, 1926 to the Old Colony Trust company of Boston at the rate of $2.61 per cent.

Milk dealers' licenses were voted to Mary DeSimone, H. P. Chapman, Sadie Tierney, Peter Panciera, W. A. Wilkinson, J. Frank Davis, William M. Hoxsie, Nat Hazard and Pasquale Celestine.

The council voted to instruct the town clerk to issue his voucher to the town treasurer for the payment to Charles F. Hickox of $78.30, representing the amount assessed against the estate of Abbie N. Hickox, deceased, in error after the estate had been settled.

Victualling licenses were granted Dubrelle and Gallin, 24 Main street; Jennie E. Brown; Weekapaug; Joseph Wagner, Pleasant View and a tavern license to Frederick C. Buffum at Weekapaug.

Under date of April 7, a report in writing was received from Health Officer Dr. Samuel C. Webster, relative to unsanitary conditions in the Pierce street section. In part the report recommended that the conditions should be severely dealt with. Two brooks which started in that section and eventually emptied into the Pawcatuck river near the gas house were reported as filled with debris and stagnant water. It was recommended that the brook be cleared out and that the section between the Pawcatuck river and built up streets be closed in or closed in for its entire length to do away with the possible breeding place of germs and disease or a suitable sized pipe be employed for the purpose. A further recommendation was that the keeping of swine in the compact section of the town of Westerly be done away with. A municipal disposal of the unavoidable accumulation of filth was recommended in Health Officer Webster's report.

A recommendation that the keeping of swine be done away with, brought from the council police committee a list of 105 swine, kept by 20 people, in the compact section of the town, from an enumeration prepared by the Westerly police.

In the discussion it was the sentiment of the council that on end streets in country sections the keeping would be licensed but not on through thoroughfares.

Henry A. Kingsley was voted a police constablew ithout pay.

Councilman Holdsworth was named to investigate the need of street signs and report at the next meeting of the town council.

The council stated that as a number of unusual demands were to be made upon funds, it was desirous of learning how much of the budget figure of $7,750 remained and from the town reports it was found that there remained $5,499.

Superior court for Washington county, April term, came in Monday morning at Westerly, with Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto of Providence on the bench.

Through his attorney Blos' plea was changed to nolo and Judge Capotosto imposed the deferred sentence of 6 mnths in Providence county jail and $100 fine.

The equity case, Lloyd H. Cheesborough of Wequetequock vs The Sullivan Granite Co., of Bradford occupied the remainder of the day. HOW THE PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live. Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed. She spun and wove for her family. When they were ill, she brewed remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes: "I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it and they say it helps them, too.' —Mrs. J. W. Critchett, 2 Hammond Street, Cambridge, Mass.

It has also been decided to open the library on the advanced time. The majority of people here oppose the new time, as it is felt that daylight saving time is of no benefit to the farmer, but owing to the fact that Willimantic is using the advanced time, it is felt that there will be less confusion if the surrounding towns fall into line.

ter than last year, Tax Collector James R. Walsh said Monday.

A leading contractor of the town said Monday that he has half a dozen homes to build here and much other work and there is promise of real activity in the building trades right through the summer season.

Since the advent of May, spring has been operating under forced draught—making up for lost time, apparently. Monday persons complained of the heat, and a complaining humanity appears to be a normal humanity.

At St. James' church the difference will be split between standard time and daylight time on all services. This is arranged by making the schedules for masses, other services and arrangements a half hour later than standard time and a half hour earlier than daylight time.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Tons of wild pigeons were being killed 75 years ago in Connecticut and New York and they found a ready market. Nothing of interest occurred in eastern Connecticut in 1851 and the people had to be content with stories from more distant points.

Articles in part taken from the files of the Norwich Courier of 1851 are as follows.

Tuesday, April 29, 1851—Jenny Lind sang in Pittsburgh on the 26th but refused to fill her engagement to sing there on the evening of the 27th, and everyone feels that she is justified in refusing. While her concert was going on some rowdies threw stones into the concert hall, and later, they threw stones into her dressing room. Thus has Pittsburgh added to the disgrace of electing Jo Baker as mayor, the stigma of insulting the good, amiable, and benevolent queen of song.

The crew of the steamer Cleopatra, until lately belonging to the line between this city and New York, have been arrested by New York authorities for endeavoring to smuggle war materials into Cuba. The members of the crew are held under heavy bond. It is believed that the seizure of the ship will do much toward breaking up the plot to make Cuba a separate government, the plot of some desperate politicians in this country.

Money has been appropriated by congress for the placing of a can-buoy on Pea-field reef, off Black Rock harbor in Long Island sound.

Thursday May 1, 1851—At Charleston next Monday will be held the convention of delegates from the State's Rights association of the several districts of South Carolina. The question to be decided is whether or not South Carolina shall immediately secede from the Union or await the co-operation or other southern states.

One of the employes of the New London, Willimantic and Palmer railroad was severely injured Wednesday when jammed between two cars at the local depot. His condition still remains dangerous.

The steamboat train from Boston Monday evening numbered 11 cars, everyone of them packed with passengers.

Those who wish to attend the World's Fair in Paris have had figures prepared for them showing that the round trip will cost about $400, the sum of $200 being the steamer fare to and from France.

The men guilty of robbing the Phoenix bank of Westerly have been tried and sentenced to eight years in jail, with the exception of one man who forfeited his bond of $16,000. This brings to end the series of famous trials.

On Friday the income of the Erie railroad was $3,000.000 a considerable income. This was made possible because the state loaned the railroad this sum of money at the commencement of the road, providing that if the money should construct a single track from the Hudson river to Lake Erie, and run its engines over it before the middle of May, the state would release the road from the payment of the $3,000,000. The trains were run over the road a few days ago and the comptroller immediately released the road.

Saturday, May 3, 1851—Since the pigeon season opened fully 75 tons of pigeons have been shipped into New York state over the Erie railroad. The last carload of wild pigeons sent in from the countries of Steuben and Alleghany totaled 7 tons. Several tons of wild pigeons from Connecticut have also been shipped over this railroad.

The Emperor of Russia has recently completed the building of a railroad from St. Petersburg to Moscow, a distance of 420 miles. He will now build a railroad from St. Petersburg to Warsaw, between 700 and 800 miles. The engineer in charge is Major T. S. Brown, late engineer on the Erie railroad.

Charles C. Griswold of Lyme and Elias Perkins of New London have been elected directors of the New Haven and New London railroad.

The ship Pocahontas of Tisbury has been sunk by a sperm whale according to advices received here. The whale had been harpooned and when everything seemed well the whale turned and came toward the boat at a rapid rate, literally crushing the ship. The crew was saved by another ship nearby. This is believed to be the second instance of an attack on a ship by a whale. The other ship was the Essex, in the Pacific, which was lost.

Joseph Soukup paid a fine of $25 and costs of $11.25 for reckless driving. Soukup was driving a Buick sedan at East Main street, Saturday evening and ran into a Ford touring car which came out of Crown street and was being operated by Stephen Hayostek. The Ford car had the left fender and left running board damaged. The Buick engine was slightly damaged but there were no personal injuries. Earl Chevalier of Hazardville was fined $5 and costs of $11.25 for using improper markers. He took a chance on using on his Chevrolet car markers which had been issued for a Ford. Tony Gresetti, a motorcycle operator, paid $20.11 and costs of $16.25 for speeding on his motorcycle and for operating it with the cut out open. Officer Burns of the local state police barracks, who made the arrest, said that several complaints had been received about the manner in which Gresetti operated his motorcycle on Main street. Treffly Ducharme, an old offender, was sent to jail for 30 days for intoxication. He was found lying on the side of the road in West Stafford Saturday afternoon.

Naturally pretty teeth are hidden by a dingy film coat

Don't hide yours any longer. Accept this remarkable dental test that restores "off-color" teeth to whiteness, and firms gums.

A new method in clearing up cloudy teeth, in giving "off-color" teeth an almost dazzling whiteness has been found.

Leading dentists urge it widely. For it protects the teeth and firms tender gums.

It works by removing a dingy film that forms on your teeth, and dulls them by absorbing discolorations from food, smoking, etc. A slippery film you can feel with your tongue; and that invites germ growth, decayed teeth and gum troubles.

Old-type dentifrices failed to remove it successfully. That's why brushing fails you.

Beneath it are the teeth you envy in others. One's whole appearance changes as clear, white teeth come.

WALTER D. MAXSON'S BODY DISCOVERED BY CALLER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 3—Walter D. Maxson 66, well known marine engineer, died suddenly of heart trouble in his apartment at the Hotel Mohican late Sunday. Mr. Maxson was engineer of the steam yacht Cytheria, which is now berthed in Shaw's cove and being made ready for summer cruising. Mr. Maxson had been a sufferer of a malignant growth of the stomach and had been operated for the ailment. During the afternoon and while alone in his apartment, Mr. Maxson suffered a heart attack. Going to the bathroom because of a nauseated feeling, Mr. Maxson collapsed and expired almost immediately. The body was discovered by Walter Reed, an intimate acquaintance of Mr. Maxson who had followed a practice of calling on him every Sunday. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman was notified and pronounced death due to heart trouble.

When there are 27 cases in the police court in a single session, this city is hitting a pace in the disorderly class that has never been equalled. Drunks rolled around Saturday and Sunday as if there was no knowledge here of the Volstead act. Most of the offenders were the uniform of Uncle Sam and many of these are in the coast guard service, designated as the arm of the service to enforce the law. When the police raided the joint at 656 Main street they ran into a nest of sailors, black and white, and into a place where a couple of negresses were the attraction. Mary Peterson was one of the women of the house and Lucial Morgan was another. The "boss" was Jordan Manning, a former sailor, discharged from the service two weeks ago and who admitted that he took it into his head to operate a disorderly house that he might get easy money. He relied upon his former shipmates to patronize him and in that he wisely placed his confidence. Where he got the Peterson woman is not known, but he picked one who has a court record and who has been imprisoned for frequenting houses of ill repute. Lucela has a criminal record also for she served seven months for shoplifting and has been out of jail but about three weeks. She said she was "doing anything" at present, meaning that she had no employment by which she could earn an honest living. She also said she was without money and could not leave the city and take up a residence where she was not known. Judge Prince suggested to her that the walking was good, but that only made Lucial show a set of molars and grinders and to emit a loud guffaw. The operator of the place was fined $100 and was ordered committed for 30 days if he could not pay the fine imposed, then to get out of town. Nearly a dozen male frequenters of the place were fined $5 each. They were negroes and whites. All paid, though companions on shipboard were called upon by some of the bunch to loan money that would settle with the court.

Two boys, 17 and 16 respectively, were charged with the theft of an automobile or rather with going to the garage where it was kept and taking the car without the permission of the owner, Mrs. Palmer. The boys drove the car to a point near Niantic where the machine went dead as the gasoline became exhausted. Then it was push the car home or get a service car to tow it into town. A tow was secured and the youths came back here in it. They manufactured stories until their supply failed them and then they were trapped and one confessed. Probation Officer Mansfield was called on to get the facts as to what the youths had done and to give him opportunity to do that the case was continued. The boys were released in his custody.

Joseph L. Wilson was charged with the theft of an overcoat from George Antanac of Niantic. Wilson denied that he took the coat, but the police declare that the evidence is conclusive. They say that Wilson not only took the coat, but that he sold it and then made off with the coat from the man to whom he sold it. Antanac was not in court this morning, but he will be brought in tomorrow, to which day the case was continued. Wilson went to jail, as he could not furnish a bond of $250.

There were a dozen cases of intoxication in which civilians were the accused. James Brown, an old man was one of them and he was sent to jail to stay 30 days. James has had his chance and did not take advantage of it. He was fined Saturday and after he paid he was found very drunk and was locked up.

Patsy Pernelli, a traveller, was found making a bed of the seats in a New Haven railroad coach. He said he was without funds and just dropped in to the car in the yard at the foot of State street to get a snooze. Patsy had traveled all the way from Pittsburg and had succeeded in beating his way, he admitted. He was told to get out of town now or he would be placed in a predicament that would not permit him to leave in a considerable time.

William Wentworth seems to be engaged in an effort to drink up all the booze he can secure. He became so affected that he realized his condition and sought admission to a hospital to effect a cure. He would not be received there in the informal way in which he sought to enter, so he decided that he would just have his drunk out.

Sailors who were fighting in the street Saturday night were penalized. They were not drunk, but they got into a public breach of the peace that was offensive to others on the highway. All the sailors were turned over to the ships to which they are assigned. There they are likely to get discipline for overstaying leave and for establishing a record of offenses against the laws of the city or the state.

The funeral of Mrs. Charlotte H. Miner, widow of Frederick D. Miner, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Edward A. Flynn, of Niantic. The bearers were Frank Lanphere, John Fitzgerald, Michael Dorsey, and W. E. Hart. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Carmine, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Damalia, of 16 Orchard street, died Sunday at the residence of the child's parents, after a brief illness with pneumonia.

The funeral of Mrs. Giselda Frattorini, wife of Edward Frattorini, 112 Pequot avenue, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence, the service being read by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

A man who is a stranger hereabouts was arrested late this afternoon by Sergeant Martin Kane, of the force of special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, charged with train riding. He was looked up and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. The accused was detected riding on the breast beams of a freight. He was taken from the train and placed under arrest.

Frank Bianchi, of Jay street, was arrested this evening by Patrolman William Riordan charged with violation of the city's traffic ordinances. Bianchi parked his car on restricted territory on State street and the machine was tagged when Patrolman Riordan observed the law violation. When Bianchi, who had been at the Hotel Mohican, emerged from the hotel, it is alleged he tore up the tag and threw it in the officer's face and at the same time applying a vile name to him. It was then that Bianchi was taken into custody.

Chapin, also of Hartford, were in a head-on collision last night on the Hartford turnpike at a point known as Horse Pond, near Chesterfield. Both cars were damaged and Michael Botko, Hartford, father of the driver of the Botko machine suffered lacerations of the head and left wrist. The driver of the car was arrested by State Police Officer Frank Kulwoski, Groton barracks, charged with reckless driving.

In the Groton town court this morning, Ole T. Johnson, of Poquonoc Bridge was fined $10 and costs on a charge of speeding. Johnson was arrested several weeks ago by Captain Andrew J. McCarthy following Johnson's car running down Mrs. William A. Hempstead, aged Poquonoc Bridge woman, on Thames street, near School street, Mrs. Hempstead suffering a slight concussion of the brain.

John Morrison, United States Coast Guard, stationed at the local section base, state pier, was fined $3 and costs, the latter amounting to $11.42 on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without having an operator's license. He was arrested several days ago by State Police Officer George Sisson, Groton barracks.

Arthur Perry, of West Mystic, and Nathan Wyse, New Haven, both charged with operating an automobile without having a license were not penalized, their cases being continued a week.

A youth of 17 was presented on a charge of breach of the peace, as a result of the alleged acts of the young man as a "Peeping Tom." The case was continued a week upon the statement of the father of the boy that the family would remove to Long Island within a few days. The boy was taken into custody several days ago by State Police Officer Henry Albright following complaint of residents of the borough that the boy was indulging in nightly practice of peering into windows of residences.

Jack Ficarra, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ficarra, 32 Truman street, and Margaret Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Sullivan, 672 Main street, were married this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, the nuptial ceremony being performed by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. Anthony Ficarra, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Brunnie Lawsky, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Mildred Frankowits and Line Ficarra, the latter a sister of the groom. The groom is employed by the Kaybrook Manufacturing company.

Attorney Lubchansky attempted to get the matter of the request of Charles E. Schall, Inc., for the removal of bath houses of the Bath and Beach club off Pequot avenue considered and acted upon this evening at the meeting of the council, but he was successful only in having the matter go to the council in executive session and then it was expected it would be brought back to the council for a decision. Attorney Frank L. McGuire was present for the Bath and Beach club and Attorney Troland was on hand to represent the city. The claim is that the bath houses are an encroachment upon city land and are a nuisance.

WILL NOT INTERFERE IN BLOOM SILK STRIKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 3.—At the meeting of the city council this evening Councilor May sought to have a vote adopted, appointing a committee of three members of the council which should endeavor to bring about a settlement of the labor trouble at the Bloom silk mill in this city. The motion of Councilor May was not seconded, but it finally got before the meeting and was defeated by all the members except the proposer of the motion. The vote was five to one against its acceptance.

Mayor Fox declared his opinion that the council should not meddle with the business of the manufacturer and his employes. He said it would be the part of wisdom for the council to await till such time as its services in the settlement of the trouble were sought. He said also that if the action sought was taken, every time labor difficulties arose the council would be appealed to to stop in and seek a settlement. He said the council was without any power in the matter.

Councilor Scott took the view of the matter that the mayor expressed and was antagonistic to the council having anything to do with the matter.

Mayor Fox again advised against it and said it was his opinion that the council should keep out of the matter and allow the interested parties to settle their own difficulties.

Councilor May replied with some vigor that he did not regard the action he proposed as butting in at all. He said the opinion expressed by the mayor was only his personal opinion and pointed out that the members of the council had opinions also and said they were capable of thinking for themselves. The Mayor sarcastically thanked the councilor for his advice and then put the motion to the council. It was lost, 5 to 1.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sale in South Windham

A cottage house with about 15 acres of land on Babcock Hill, South Windham, has been sold by Mrs. Edna Spencer to Frank E. Beckwith of South Windham. The sale was negotiated by John A. Moran, the real estate broker.

Breed Theatre

Colleen Moore is drawing record crowds to the Breed theatre this week in her latest picture, "Irene."

The latest Colleen feature is based on the well-known musical comedy hit, "Irene," which toured the country recently.

The central episode of the film is a fashion show in natural colors. Original gowns are worn by Miss Moore and by sixty Hollywood beauties who pose as mannequins in the picture.

Lloyd Hughes plays opposite the star.

Charlie Chase in "Dog Shy," the Pathe News and a Ko-Ko Song cartoon are on this bill for today and Wednesday.

Broadway Theatre

A May carnival of joy opened at the Broadway theater yesterday and continues through to Wednesday.

The Keith-Albee stage artists, of which there are five extra good vaudeville combinations, struck a responsive chord with the crowds.

Le Doux and Louise in Feats by Wire proved an unusually interesting and effective offering.

Ray Robbins, the merry whistling mimic gave a variety of imitations and feats with his whistling voice.

John Rucker and Sidney Perrin in an Afro-Chinese Fracas made up for any fun that was lacking in this extra rib-tickling offering.

Griffin and Girad, are two more capable singing and dancing comedians who kept the house in an uproar.

The Hoffman Revue, is described as a little bit of everything. The little tots are bright and melodious with song and dance.

Out of the Storm with Jacqueline Logan, Edmund Burns and a very strong cast is in the feature photoplay which was suggested by Arthur Stringer's The Travis Coup.

Palace Theatre

If the gales of laughter that emanated for an hour and a half from the Palace theatre where a packed audience was seeing "Behind the Front," Paramount's comedy of the A. E. F., could have been broadcast throughout the district, the theatre lobby would be mobbed permanently.

Rarely has such a comedy as this picture, which features Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, and Mary Brian, been thrown on the screen in this city.

The picture starts with a chuckle and works into laughter that continues right through to the end. "Behind the Front" is remarkable in that practically every scene of the picture contains a laugh.

Among those getting the biggest amount of fun out of "sunny" France were the numerous ex-soldiers sprinkled through the audience.

As a pair of dumb doughboys, who get into all the trouble possible in the army, Beery and Hatton win first honors.

The air raid, inspection, and especially the scenes with the tank in No Man's Land, are among the funniest ever filmed.

"Behind the Front" is really a classic of the war, and of the irrepressible humor of the American doughboy.

Mary Brian as the Red Cross worker, for whose love Beery and Hatton perform all their exploits and get into all their trouble, is more charming than ever.

Chester Conklin as the Scotch "killie" who is imported to a Y. M. C. A. hut to tell the doughboys how he won his medals, gives a riotous piece of pantomime.

The picture was adapted to the screen by Monty Brice from a short story by Hugh Wiley. Ethel Doherty wrote the screen play and Edward Sutherland wielded the megaphone.

If it hurts you to laugh, don't expose yourself to the mercies of this picture. "Behind the Front" will chase the gloom off the face of the most confirmed pessimist.

Strand Theatre

"The Phantom of the Opera," Lon Chaney's much-heralded successor spectacle to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and one of the most daring departures in screen portrayal ever attempted, comes Wednesday to the Strand theatre. It is a spectacular mystery story of Paris, in which a complete operatic performance staged in a huge replica of the Par. Opera House, largest in the world, is compared with weird and grotesque adventures in the great cellars and catacombs.

Lon Chaney plays "The Phantom," a stranee creature of the shadows, in a makeup that eclipses his weird disguise as "Quasimodo" in the Hugo classic. Mary Philbin, plays the opera singer whom he kidnaps into his underground stronghold, and Norman Kerry plays her lover and rescuer.

In the cast are Virginia Pearson, Gibson Gowland, Snitz Edwards, Cesare Gravina, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Alexander Bevani, Anton Vaverka, George B. Williams, Edward Cecil, and many other noted screen players.

The dropping of the huge chandelier of the Opera House on the heads of the audience, the remarkable chases through the dark underground cellars, and the stranee adventure on the underground lake are among the big scenes of the story.

This is the very first time that this super-sensation has been shown anywhere at these prices, matinee 10c and 20c, evening 10c, 20c, 35c. Now you cannot afford to miss it.

Little Mister Smarty

Everywhere that Smarty goes
He boasts about the thing he knows.
—Mrs. Grouse.

There was one of those Young Grouse who was called Smarty. His mother called him Smarty; his brothers and sisters called him Smarty. It was because he had the very unpleasant habit of thinking that he knew more than anybody else. Perhaps you have seen folk like that. They are not always pleasant to have about.

When Mother Grouse was giving the children a play lesson, he sometimes was slow to mind. You see he knew that when she gave a danger signal there wasn't any danger. So sometimes he would wait until all the others had hidden, or had flown.

"One of these days you'll be sorry, Mister Smarty," said his mother. "One of these days there will be real danger and you will find that you are just too late. Instant obedience is the first law of safety."

But little Mister Smarty didn't improve a bit. No, sir; he didn't improve a bit. He wasn't afraid. He thought Mother Grouse altogether too timid. Nothing had happened to him so far and he didn't believe that anything bad ever would happen to him. He always ran a little farther away from Mother Grouse than any of the others. If he felt like it, he lingered behind when the others went on. It was always Mister Smarty for whom Mother Grouse had to go back and look. Scolding made no difference to him. He knew it all, or thought he did.

Then came a day when little Mister Smarty learned that he wasn't as smart as he thought he was. Mother Grouse suddenly gave the signal to fly. Little Mister Smarty looked all about and saw no reason to fly. "It's one of Mother's tricks," said he to himself. "It's just one of Mother's tricks. I'm not going to fly."

So he didn't fly. His brothers and sisters and Mrs. Grouse all flew up into some hemlocks, but little Mister Smarty remained right where he was. And then suddenly he discovered a big bird coming with terrible speed straight toward him. It was Sharp Shin, the Hawk. Then little Mister Smarty took to his wings. My goodness yes! It was well for him that those wings could move fast, and it was well for him that right in front of him was a thickly branched hemlock tree. And it was well for him that he discovered Sharp Shin when he did, for one little second later would have been too late. Straight into that hemlock tree plunged little Mister Smarty. He didn't have time to look where he was going. He bruised himself against the branches and he struck a little sharp-pointed dead twig with such force that it drove right through the fleshy part of one wing and then broke off, remaining in the wing.

Poor little Mister Smarty! Terror filled his heart and pain made that one wing throb. He fell, but caught himself on a branch and then he huddled as close to the trunk of the tree as he could. He heard the disappointed scream of Sharp Shin, as the latter swung off in time to avoid hitting the tree. For some time little Mister Smarty huddled there, too frightened to move. Of course, not moving was a good thing.

"One of these days you'll be sorry, Mister Smarty," said his mother

Presently he heard his mother call. He heard his brothers and sisters as they flew down to the ground in answer to that call. But he himself was too hurt and too frightened to answer and just remained there huddled in that tree. He didn't feel smart any more. No, sir, Mister Smarty didn't feel at all smart.

Finally he heard his mother calling him. Her voice sounded very anxious. He started to fly down, but instead he tumbled. He couldn't fly. You see that little piece of stick was still in his wing. He just fell down to the ground and when he reached the ground he ran to his mother, whimpering.

POETRY

Norwich Woods

Oh, know you the hamlet where the thrushes sing
When heaven comes visiting earth in spring,
Its own court chorus converging to bring,
While their "si-o-me,"
And their "sol-do-mi,"
Makes temples of woods in Norwich?

The merry song sparrow his three-toned call,
Our truant bluebird, the robin and all
The vireos sing from our trestops tall;
But life sleeps still,
Till the throstles trill
Their joy through the woods of Norwich.

The grosbeaks, each with his rosy breast,
The fibs, and the cardinal's splendid crest
Are ours; but the soloist finely dressed
We hardly hear,
When the notes ring clear
Of the sweet wood thrush in Norwich.
When the apple blooms blush, and the breezes of May Bring breathe from fairyland, far away,
The oriole darts through the bougns to say:
"On the elm I swing,
But I sometimes sing
With the thrush in the woods of Norwich."

Where the indigo-bunting flaps its song,
And the chewink trills with his high "ding dong,"
And the redstart flits, and the goldfinch set throng,
And the harsh "chip, chee,"
Marks the tanager,
Gems flash in the woods of Norwich.

And out in the meadow the posts' bird
Gives back in his song all the praise he's heard,
And you know it belongs to him, every word,
With his "bob-o-link, chee,"
Joy's duty, you see,
So near to the woods of Norwich."

And over the river from warblers' throats
And the true brown thrashers' the music floats;
While the catbird joins with his madcap notes;
But when night grows dim,
Then the vesper hymn
Streams deep in the woods near Norwich.

So long as the thrushes wild sing there,
The woods are sweet, and the woods are fair;
But a shivering comes with the warmest air
When you listen long
And can hear no song
In the lovely woods of Norwich.

But the highland's heart holds the harmonies still,
And Tamworth forests their voices fill,
While answering whitethroats chant, until
The dryads shy
From the trees glide by,
And forgotten are woods in Norwich.
—Frances L. T. Whittemore.

STOCK PRICES REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, May 3 (AP)—Reactionary price movements swept over all financial and commodities markets today in reflection of the apprehension aroused by the threat of a general strike in Great Britain.

Stock prices opened 1 to 5 points lower but rallied briskly on the appearance of strong buying support coincident with the recovery of the renewal rate on call money. Prem selling broke out during the early afternoon when Wall street received extracts from the speech of Premier Baldwin, most of the active issues being forced down below their morning lows, the extreme declines in scores of issues running from 3 to 10 1-2 points. A closing rally, inspired by the more optimistic tenor of the late cables, wiped out part of the earlier losses, net declines ranging from 1 to seven points.

Wall street's time-honored maxim, "never sell stocks on strike news" was disregarded in this case, presumably because of the seriousness with which the present labor conflict was taken in British official circles. Premier Baldwin's reference to the government finding itself challenged by an "alternative government" having a depressing effect on speculative sentiment. Among bankers, the ability of England to maintain the gold standard, if the strike was of long duration, was the principal subject of discussion and while no attempt was made to minimize the seriousness of the situation, there was a rather general feeling that the crisis would be of short duration.

General Electric was the hardest hit, breaking 10 1-2 points to $11 1-2, and then rallying to $15. U. S. Steel common dropped nearly 3 points to 130 1-8 but snapped back to 131. Net losses of 4 points or more were recorded by such widely diversified industrial issues as Atlantic Refining Case, Threshing Machine, DuPont, Mack Trucks, South Porto Rican Sugar, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, United Drug, and Woolworth.

Scores of other popular issues such as Allied Chemical, Anaconda Copper, Baldwin, Famous Players, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Postum Cereal, Pullman and White Motors closed 2 or more points lower.

Rails yielded with the industrials although the losses generally were not as large. Atlantic Coast line fell nearly 3 points to 195 and then rallied to 196 1-2 while Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central and a few others lost 2 points or more.

Demand sterling fell nearly a cent below last week's high figure, which was in striking distance of parity, to $4.85 1-2. French and Belgian francs touched record low levels at 3.27 and 3.27 cents, respectively, both made a slight recovery. Norwegian exchanges ruled over 10 points higher around 21.86 cents, but most of the other European rates showed moderate recessions.

Active wheat futures broke 2 to 3 cents a bushel, the May option closing at $1.61 3-8 a bushel. Cotton offered better resistance to selling pressure, closing only 2 to 7 points net lower. Raw sugar advanced 1-32 of a cent a pound but futures were slightly easier. Coffee advanced 1 to 30 points.

Call money renewed at 5 1-2 per cent., as against 4 1-2 Friday, holding steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

SMALL DOCKET FOR MAY TERM OF CRIMINAL SUPERIOR COURT TODAY

The May term of the criminal superior court, which opens at New London this (Tuesday) morning with Judge Newell Jennings presiding, has a smaller number of new cases on the docket than has appeared in a long time.

There are but 13 which promises an unusually short session of the court after the accused are put to plea on the opening day. The following are the new cases the towns from which they come and the offenses charged.

Rose Behnke, Griswold, violation of liquor law; Zeses Costules, Norwich, statutory arson; Burdette Doubleday, Colchester, statutory rape; Arthur Dunmire, Waterford, statutory manslaughter; Michael Dwyer, Griswold, statutory burglary; Benjamin James, alias Thomas James, New London, assault with intent to commit statutory rape; Mary Kearney, Norwich, embezzlement; Fortunaro Malimaro, et al, Montville, statutory arson; Edward McClue, Groton, indecent assault; Darwin Morse, Lyme, theft of motor vehicle; John Quinn, New London, violation of liquor law; John G. Russell, Montville, statutory arson; John Vallas, Norwich, statutory arson.

Among the continued cases from the previous term is that of Gladys Lorraine, alias Marie Boyd, who skipped her bond when she was to have been presented at the previous term in the charge of larceny of a $500 fur coat from the Caron Specialty shop in this city. She has been in the Norwich jail since she was brought back here about two weeks ago and surrendered by her bondsman after he found her in Worcester.

COURT PUTS FINES ON QUINTETTE OF PETTERS

A petting party on Lover's Lane, Norwich Town, indulged in by three West Side young men and two local girls, enriched the city court treasury by about $100 when the five paid fines of $15 and costs each on the charge of breach of the peace. The payments were $19.02 each. The cases were heard in chambers by Judge Arthur F. Libby.

The spooning party got into the clutches of the law through complaints from neighbors that there was a loud party in progress on Lovers' Lane. The black maria was despatched to the scene and Constable Lucius Lawton of Norwich Town was notified and went to the scene. He got there first and informed the party whom he found in an automobile in the slaughter house yard, that they were under arrest. One of the men jumped from the machine and ran into the nearby woods. A couple of shots fired in the air by Constable Lawton accelerated his speed and he quickly disappeared. Later he gave himself up at police headquarters and was booked along with the rest.

The girls claimed Sunday night that they wanted the men to drive them home but that the men weren't ready to accede to their wishes. Then the affair became noisy and the complaint followed. In court Monday morning they stated they were having a good time. One of the girls lives on Thames street and the other on Chestnut St.

Two men paid fines for intoxication and a third had his intoxication case continued for a while to allow him time to raise his fine of $10 and costs.

Joseph Bamber of Groton paid $8 for violating the motor vehicle law in not having his license with him when apprehended by an officer of the law.

VALLAS BOUND OVER ON CHARGE OF ARSON

Probable cause being found, James Vallas, auto mechanic of this city, was bound over to the criminal superior court, on a charge of arson, Monday morning by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court. John James furnished a bond of $1,500. Vallas pleaded not guilty to the charge and then entered a demurrer to the charge, the demurrer being overruled. He is held in connection with the incendiary fire at the Olympia Candy Kitchen at Norwich Town February 6th. It is expected that the case will be tried at the May term of the criminal court, which is scheduled to come in today (Tuesday) at New London. Zeses Costules, proprietor of the store, is also awaiting trial in the criminal court on a charge of arson as the result of the fire.

Counsel for the accused made an effort to secure another continuance of Vallas' case but was opposed by City Attorney Lee Robbins who stated that the case had been ready for trial for three days. Judge Libby declined to grant the continuance.

Dr. Alex Rabinovitch of New York city, formerly a resident of Norwich, is suing the estate of his brother, Israel Rabinovitch, for medical services claimed to have been rendered but not paid for. The suit has been brought for $750 damages in the common pleas court, and is returnable in May. Mrs. Lena Rabinovitch, the widow, is made the defendant as she is administratrix of her husband's estate.

The body of Israel Rabinovitch was found in the Shetucket river, Aug. 27, 1925, and it is the claim of his brother, the doctor, that medical services were rendered from May 1, 1925 to Aug. 27, 1925 which were reasonably worth $500. The doctor's claim was disallowed by the administratrix of the estate and suit was brought with Joseph Greenstein as attorney for the doctor.

Cooper sues to recover the above amount for reupholstering and materials used on a parlor furniture suite.

Shalett, in his answer, alleges inferior material was used and that the work was done in an unworkmanlike manner. The answer also states that the plaintiff offered to take back the furniture and pay the defendants $21 for the frames.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT REMAINS PASSIVE WITH GENERAL STRIKE IN FORCE 24 HOURS

Authorities Declare the Next Step is Up to the Labor Leaders—Belief Prevails That the Longer the Strike Lasts the Less Chance For Its Success—There Has Been an Almost Total Suspension of Work Except in Vital Lines—Volunteers Continue to Offer Their Services to the Government—The Government is to Issue a Newspaper Daily Called the British Gazette—Volunteers Will Start the London Underground Service Today.

LONDON, May 5.—(AP)—At midnight the general strike had been in progress 24 hours and had stalled the great bulk of the country's industries.

So vast is the movement and so many are its ratifications, no single definite development can be observed. London and the other great cities present the curious aspect of thousands upon thousands of people and conveyances in aimless motion, with an almost total suspension of work, except in vital services.

There have been no new negotiations, so far as the public is aware, seeking a settlement of the strike—no move to this end on either side. That the government does not propose to initiate new parleys is obvious from the statement contained in its official newspaper, the first number of which was issued last (Tuesday) night.

"The strike leaders have made no move, and the next step is with them."

Although the strike extends from one end of the country to the other, the people, aside from certain inconveniences, have not even begun to feel its real effects. The government and those leaders identified with the most important industries, operating separately, but in some cases together, have already set up machinery for supplying the populace with those things absolutely essential for its existence.

It would appear as if the government were settling down to a long fight. It is officially asserted that the tieup is not so complete as the strike leaders intended and that the people are rousing themselves to help the government keep things going. It is impossible yet to indicate the full extent to which volunteers are enrolling, or whether they are suitable to the demands of the situation. Unquestionably a large number have undertaken public service, but will need training for special work, and it will be some time before they are wholly effective.

Among the chief causes of anxiety is necessarily the attitude of the seamen and ship's firemen, if their union casts its lot with the strikers, the country will be faced with the ugly prospect of a food shortage, for which enrollment of volunteers could not compensate.

The tieup of the workers at the docks seems pretty general throughout the country, but here again the figures are incomplete and people are asking even if dock labor is satisfactorily replaced by volunteers, where the food is to come from if the shipping whereby it is imported is held up by the refusal of the seamen and firemen to perform their duties.

BRITISH GOV'T ISSUING A DAILY NEWSPAPER

LONDON, May 4—(AP)—The "British Gazette" a daily published by the government at the office of the Morning Post, made its first appearance tonight. It announces it has a circulation of only 700,000, but will extend its circulation as rapidly as possible and increase its size from four pages. The Gazette says it is run on the authority of the government, and at government expense, if necessary.

"Nearly all the newspapers have been silenced by violent concerted action," it asserts in its leading article "and this great nation, on the whole the strongest community which civilization can show, is for the moment reduced in this respect to the level of African natives, dependent only on rumors which are carried from place to place.

"In a few days, if things were allowed to continue, the rumors would poison the air, raise panics and disorders, inflame fears and passions together and carry us all to depths which no sane man of any party or class could care even t contemplate.

"The government has therefore decided, not only to use broadcasting for spreading information, but to bring out a paper of its own on a sufficient scale to carry full and timely news throughout all parts of the country."

The British Gazette is similar to the Morning Post in appearance, but is without advertising. In its leading news column it reviews the development of the strike and says: "There are already signs that the strike is by no means so complete as the promoters had hoped. There were far more trains running than was the case the first day of the railway strike in 1919.

"Reports from all parts of the country indicate that satisfactory arrangements have been set up for recruiting. Volunteers came forward in large numbers in London and all the important provincial centres."

INCONVENIENCE IN LONDON TAKEN WITH GOOD HUMOR

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—London met its novel experience of a general strike, with all its manifold inconveniences, with good humor.

The almost universal opinion of the populace is that the strike will not last many days. In its varied aspects it was a new thrill for the people.

London was converted from an omnibus and tram city to a motorcar city today. In the busy shopping centres there were fewer well-dressed idlers than customary. The absentees, frightened by the strike, were replaced by another class of idlers, men deprived of their occupations by the strike, who wore an air of listless curiousity. They formed into long lines wherever news bulletins of the progress of the strike were displayed, this being the only available method of distributing the news, in the almost complete absence of newspapers, except an occasional bulletin broadcast by radio.

The streets presented a new panorama of swiftly moving traffic, dangerous to pedestrians. The usual unending lines of trams and busses were replaced by far more numerous automobiles, not bound, as the busses are, by a comparatively slow pace, and the motor vehicles moved fast except at important intersecting points where bad tieups occurred.

The Thames embankment reverted to the state of affairs of the Victorian period, when trams were not permitted, and the embankment was restricted almost exclusively to private carriages. Today it was crowded with motor cars, no trams running, and at the time of the closing of business became the rendezvous almost to the conestion point of many scores of big charabancs, engaged by the government to carry home the employes of the post offices and other government services.

Thus far the strike has been orderly and well conducted. A government spokesman in a radio statement today admitted that the officials of the trades union congress who had undertaken to assist in the voluntary work of maintaining the food and other supplies for the populace had been as good as their word, while all records received testify to the strikers proving obedient to their leaders.

This record, according to the same spokesman, however, had one notable exception, namely, that about 10,000 men engaged in the chemical trade in Cheshire, who had been called out by their union, reported for work as usual this morning.

The deputy chief civil commissioner in an announcement tonight paid tribute to the behaviour of the people throughout the country. The miners' leaders in Northumberland, he added, had guaranteed the delivery of foodstuffs in that area, and there had been no disorders of any kind.

As far as power stations were concerned, the situation was good. There was one isolated exception—in Stepney, London, where the municipal station, with socialist management, had restricted the supply, to the detriment of the London hospitals, X-Ray and other work.

CLASHES BETWEEN HOODLUMS AND POLICE IN LONDON

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—Serious clashes took place tonight between the police and hoodlums in the Poplar district, and several of the participants were removed to hospitals. This district is in East London dockland and the mob is notoriously tough.

Gangs of roughs held up motor cars and lorries taking workers to their homes; they compelled the passengers to alight and then wrecked the machinery of the cars, set fire to one and by blocking the street, prevented the firemen from quenching the flames.

A taxicab was thrown over the bridge into the river, but the driver escaped. Many of the passengers were girls, who were terrified by the violence of the mob and several fainted. If the cars contained no passengers they were allowed to pass, but all passengers, of whatever age, were either sent back or forced to walk.

The police immediately started to cope with the trouble, but the roughs, working in gangs, spread through the various streets, and not until reinforcements on foot and mounted arrived, was the outbreak checked. The police showed no gentleness, and clubbed the rioters severely. Finally the streets were cleared, but the police remained there throughout the night. The rioters were not trade unionists nor acting under union orders.

LONDON UNDERGROUND SERVICE WILL START TODAY

LONDON, May 4.—(AP)—The situation caused by the general strike in Great Britain tonight was improving.

Volunteer workers were so numerous that the London underground service will start tomorrow on a skeleton basis. One line began operation tonight.

Some provincial cities hope to resume partial trolley service soon.

At a big private meeting of the conservative party held at the house of commons tonight, it was announced that the strike status was still unchanged. Premier Baldwin and other ministers attended.

CONDITIONS IN LONDON FIRST DAY OF STRIKE

LONDON, May 4—(AP)—Several millions of Londoners spent most of the morning of the first day of the nationwide general strike getting to work and most of the afternoon getting home again.

Afoot, astride bicycles and in automobiles they poured in from the suburbs, creating unprecedented traffic jams as the converging streaks of humanity entered the narrow twisting streets of the ancient city. Tonight the jams of the morning were repeated by the crowds which thus far have shown good nature.

WINDOWS OF MOTOR BUSSES WERE SMASHED IN GLASGOW

GLASGOW, Scotland, May 4—(AP)—The first violence in this vicinity caused by the general strike occurred today when several motor busses plying between Glasgow and nearby country districts were stopped by strikers and the windows smashed. The passengers were not harmed.

Nicaragua is Again In a State of War

Revolutionists Have Captured the Towns of Bluefield and Rama, Defeating Government Troops.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA, May 4. (AP)—After declaring a state of war today, the government sent a military force to the Atlantic coast to cope with a revolutionary movement started by liberals, who have captured the towns of Bluefields and Rama.

News leaking through from Bluefields, despite a censorship established there by the revolutionists, says the governor and director of police have been imprisoned. A general and two of his soldiers were killed in fighting Sunday and the rebels are reported to have sacked the national bank.

Early Sunday morning, the revolutionists, commanded by Luis Beltran Sandoval and Elizeo Duarte, surprised the government garrison, capturing Bluefields and imprisoning the governor, Colonel Solorzano Diaz, and the director of police, Colonel Nicasio Vargas.

General Anselmo Sequiera, commander of the government forces at El Bluff, situated across the bay, proceeded toward Bluefields in a boat, with 20 men. As the boat neared the town the revolutionists opend fire, killing General Sequiera and two of his soldiers. The boat put about and returned to El Bluff, where the government maintains a large garrison.

Later in the day the revolutionists, after two attacks, captured Rama, about 60 miles from Bluefields, the government force there was outnumbered by the revolutionists.

It is reported the revolutionary leader Sandoval, sent a message to Dr. Batista Sacasa, former liberal vice president of Nicaragua who now is in Washington, notifying him that Bluefields had been captured, asking him to send money for continuance of the revolutionary campaign and urging him to come to Nicaragua at once, with a supply of arms.

Sacasa is reported to have sent congratulations to the revolutionists, advising them he would send funds and would notify them later in regard to his departure.

The government has 7,000 men under arms. Managua is quiet.

MASKED ROBBERS KILLED POLICEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—(AP)—Masked robbers today shot and killed a policeman and seriously wounded another in attempting to hold up a bank runner in front of the Tuley Trust company, at Olney, a suburb.

Four of the five robbers were captured after a running pistol battle during which they abandoned their automobile, crippled by a policeman's bullet, and commandeered a passing milk wagon in their attempt to escape. A fifth arrest was made tonight.

The authorities believe the men are members of the band that held up and killed Samuel Holt, paymaster for Armour and company, last Saturday, escaping with several thousand dollars. A connection with the Richard Reese Whittemore gang also was seen by Captain of Detectives Theodore Wood, who said the two holdups here "might have been staged with the hope of raising money for Whittemore's defense."

The policeman who lost his life was Harry Cooper, 45. Joseph Kaelin, the wounded officer, received a load of buckshot in his throat. The four men arrested shortly after the shooting are Harry Bentley, Joe Curry, Frank Doris and William Juliano. Bentley was shot in the leg during the chase. Curry, also known as O'Brien, was said to have been a member of the notorious Eggers gang which operated on the Pacific coast. Howard Wilson, who police say has a long criminal record, was arrested tonight at his home as the trailer of the robbers' car and their guard.

CONN. TROLLEYMEN ARE CONSIDERING WAGE SCALE

NEW HAVEN, May 4.—(AP)— The matter of submitting to the Connecticut company the advisability of a 15 per cent general wage increase for all its motormen and conductors and a slight increase for its bus drivers was taken under consideration by the state board of the trolleymen's union here today.

Though no official announcement was made it is understood that the program adopted a year ago, but which failed, will be laid before the company in new form in the near future. A year ago the request went to arbitration which resulted in the employes receiving the prevailing rate of wages, with the exception of a few who received small increases.

It is understood that the men will demand a 15 per cent increase this year. The largest increase is to be sought for the operators of one-man trolley cars, those running the small type of cars to receive about ten cents an hour less than those operating the larger cars.

The draft for a new agreement is to be put into definite shape within a few days, and then submitted to the company. The present agreement between the company and its employes expires June 1.

POSSES SEARCHING FOR ASSAILANT OF DR. ROWE

BALTIMORE, Md., May 4.—(AP)—Armed posses searched in vain today for Harry M. Rowe, Jr., 30 year old former soldier accused of attacking with club and knife his father, stepmother and half sister last night in their home at Catonsville. Marshal Carroll Stansbury of the Baltimore county police wired descriptions of the fugitive to several Ohio cities. Young Rowe had close friends in Ohio, Stansbury said. A theory that young Rowe had committed suicide waned when searchers failed to find his body.

Dr. Harry M. Rowe, treasurer of the Carroza-Rowe Construction company, Mrs. Rowe and Dr. Rowe's daughter, Portia, are in a hospital in a serious condition.

Mrs. Harry M. Rowe, Jr., at the younger Rowe's home in Annapolis, said the father and son had become estranged soon after Dr. Rowe's third marriage and that there had been business between them. Harry had once been treasurer of the Carroza-Rowe company, and been discharged by his father who was then president.

$100,000 Demanded With Threat of Life

Letter Received by Mrs. Curtis Guild, Widow of Former Gov. Guild of Massachusetts.

BOSTON, May 4—(AP)—Mrs. Curtis Guild, widow of former Governor Guild of Massachusetts, has received a letter demanding $100,000 or her life, it was learned today. Mrs. Guild was understood to have left her Bass Bay home and the police declined to comment.

Newspapers learned that the note was a typical "black hand" demand, typewritten by a person apparently possessing little knowledge of English.

The missive was sent through the mails and directed Mrs. Guild to be on hand at a certain time and place with the money in large bills. The writer warned of dire consequences if the police were informed and stated that Mrs. Guild was wealthy enough to pay the sum demanded without suffering financially.

In addition to her prominence as the wife of the late Governor Guild who prior to his election was ambassador to Russia, Mrs. Guild has been active in the social and political world. When former Senator Walsh was governor he appointed her to the state board of charities. In 1920 she was a presidential elector and she is a member of the National and the Massachusetts Women's clubs, the Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Colonial Dames of America and the Daughts of the American Revolution.

Last year Mrs. Guild managed the campaign of Louis A. Coolidge candidate for the republican senatorial nomination.

THE 99TH ANNIVERSARY OF TEMPLARISM IN CONNECTICUT

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. May 4—(AP)—Templarism in Connecticut entered upon its ninety-ninth year today with the opening of the annual conclave of the Grand Commandery. Very Eminent Samuel H. Williams of New Haven was chosen grand commander in succession to Right Eminent Angus H. MacKenzie of this city. The other commandery officers were advanced in their stations.

The grand commandery was instituted at New Haven in 1827 and next year will observe its centennial. Templarism in the state however dates from June 1801 when a group of Masons in New London obtained a charter from London and a commandery or encampment held meetings in both New London and Colchester. This charter was given up in 1819 and a new one obtained from the grand Master at Boston. In 1825 a charter was issued to New Haven Masons by DeWitt Clinton grand master of New York and two years later the three commanderies, Hartford, New Haven and New London formed the grand commandery. A commandery was instituted in Washington in 1827 but this lapsed and was revived by the present Clinton commandery, No. 5 at Norwalk in 1847. All records of the grand commandery from 1827 were lost in a fire in 1847.

DR. JOHN THOMSON DALLAS CONSECRATED A BISHOP

CONCORD, N. H., May 2.—(AP)—With the ancient ceremony of the laying on of the hands, Dr. John Thomson Dallas, recently vicar of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, Boston, was consecrated today, fifth Episcopal bishop of New Hampshire. He was elected at a special diocesan convention here last December to succeed the late Bishop Edward Melville Parker.

Eight bishops took part in the ceremony of consecration at which the Most Rev. John Gardner Murray, bishop of Maryland and presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States, officiated, in the picturesque procession from the parish house of St. Paul's to the historic church of that name, preceding the service, the mayor of Concord, the governor of New Hampshire, several visiting bishops and hundreds of clergy and laymen took part. Included in the ecclesiastics of other than the Episcopal communion was the Greek bishop of Boston, Alixopolos.

Alexander Dallas of Waterbury, Conn., father of the bishop-elect, was a guest of his son at the ceremony. Large delegations attended from fields in which Mr. Dallas had served previously.

WOULD PROBE GUARDIAN OF INSANE WORLD WAR VETS

WASHINGTON, May 4—(AP)—The house was urged today by its judiciary committee to authorize an investigation of charges against Commissioner Frederick A. Fenning of the District of Columbia, to ascertain whether they constituted ground for initiation of impeachment proceedings.

Fenning has been charged by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, with irregularities as guardian for a number of insane world war veterans.

A move by Chairman Graham to obtain house action on the committee's recommendation was blocked by Representative Luce, republican, of Massachusetts.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Debate began in the house on three widely divergent farm relief measures.

A cruiser was ordered to Nicaraguan waters to protect American interests there.

President Coolidge held the European situation unripe for calling a third Hague conference.

The house replied to Judge English's impeachment answer, terming it "irrelevant and impertient."

Government officials were silent on the British strike settlement. American Federation of Labor held the miners' wage demands justified.

BODY OF E. A. EKLUND FOUND IN BRIDGEPORT HARBOR

BRIDGEPORT, May 4—(AP)—The body of E. A. Eklund, superintendent of the Submarine shipyards of the Lake Torpedo Boat company during and after the war, was found in Bridgeport harbor tonight by workers at the New England Steamship company's dock. He had been reported missing since February 3 last. He was regarded as one of the foremost experts in the United States in submarine building.

DEMOCRATS IN THE SENATE WRANGLE ON PROHIBITION

Senators Ferris and Sheppard Led the Assault For the Drys—Senator Bruce of Maryland Attacked Prohibition and Challenged the Drys to Join the Wets in a Referendum on the Prohibition Question—During Lengthy Debate All the Republican Senators Had Vacated Their Seats.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(AP)— Prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists flayed each other again today in the senate as pending legislation was shunted to one side for a discussion that took up three hours and ended about where it began.

The debate was all on the democratic side of the chamber and before it ended nearly all of the seats on the republican side had been vacated along with many of the minority side.

Senators Ferris of Michigan, and Sheppard, of Texas, lead the assault for the drys, while Senator Bruce, of Maryland, replied with a speech in which he urged the country to extricate itself "from the jungle of prohibition and get out once more on the high road that leads to temperance."

Opening the discussion with a long prepared address, Senator Ferris assailed both the wets and the drys; the former for seeking to break down the Volstead act and the latter for laying down on their job of educating the country against alcohol as a beverage after that law went into effect.

Senator Sheppard contented himself with reading testimonials for prohibition educators and employers over the country and censuring those who would divert alcohol from the "thousand and one" uses to which it is put in industry and convert it into a beverage in defiance of the law.

Denouncing those who made up the legalized liquor traffic in pre-Volstead days as "vultures", Senator Ferris said that consciously or unconsciously those now seeking to amend the Volstead act were supporting that class. He described that situation as amazing.

Severely censuring the drys for abandoning their campaign of education, Mr. Ferris declared that the kind of education now going on through the propaganda of the wets, "is pernicious and destructive in the extreme."

The wets also were accused by the Michigan senator of an effort to repudiate the constitution by bringing back beer and light wines. In that connection he warned the drys that this was no time for them to "lie down and surrender their only program of hope."

Replying to this address and that by Senator Sheppard which followed, Senator Bruce said the fact that prohibitionists now so eagerly replied to assaults of the wets showed that the tide of public opinion was swinging steadily against them.

Urging that the drys refrain from taking up the senate's time with debate, the Marylander challenged them to join the wets in a referendum on the prohibition question so the issue could be settled by the people.

"We welcome a contest of strength at any time," he said.

Declaring the Volstead act to be an "utterly impracticable and visionary law", Senator Bruce said Senator Sheppard in bringing in a hundred testimonials from employers and others reminded him of a child grabbing a handful of dirt and exclaiming, "See, I hold the world in my palm."

In conclusion, the Maryland senator predicted that it would not be long before "not only will the Volstead act be modified, but the constitution will be changed and the people will be brought back to sanity and temperance."

BRITAIN WOULD PREVENT SMUGGLING OF LIQUOR

WASHINGTON, May 4—(AP)—Great Britain wants to do its part toward preventing the smuggling of liquor into the United States.

The London government so advised Secretary Kellogg in suggesting a conference to work out by informal agreements co-operative measures for tightening the rum blockade. The invitation to a conference, to be held shortly in London, has been accepted.

Correspondence between Washington and London on the subject, made public tonight, discloses that the idea for tighter restrictions with Great Britain's aid originated with British authorities and that the conference invitation was extended "as proof of the desire of his majesty's government to give such assistance to American prohibition agencies "as it is possible to give in the circumstances."

In accepting the invitation with "deep appreciation," Secretary Kellogg said the American delegation should arrive in London by the end of May. The American delegates will include Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, William R. Vallance, assistant to the solicitor of the state department, and Rear Admiral Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard.

RESULT OF INQUIRY INTO ALABAMA PRISON CAMPS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 4—(AP)—The first results of the Jefferson county grand jury's inquiry into the death of James W. Knox and Alabama prison conditions generally, were made known today when an indictment was returned against W. A. Bates, former flat top warden, who is charged with the murder of Frank Harper, a negro convict.

Governor Austin Peay will be asked to honor a requisition for Bates' return to Alabama if he fights removal from Brownsville, Tennessee, his present home. Bates had not been arrested late today, local authorities said.

Bates is charged with beating and stamping Harper who was ill. The man died a few minutes after the attack, witnesses testified in the preliminary inquiry several weeks ago. This initial inquiry by Attorney General Harwell G. Davis was instituted as a result of accusations that Knox had been done to death by guards as punishment because he would not or could not perform his tasks.

Authorities said there was a possibility of several other indictments.

6-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLED AT RAILROAD CROSSING

GUILFORD, May 4.—(AP)—Not hearing or failing to heed the cries of Flagman Michael Murray at the railroad crossing near the station here tonight, Joseph McCormack, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCormack, was struck and killed by a west-bound express, which was six minutes ahead of schedule. Flagman Murray saw the boy approaching from the opposite side of the tracks and though he shouted and waved his flag, hte boy continued. He was killed instantly.

The train did no tstop and it was reported that the boy was struck by the fireman's side of the engine. Medical Examiner F. D. Smith gave permission for the removal of the body to the undertaker.

WILLIMANTIC GROCER DION FILES BANKRUPTCY PETITION

WILLIMANTIC, May 4.—(AP)—Roderick G. Dion, son of the late former Mayor Hormisdas Dion, of this city, who for the past two years has conducted a grocery and meat market here, today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States court at New Haven. Liabilities were listed at $25,505.97 and assets at $23,438.

The closing of the business is said to be an aftermath of a strike about a year ago. Mr. Dion and a number of other merchants advanced considerable credit to the strikers. The business has been conducted here for 40 years.

JOHN ADAMS ABBOTT HAS BEEN RELEASED IN ROME

ROME, May 4.—(AP)—John Adams Abbott, of Boston, who had been in jail here for the last week on a charge of insulting Premier Mussolini, was released this afternoon by order of an investigating magistrate.

The magistrate ordered Abbott's release today after finding the charge he had insulted Premier Mussolini was unfounded. Abbott still faces a charge of assaulting a Roman guide, Astrologo, who brought both charges against the American after the latter had administered a beating to him following an argument recently.

Irwin C Heritage, 58, of Garden St., New Haven, committed suicide by taking poison.

REV. BUDD CLAIMS FATAL ACCIDENT WAS UNAVOIDABLE

NEW YORK, May 4—(AP)—Taking the stand in his own defense, the Rev. Alfred W. Budd of Derby, Conn., today recounted the incidents leading up to the crushing by the minister's car of Max Fiegelman, whose death caused Mr. Budd to be indicted for second degree manslaughter.

In an unemotional voice he testified that as he was crossing Fifth avenue in the rear of three other Connecticut cars carrying Boy Scouts the traffic patrolman gave the go-ahead signal to north-south traffic and that to avoid a collision he had to drive up on the sidewalk, striking Fiegelman.

"It was entirely unavoidable," he concluded. "I used the best judgment I was capable of under the circumstances."

After the Rev. Budd's testimony the defense rested. The state had previously concluded its case with testimony of the traffic policeman who said the minister seemed to have lost control of his car. Dr. John E. Blair, who was riding with Rev. Budd at the time of the accident, and the driver of the three other cars in the mix-up also testified. Both sides will sum up in the morning and the case will then go to the jury.

Fiegelman was killed in October 1924, and Rev. Budd was indicted in January 1925, since when he has been at liberty under $3,000 bail.

TRANS-ATLANTIC COMMERCE IS CONTINUING NORMAL

NEW YORK, May 4—(AP)—Shipping officials here announced a "business as usual" program today.

The general strike in England, if prolonged, may disrupt shipping service between England and America, but no immediate crippling of trans-Atlantic commerce is expected, they said.

Up to the present no changes have been made in sailing dates of vessels plying between this and English ports, no passenger reservations have been cancelled and none of the 2,000 British seamen in the port of New York have deserted their ships.

It was stated at the Cunard docks here tonight that the Aquitania, with a crew of 378, would sail at 1 a. m. tomorrow as scheduled. Members of the crew said they would join the strikers on arrival at Southampton.

A cablegram received at the Anchor-Cunard offices here from the line's London offices gave more basis for optimistic feeling.

DENIES DIVORCE FOR LAKOWSKI OF MOOSUP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC May 4.—With Judge John R. Booth of Danbury on the bench, the civil side of the May term of the Windham county superior court opened here this forenoon. The first business was the making of assignments for the week of May 11, as follows: Tuesday, May 11, naturalization cases; Wednesday, May 12, first, James H. Sawyer, et ux. vs. George A. Willis; second, Susie Davis vs. Emery Davis; third, B. Schultz & Company vs. Sheehan Haddad; fourth, William B. Sherman vs. Orlo B. Carpenter.

The case of Eleanor Ford vs. The Community Hotel Corporation, Inc., a suit over a right of way, which has been nullified with the erection of the new hotel building, was brought to the attention of the court by Attorney Foss. Judge Booth set the case as a special for Tuesday, May 18th.

The following cases were allowed to stand to be called later in the session: Frank A. Phillips vs. James W. Baker; John Killourey vs. William E. Jackson; Prudence and Celia Israel and Florence Horwitz vs. Irving E. Frink, all suits for damages.

The short calendar case of Louis Lamiotte vs. J. Guay Jr., et al., a motion by Attorney Gaucher for bond to prosecute to the amount of $75 was extended for one week by the court.

In the case of the Willimantic Lumber and Coal company vs. Frank Pocenek, a motion for default for failure of defendant to appear in a hearing for damages, the court allowed the presentation of a sworn bill for the amount for judgment.

The case of William R. Dunn et als., appeal from probate, estate of Julia A. Dunn, was argued by Attorneys Kelley and Foley. Judge Booth took the papers and reserved his decision until later in the session.

In the case of John Seby et al. vs. Joe Fugedi, et al., Attorney King for the plaintiff and defendant are both made defendants by the Federal Land bank. The plaintiff sued to recover a first mortgage on a farm in Ashford that was abandoned by Fugedi. He brought about a sale of the farm through foreclosure and the Federal Land bank having an interest in the property, brought suit for judgment of foreclosure by cross-complaint. Judge Booth stated that he would consider the papers in he case and make his decision later.

The case of Arthur T. Salisbury vs. Albert C. Greene, executor of the will of Mary E. Salisbury was next taken up. Following arguments by the attorneys, Judge Booth denied the motion to appeal from probate.

The uncontested divorce case of Jan Laskowski, 39, of Moosup vs. Josephine Bigda Laskowski 32, in which the plaintiff sought a separation from his wife on the grounds of intemperance and cruelty, was next heard. There were three witnesses for the plaintiff, Mrs. Katherine Laskowski, plaintiff's mother, Stanislaus Linksey and Helen Sedorsky, neighbors. The petitioner's testimony was in effect that he married the defendant on July 4, 1921 and shortly afterwards his vision of a happy love nest was disrupted when he found that his wife drank intoxicating liquors. The young bride kept drinking and a little less than one year ago he was forced to leave her. She had previously left him on occasions but always returned. The attorney tried in vain to have Laskowski give the court some information on the alleged acts of cruelty which he had been forced to endure. It was brought out that the woman clubbed her husband and kicked him after he had been knocked down. Other witnesses said that Mrs. Laskowski was drunk about every time they had seen her.

Judge Booth was not satisfied that the testimony was convicting and after hearing the third witness announced that he would deny the decree.

The final case of the day was that of Arthur Thomasette of Plainfield, against Abraham Steinman, a suit to recover damages of $400. The allegation was that Morris Steinman, 23, son of the defendant, drove an automobile on Thomas Street, Norwich, up the evening of January 15, of this city, in a reckless manner and without giving proper signals, with the result that the plaintiff's car was run into by the Steinman machine and badly damaged.

Attorneys Quinn and Howard Bradford for the plaintiff and defendant met with Judge Booth in recess and the case was settled out of court. It is understood that the settlement was in favor of the defendant.

Court adjourned at 1.50 o'clock, standard time, until next Tuesday, May 11, at 9 a. m., standard time, for naturalization cases. There were no further civil business scheduled for the remainder of the week.

Prior to the court adjournment the following jury panel was drawn to be called later in the term: Windham, George H. Gurley, John E. Brick; Putnam, Edward Dubois Sr., Arthur C. Dawson; Ashford, George O. Balch; Brooklyn, Frederick W. Porter, John Weaver; Canterbury, George Holmes, Oscar Olsen; Chaplin, Frank E. Platt, Alfred T. Hall; Eastford Fred Bowen; Hampton, John Hammond, Byron Colvin; Killingly, George L. Eaton, Fred L. Miller; Plainfield, Edward M. Allen, Edward G Ames; Pomfret, Alfred S. Bryden, William H. Gallup; Scotland, Elmer Carter; Sterling, Thomas Brown; Thompson, Newell C. Cutler, Woodstock, John S. May.

AMOS P. FOWLER GIVES TALK BEFORE ROTARIANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 4.—Singing and short speech making made up the program for the weekly luncheon of the Willimantic Rotary club held in the Y. M. C. A. at noon today. President James P. Bath presided and had as his guest Amos P. Fowler who made pointed remarks relative to civic improvements stressing the need of improved conditions and building the city in general so that "it might become a good place not only to visit but to live in." Relative to the better street proposition he was answered by Mayor John C. Tracy who said that ways and means for bettering the streets were already under consideration and the public would soon be given an opportunity to take some action. The belated arrivals at the meeting who had not taken due notice of a five minute advance in starting time were called upon and they "executed" the number in admirable fashion. The kitchen canaries were: William E. Jackson, leader, Edward J. Kenney, Harry S. Gaucher, C. Harry Branch, George H. Shafer, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, Raymond A. Parker and Fred L. Avery. Dr. R. Bullock Jones was at the piano for the singing. Another guest of the club was Charles H. Caswell who has just returned from an extended stay in Florida. He was accompanied by William A. Dawson. Mr. Caswell favored with a few Florida stories and later led in songs. Kenneth H. Hillhouse reported for the Boys' Work committee on the matter of Boys' Week, stating that due to extenuating circumstances the annual week had been deferred. Albert B. Smith's motion that the committee be empowered to arrange for the observance of Boys' Week prior to the closing of the schools and with the assistance of other organizations in the city was adopted. John F. Ahern was called upon to lead the following double male quartet in a splendid rendition: John F. Ahern, John R. Pickett, Harry W. Standish, Raymond A. Parker, Arthur S. Wheelock, Albert O'Neill, Charles H Caswell and Dr. R. Bullock Jones. Secretary C. E. Loisell gave a secondary report on some of the doings at the Spring Conference in Bridgeport. The meeting adjourned at 1.30 o'clock.

The stewards of the Norwich district of the New England Southern conference of the Methodist Episcopal church met in the local church parlors Tuesday morning with 14 stewards present. District Superintendent Rev. Myron E. Gentar of Norwich was in charge of the meeting, which had been called to discuss the finances of the district. In the election of officers the following were selected: Vice-President, W. M. Gordon, of Hazardville; secretary-treasurer, Harry B. McKenzie; trustee, for three years, Sidney Perry of Danielson and A. T. Miner of New London. With the adoption of a motion resolutions are to be drafted acknowledging the appreciation of the district stewards to Guy B Dolbeare, who was treasurer of the district corporation for over twenty years and to J. Harlow Graham of Norwich and Robert McNeely for their part in the reconstruction of the district personage.

During the afternoon a meeting of the Willimantic Camp Ground association to discuss plans for this year's Camp Meeting was held at the church.

Roderick C. Dion, who has conducted a grocery and meat market at 36 Ash street for the past two years and for some years previous conducted a bakery on the same premises, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Tuesday in the United States court at New Haven. In the schedule filed, Dion's liabilities are listed at $23,505.97 and assets $23,468. Of the latter amount 30 per cent. is believed to be on secured claims. Real estate is included in the assets.

It is understood that the strike of some 2,000 operatives of the American Thread company plant in March 9, 1925, brought about the Dion bankruptcy. Many of these operatives resided in lower village and were old customers of the store which had been conducted for years by the late Mayor Hormisdas Dion, father of the bankrupt. As the strike continued to be extended the customers and failure of these people to return to work and settle their accounts brought about the crash.

The late Dion, who died over two years ago, had conducted the business for over 35 years. Previous to his death he had turned the bakery over to his son, who, after his father's death disposed of this business to Arthur Moreau to take over the grocery and meat business. Several months ago Moreau's bakery was hit by the business depression and he went into voluntary bankruptcy.

Naomi May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wylie of 5 Strong's Court died at their home Monday evening. She was two years and three months of age. Besides her parents the deceased leaves a twin sister Norma; four other sisters, Fidelia, Beverly, Lyle and Bernice; her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Caisse, on her mother's side and her grandmother, Mrs. Bertha Smith on her father's side. All the survivors are of this city.

Two transient cotton weavers, John McDonnel, 49, of Franklin, Mass., and John Malone, 52, of Pawtucket, R. I., and Robert McCarthy 52, of Windsor, Vt., a railroad man were taken to the police station at 8.45 o'clock Tuesday morning from the spring at Bridge street, by Officer Grant Bombria. At nine o'clock the first two pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication, McCarthy denied his guilt. Judge Foss imposed a fine of $15 and costs, amounting to $23.15 in each case. The men had no funds and at 9.30 they were on their way to Brooklyn jail.

President James B. Fullerton was in charge of the annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian association held Monday night. Treasurer H. Clinton Lathrop and General Secretary Albert B. Smith, made their reports which were accepted. The following four directors, whose terms had expired, were re-elected: Roland B. Jordan, Fred L. Avery, James P. Mustard and Dr. R. Bullock Jones. The directorate went into session and elected, as officers: James B. Fullerton, president; Kenneth N. Hillhouse and Charles W Hill, vice-presidents; Fred L. Avery, recording secretary and H. C. Lathrop, treasurer.

Funeral services for Mrs. Eliza Allen Johnson were held at one o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the late home in Mansfield Hollow. Revs. T. Hawthorne Jones and Mrs. Jones officiated. Burial was in the Bedlam cemetery, Chaplin. The bearers were James Lynch, David Clark, Lester Clark and Frank Walker, the latter of Groton. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

Miss Jane F. Ashton chairman of the Washington Convention fund was in charge of a whist given by the Windham Girls' club Monday night. Twenty-four tables were in play. The prize winners were Mrs. Louis Belanger, Miss Marie Giguere and Miss Anna Nelson. An intermediate prize won by Mrs. Mary Connor and a door prize by Mrs. William T. Champlin.

Ernest DeRoberto, 22, of Providence, R. I., who was shot while rum running through this city on the night of April 28th was said to be considerably improved in health Tuesday. It is very likely that the man will recover, complications now being the only source of danger. No attempt has been made to remove the bullet which is partly lodged in the left lung.

KEEPING UP SOILS

Since fertile soils are the greatest resource of any nation, it follows that the people who keep their soils fertile are the most prosperous ones. To build up a rundown soil is a life problem but this may be ruined in a very few years by a careless farmer. Constant care, however, will maintain soils in a fertile state or may even improve them. Several western European nations have, within 50 years, improved their soils so that production has more than doubled.

To keep a soil fertile is not really an expensive procedure but constant care must be exercised. Our first care since we are a live stock producing state, should be to wisely use our animal manures. These should not be permitted to ferment away from the land but should be spread as soon after making as it is economically practicable. A moderate dressing is to be advised when the supply is limited so that the manure may be made to cover a greater area. The manure supplies organic matter and increases crop growth, which in turn increases the organic matter further, due to the greater crop of turf and roots left on the ground.

Following the wise use of the manure one should apply enough lime to make the land produce the clovers. Some one has said that lime and more lime will ruin the land but that is not true if clover and manure are also used on the land. The lime should not be used in excess for it may unbalance the soil and lead to unfavorable conditions. This is, however, not a probable occurrence as practically all Connecticut soils need two tons or more of ground limestone to insure clover.

It may be inferred from the above that a rotation of crops is essential to the maintenance of soil fertility. A good rotation permits a loosening of the soil to be allowed by a compaction of the same. A cultivated crop is followed soon by a turf forming crop. Decomposition of organic matter is at a high state to be followed by a low state when organic matter accumulates. Nitrogen depleting crops are followed by nitrogen supplying crops. Corn, small grain and hay make a good rotation. Potatoes may be substituted for the corn.

When the manure is well used and the land is limed to meet the needs of the rotation it next follows that the soil must be supplied with additional phosphorus to maintain it in a productive state. Most of our soils are poorly supplied with this element and the natural supply is often relatively unavailable. Acid phosphate is our most effective source of phosphorus but bones and rock phosphate are satisfactory sources although less available to the crops than the acid phosphate.

Continued maintenance of a high state of fertility, particularly on light and sandy soils will require the use of moderate applications of potash salts. At present muriate of potash is least expensive and is satisfactory for all our general crops except tobacco which requires sulphate of potash or carbonate of potash for the highest quality.—Henry Dorsey, Agronomy department Connecticut Agriculutral college.

WEED SEED DANGERS

Dealers in agricultural seeds, in fact dealers in seed of all kinds make every effort to get rid of weed seeds before they place seed on the market. It is an extremely difficult task, requiring delicate machinery and expert work. They have developed the business of weed seed elimination to such a high point that often they are able to guarantee their seed very nearly 100 per cent pure; that is it contains almost entirely the seed of the plants desired.

Weeds will grow in spite of all efforts to prevent them. Agricultural seeds despite the most earnest efforts of science and machinery, which reduce the danger to a minimum, are bound to carry some weed seed. The farmer, who grows seed for sale to seed houses or to his neighbors, can assist materially in keeping down the weeds by careful cultivation to eradicate them from the source of supply.

A farmer should learn to know the seed of the weeds which infest his fields so that he can recognize them in grain after it is thrashed and see to it that the most dangerous pests are not being distributed. There are seven excellent reasons why there are bound to be some weeds despite all efforts to prevent.

1. A single plant sometimes will produce enormous numbers of weed seeds.

2. Many weed seeds show great viability, living 30 years or more in the soil.

3. Some weed plants ripen and scatter their seed before the crop matures and others when the crop becomes ripe and is harvested, often being harvested with it.

4. Some weed seeds are difficult to separate from the seed of the crop with which they are grown.

5. Some weed seeds are so small and so inconspicuous as to escape notice.

6. Some weed plants break from the soil and become tumble weeds and at times travel long distances—sometimes over the snow; others are furnished with a parachute or sail, which enables them to travel with the wind; while others are furnished with grappling hooks wherewith to fasten on passing animals.

7 Some weed seeds closely resemble the grain in which they grow.

With good cultivation and seed of the highest guaranteed purity obtainable, the crop of weeds will be greatly reduced and the cleaner the fields the higher the yield and the greater the profit to the grower. Then, too, keeping down the weeds by avoiding sowing seeds of them reduces the work of cultivation.

SPEED IN MAKING OF LETTUCES

The successful lettuce must lead a fast life. Speed in growth is the main issue in growing first-class lettuces and especially the head types. Rich soil, plenty of water and good cultivation in combination make the lettuce do a rushing business of moving from the seed to the table. If a dry spell sets in and checks the growth, say goodbye to lettuce heads, for the plant will start racing up to seed. If it can't make leaves fast, it can seed stalks.

It is just about the last call for gardeners in the northern states who want to grow head lettuce to get the seed planted. Head lettuce needs to be planted early and transplanted to eight-inch intervals after the seed lings have made two or three true leaves, snipping the leaves off half their length when transplanting. Once in the ground, see that they do not lack for moisture. A little dressing of nitrate of soda now and then will keep them spinning.

Leaf lettuce has been rather neglected in favor of the cabbage types in recent years but it is a good old serviceable standby giving salad material of good quality with a minimum of effort. Between the leaf and the head types, and partaking something of the nature of both, is the cos lettuce, also known as romaine, an upright-growing form with long narrow leaves, the close upright growth acting as a self-blanching arrangement for the central leaves, a process readily assisted by tying the tips of the outer leaves with raffia. The cos lettuces give as fine quality as the head lettuces and are an excellent substitute for gardeners who have not the time or patience to fuss with the latter.

Thin the lettuce when the seed has germinated sufficiently to give a finger hold. Leave the plants six inches apart in the row and notice the improvement in quality over the old style of close-planted lettuce, left to struggle as best it could to make leaves of respectable size for the table.

ONIONS, YOUNG AND OLD

Young onions are one of the first demands of the garden and old ones to put in the cellar one of the last. The breath of the Persians mentioned in ancient histories was the fragrance of the onion for the Persians brought the onion with them when they started their western invasion and we still have the Persian breath.

The first breath of Persia comes from the young onion and everybody that wants early young onions ought to be planting seeds and sets right now—sets for the earliest of all crops and then the tender, slender seedlings for later consumption. Onions want a rich sandy loam with a large amount of humus for ideal production. They want frequent shallow cultivation and given ordinarily good soil, they will proceed to produce.

Big onions, the so-called Bermuda type can be raised only by starting the seed early and transplanting the plants into their beds when the weather permits. There is still time to get a start on some fairly big Bermudas for the cellar this fall. Wood ashes are an ideal fertilizer for onions it is a fool-proof fertilizer for one thing, and anybody can be trusted to apply it without harm. They also take kindly to an occasional light dressing of nitrate of soda but this must be applied carefully and sparingly, not allowing it to touch the plants.

Onions should not be planted in the same location two years in succession as the onion maggot is likely to become troublesome. The old-fashioned rest of seed, pouring it into a bucket of water and skimming off the floaters as worthless, is a sound one. Onions of the flat type, such as the Red Wethersfield, do better in the poorer soils than the big globe types.

Onion seed may be sown with other early vegetables as it is longer in germinating than radishes and by the time it makes leaf appearance it will be reasonably safe from the weather. For the earliest young onions a few hills of the hardy variety, known as the multiplier or potato onion, should be planted. They endure winter freezing and start into growth with the opening of spring.

GOOD GARDEN IN CLAY SOIL

Clay soil often deters a home owner from starting a vegetable garden because of a belief that clay isn't good soil for vegetables, notwithstanding the fact that this same soil supports a heavy growth of weeds. A clay soil can give a very good garden. The main difficulty is getting a start at it for it is not the easiest soil to work. The original spading will be the big job. Better still, have it plowed, if possible.

Clay soil needs the constant addition of vegetable matter spaded into it to improve its quality and make it break apart more readily. Stable manure should be found for this kind of soil, if possible. It will pay to manure it heavily at the start, not so much for fertility as to get a start on breaking it up.

Working pulverized limestone into a clay soil is another step that will, in a few seasons, bring a surprising result in the way of making it tillable. Once the clay is broken up and put under cultivation it will be found to be improving in texture with each season's working as air is let into it and vegetable matter incorporated. It is an excellent idea to spade in manure or vegetable compost in the fall in bringing clay into shape for gardening.

Clay soil is a little colder than other soils and should not be worked until later in the spring than the average garden soil. It is very necessary to see that it is well dried out before spading it for if spaded when wet and sticky lumps that will give good imitations of brickbats are likely to result. One of the commonest methods of lightening a clay soil is to dig sand into it. The pulverized limestone is a much more efficient method as it not only gives better tilth to the soil but is performing a valuable function as a fertilizer at the same time, liberating plant food.

Clay soil will grow first-class vegetables and there need be no hesitation about trying it out. One season's trial will show how well it can produce.

MIDDLE AGE BRINGS NEW INTERESTS

For Women in Good Health

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
408 WALKER STREET, SHELBYVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Harvey Tucker, 408 Walker St., Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 516 Smith St., West Hoboken, N. J.

TRIED FOR LICENSE AND FAILED; CAUGHT DRIVING CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 4—In the town court Charles Geldard, 19, of Putnam was fined $2 and actual costs by Judge W. Fenner Woodward for operating an automobile without having a license to do so. It appears that Geldard came to the state police barracks here to get a license, having left his machine a distance up the road and out of sight. He failed to qualify for a license and soon afterwards was found operating his car on a public highway.

At his home in Pomfret Tuesday afternoon funeral services for Millard D. Hildreth were conducted by Rev. George Barker of the Congregational church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, Danielson. The bearers were William Johnson, James Sharpe, Willis Covell and Howard White. A. P. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Expansion of the number of roadside stands appears to be limitless. Many as there were last year, they will be more numerous this year. One finds new ones going up beside all the state highways radiating out of this town. Some of these institutions have been so successful in the past as to tempt the construction of a still greater number. But success with them is not universal. An impressionistic one a few miles east of here has been moved back into a mill and now is in use as a tool house.

Tuesday morning the body of Mrs. Dinah Perreas, 58, who died here Sunday night, was forwarded by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy to St. Gabriel, P. Q., where services are to be held and where burial will take place. Mrs. Perreas was a native of Canada and had been resident in this country for several years.

DANIELSON INTERESTED, IN LONGO'S NEW RECORD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 4—Danielson people read with interest of Antonio Longo's feat of pacing the short 40 feet and 7 inches. For a new record at Connecticut Agricultural college, during the meet between Connecticut and Rhode Island state, Longo broke a record set by himself in making the great throw. Longo is a graduate of Killingly high school and son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Longo of this place. He made a good record on the Aggie athletic teams. He is to be graduated at Storrs next month.

Strange as it may seem, there are automobile owners in Killingly who allege they have not been aware that an automobile is taxable both in the town and borough as well as by the state. Cases have come to light where no return has been made to the assessors on cars owned in Killingly.

One hundred tons of fertilizer have been unloaded here this week by farmers who have been buying co-operatively. This material will go onto farms in Killingly and other nearby towns.

The number of automobile tires one sees being changed along the state highways is taken as evidence that motorists are economizing by using well-worn tires instead of paying high prices now in force for new tires of better grades and known quality.

Carry a cement mixer as an indication of being engaged on a legitimate mission a truck driver transporting a load of liquor between Providence and New London is said to have passed through Danielson Tuesday. A man who had been riding the truck and got off here told the story.

A real estate transaction of interest involves the sale by F. X. Lemieux of his new home on Pearl street to F. X. Maoilhot of Maple street.

Try Magnesia for Stomach Trouble

To Neutralize Acidity and Fermentation. Prevents Indigestion, Sour Gassy Stomach.

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried pepsin, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and know these things will not cure their trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up to chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little Bisurated Magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate or milk but pure Bisurated Magnesia, which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.

"SWAT THE FLIES"

It seems a bit out of season, this backward spring, for the customary plea to swat the fly to be made, but in making war upon the flies it is to be realized that there is an advantage to be gained through the delay of warm weather.

Just at the present time it may not be possible to do much swatting, for the flies are few and far between, but that permits of an opportunity to work up to the task gradually and at the same time realize that by the elimination of the few during these days the many will be avoided in the days to come. The early swatting makes the job just that much easier. Strike down the season's pioneers and the number of their progeny will be greatly lessened.

The pestiferous house fly is everywhere during warm weather, but there are places to which it is more attracted than others. Where there is dirt and filth it can be expected there will be flies and the fly is constantly at work carrying that dirt and filth from place to place so that there can be no safe place for the germ carrier.

The swatting of the fly means the taking of steps to eradicate them after they arrive. It is a means of keeping down the number, but the more effective method is to strike at the breeding places, the root of the evil, by keeping the premises clean. That may not prevent all propagation but it will stop much of it. Then if it is accompanied by swatting or similar tactics and the careful screening of the homes there will be a welcome relief from undesirable and dangerous conditions.

The preventive work is highly important. Perhaps it does not permit the actual counting of the victims like the application of the swatter, but it strikes more effectively. While breeding is discouraged, the number is bound to be kept down and in the efforts in behalf of better health among the children and in the homes it is impossible to overlook the good results that can be obtained through fighting the flies.

ALIEN CRIMINALS

Considering the number of aliens who are being maintained in our penal institutions, there can be no surprise over the demands that are being made for changes in the laws which will make it possible to send more of such people back whence they came.

Under immigration laws as they are the present time it is possible to deport a certain number of them. But there are restrictions even upon that. If they have been in this country for more than five years, or if they have not been sentenced to prison for two or more crimes, carrying sentences in each instance of more than a year, deportation is not possible.

Huge sums of money are spent each year for the care of such inmates and for the maintenance of others in insane institutions. Because of the steady increase in these directions and the demands for more and more additions to such institutions in order to accommodate the corner efforts are underway for the changing of the laws whereby a person who has been sentenced to more than a year and a day in prison may be sent back to the country from which they came no matter how long they have been in the country.

With such a change as that in effect we would not be obliged to maintain undesirables any more than we would knowingly receive them. As it is now deportations proceed rather slowly and at no slight expense. But even though it costs money to get rid of them, it means a decided benefit to the country and the quicker it is possible to accomplish much more in this direction the better it will be. It has taken some time for us to realize the position into which we have been moving, but it certainly ought not to take as long to appreciate the need of a remedy and making proper application of it.

Such a change in the law concerning deportation would not only facilitate dealing with the undesirable aliens within our gates who have shown their hand but it could not fail to have its good effect upon others who may be inclined in the wrong direction.

PEACE IN THE RIFF.

There is apparently a desire on the part of all concerned in the Riff for a peaceful adjustment of their differences. Whether it is strong enough to actually bring them to an understanding is being eagerly awaited.

The situation at the time of the suspension of fighting was favorable to the French and Spanish. They were prepared to go ahead with the campaign which had been much more successful during the days just before it was brought to a close at the opening of the rainy season. But even though ready to carry on there is nevertheless a recognition of the fact that heavy losses and large expense are bound to be caused through a continuance of the warfare. The fact is that there has always been opposition to the warfare and there are evidences that even the Riffians see the desirability of putting an end to the slaughter.

The French and Spanish have displayed much confidence in the success of the undertaking, but if confidence were all that was needed they would each have individually overpowered the Riffians long ago. As a matter of fact the conference did not prevent the Riffians from driving back the Spanish to the coast nor stop them from seriously worrying the French. Not until there was a unity of opposition did the Riffians begin to feel the pressure.

The French and the Spanish have been actuated by their responsibility to their mandates. The Riffians have proved themselves fighters of the hardest kind and they will be disposed to make the best of any bargain that may result from discussions of peace. But the fact that there is a disposition to talk peace and to effect an understanding based upon existing treaties and the situation of the past, to which must be added their position as the result of the fighting, gives ground for hope that it may lead to the establishment of permanent peace in that region. If it can be accomplished now the time is certainly ripe for it. The prolongation of the struggle is certainly most undesirable if nothing more can be accomplished at later deliberations.

CLEANING UP

Evidences are discernible now and then that the spring clean-up is taking place outside as well as inside. There is the cleaning up of yards, the making of flower beds and the effort to get conditions about the homes in keeping with the idea of spring. There is the desire to have the start for the new season in as presentable a condition as possible, and all that is needed for most people to join in such efforts is for someone to make the start and set an example.

It was such work as that which prompted the idea of a clean-up week, a time when community efforts could be put forth for a general betterment. Without question good results have been accomplished through such tidying up, for attractive grounds always arouse interest and set a pace for others to follow.

There is merit in the contention of the New York health commissioner that clean-up week ought to prevail every week in the year, but it is apparent that some of the cleaning up cannot be done every week in the year, although if much that makes cleaning up necessary was not done, such as throwing refuse into the yard, there would not be as much cleaning up to do. Thus there is a chance to a certain degree for the clean up sentiment to prevail 52 weeks in the year, and most certainly it is a commendable sentiment.

Good looking yards, good looking grounds, good looking streets are desirable the whole year through. It is as nice to have the spick and span appearance in August or October as it is in April or May and every little effort contributes successfully to the goal. Waiting for just one clean-up week may be restricting the good work to a limited period when its benefits might be distributed over the entire year with profit and with perhaps less laborious efforts.

Every week as clean-up week is a good idea, but if such cannot be had there should be at least one such week about this season of the year. Have you done your bit?

OSCAR S. STRAUS

In the death of Oscar S. Straus there will be cause for sincere regret in more than this country. He was a man whose ability and views were recognized and appreciated over a wide territory and whose services were frequently sought in the adjustment of large problems.

He came to this country as one of a family of children whose father had been forced to leave Bavaria because of his revolutionary tendencies. The family located in the south and long since this son who has just died demonstrated not only his appreciation of the refuge which this country afforded but his desire to do much not only for his country but for those who needed his aid.

Oscar Straus has rendered signal service as a diplomat, especially in Turkey, to which country he was sent as the representative of this government three times and where his work made a very favorable impression abroad as well as at home.

He was likewise sought as arbitrator and as a peacemaker and it was to the cabinet of President Roosevelt that he was called as secretary of commerce and labor. Four presidents in fact picked him for special service connected with the government.

He figured also prominently as a philanthropist and was a frequent writer upon questions of public service which revealed his grasp of the situation and his well grounded convictions. He was one of the many adopted sons who have contributed great benefits to the country and its institutions and his passing means a great loss.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Some people enter into an argument as if they understood both sides of it.

Of course, if the nations of Europe want to pay up before 1988 there will be no objection from Uncle Sam.

The poorest sort of advertising is to let the idea get abroad that there is any liability of permanency to crime waves.

The work of bobbing the lawn cannot be put off much longer in view of the April showers and May sunshine.

Will it take as long to decide who is to be sheriff in Kennebec county, Me., as it is settling the Tacna-Arica dispute?

Now it is time, of course, for Mr. Rockefeller to be deluged with offers to aid him in disposing of that $10,000,000 which Egypt turned down.

FAMILY RIFTS

"Let's go over and see the Hornspots tonight," said Allan suddenly. He waited almost hopefully. Clara took two more stitches in the sock she was darning and then raised her head.

"Yes, dear," she murmured, putting away her work.

It was exactly what he knew she was going to say, and the phrase roused him to a kind of growing fury which he instantly subdued as he walked away. She detested the Hornspots and yet she said, "Yes, dear." She always, eternally, invariably said, "Yes, dear."

"Spiritless!" Allan told himself indignantly. If only Clara would say or do something different, something he did not expect! If she would stand up for her rights, be a little selfish, in fact; act human instead of always submissively agreeing with his every wish or suggestion, he felt that he would not constantly feel irritated at home, dissatisfied.

If he had been told in plain words that he was aggrieved because he had nothing to be aggrieved at he would have been decidedly surprised.

He flung into his coat and hat and pretended not to see her smile up at him when they started out. He was bored with her being so pleasant. In fact, he had quite convinced himself that she had only herself to blame no matter what happened—he was entirely vague about what was going to happen, but feeling this we something must. Clara was denying him the privilege of asserting himself, showing her what was the right way and seeing that she followed it, by never differing with him—being always agreeable was exactly as bad as being perfect and just as tiresome.

She did not even seem to mind his grumpiness as they walked along, seemingly as willing to keep still as to talk. He arrived at the Hornspots, grimly, sadly, heroically restraining himself.

The atmosphere there was electric with hints of war. Two red spots lighted Sally Hornspot's cheeks and George was frowning. Their greeting was abstractedly polite and they sat down as far apart as the room allowed. "It's too hot here," Sally said suddenly. "George open a window please?"

"Nothing of the sort," said George Hornspot. "It's just right—whachu want to do—freeze the Whites out? Turn out one of those lights, Sally—it's too glary."

"Oh, I don't think so," said his wife. "The light is exactly as I want it—men have such funny ideas, haven't they, Clara?"

"I'll say they have," agreed George Hornspot instantly. "But women have fumier. They—"

"I suppose interrupted Sally with deadly courtesy, "you mean because I don't agree with you about the car—George says it's got to do another year and I'm bound to have something decent instead of that shabby old thing."

"Can't afford it—"

"Well, you can afford 50-cent cigars—"

"Never paid over 15 for one in my life except once—"

"It isn't so much the car as the fact that you don't care at all what I want—"

"Yes, you're so concerned yourself over my side of the question aren't you?"

"I guess," said Sally curtly. "I guess if I didn't stand up for myself once in a while I'd have a sweet time of it, wouldn't I? But this doesn't entertain itchiWt—se tain the Whites—let's play bridge."

A bridge game is the one choice affair on earth where people may disagree if they choose. The Hornspots chose. At 11:30 the Whites, walking home, were individually considering their evening. "That woman!" Allan White broke out at last. "I never heard Sally go on as she did tonight. I wouldn't have blamed George for—for anything he might have done. Why, Sally is a regular tartar, simply outrageous, isn't she?"

"Yes, dear," said Clara with conviction and Allan White never noticed the phrase. It was such a comfortable feeling to reflect that things were different in his family—he had a wife with sense enough to know that he was right and to agree with him.

There was a nice warm sensation around his heart as he tucked Clara's hand under his arm.—Chicago News.

The Friendly Enemy

May fortune always to you send
The enemy who proves a friend.
—Mrs. Grouse.

Little Mister Smarty, the young Grouse who thought he knew it all, was in a bad way. Yes, sir, he certainly was in a bad way. The worst of it was his mother couldn't help him any. Because he had thought he was smart and knew more than his mother, he hadn't obeyed her when she gave the danger signal. His brothers and sisters had flown to safety, but he had waited. The result was he had almost been caught by Sharp Shin the Hawk. He had caught sight of Sharp Shin barely in time to fly blindly into a hemlock tree. In doing this he had driven a sharp pointed little twig through one wing. It was still there and now he couldn't fly.

Mother Grouse couldn't help him any. At first, she didn't know what the matter was. But when she led the way and his brothers and sisters all flew after her to a certain warm side hill, Mister Smarty couldn't follow. You see, he couldn't fly. Of course, when Mother Grouse discovered he wasn't along she came back to look for him. It was then that she discovered that he couldn't fly. It quite upset her. She couldn't leave the nine brothers and sisters and she felt as if she couldn't leave this little Mister Smarty. She tried to get him to walk over to where the others were but it was a long way and twice Mother Grouse left him and flew over to see that the others were all right. Then she came back.

Mrs. Grouse was sadly worried. If this little fellow couldn't fly, however would he be able to escape Reddy Fox if Reddy should happen along? It wouldn't be so easy for him to hide now as it was when he was a tiny fellow just out of the egg.

"I don't know what we're going to do," she kept saying over and over. "No, sir, I don't know what we're going to do. Now you see Mister Smarty, what comes of thinking you know it all."

"Yes'm," replied poor little Mister Smarty meekly.

By the time he was once more with his brothers and sisters, he was pretty well tired out. You see he had either to walk or run the distance their stout wings had taken them. It seemed to him that he had hardly reached them when Mother Grouse gave the alarm signal again. Away went all his brothers and sisters, but he couldn't fly. Mother Grouse stayed. "Hide!" she cried, "hide quickly!" Then she ran a little way and began to flop about as if she couldn't fly. Meanwhile, little Mister Smarty had flattened himself on the ground close to an old log. He could see his mother flopping about just in front of a great

Farmer Brown's Boy stooped down and picked him up two-legged creature. He never had seen one like it before. This two-legged creature appeared to pay no attention to Mrs. Grouse flopping about as if her wings were broken. Instead, he came straight toward that old log, and that meant straight toward little Mister Smarty. It came just as if it knew that Mister Smarty was there.

As a matter of fact, it did. You see this terrible two-legged creature was none other than Farmer Brown's Boy. He had seen that young grouse hide when the others flew, and he had guessed right away that something was wrong or it would have flown with the others. Poor little Mister Smarty! It seemed to him as if his heart would stop beating. Never in all his life had he been filled with greater terror. At first he kept perfectly still, because it was the wisest thing to do. Now he lay perfectly still because he was too frightened to move. Farmer Brown's Boy stooped down and picked him up. Of course little Mister Smarty thought that Farmer Brown's Boy was an enemy. He was soon to learn that he was a very fortunate young grouse, for this enemy was the one friend who could help him.

Stories That Recall Others

Beginning Early in Life

One of the good "daddies" who has gone to Florida to get rich told his two little girls, age seven and nine, he would give them 25 cents for every letter they composed and mailed to him.

Mary, age seven, wrote one like this: Dear Daddy—I want you to come home. I don't know when you are coming, but when you do come, come a day sooner."

It brought daddy, and double pay.

Chance For a New Job

A man who has many dimes and dollars, spends much of his time puttering around his home in overalls. He patches his walls with cement from time to time, freshens things up with paint, keeps his yard spick and span and does many other chores in which he finds recreation and pleasure. Not so long ago the wife of a well known resident drove past his home. The man was working as usual in his yard. The chauffeur eased his car over and the woman made the man in the yard a proposition. She told him she had driven past there many times and admired greatly. She liked the way he kept things in order and asked him to come to work for her, saying she could pay him more than he received there. The proprietor of the place replied that he hesitated to change because he had been there a long time and the people were very good to him. He would think it over. The woman said she would return in a couple of days for her answer, repeating that he could improve his condition.

In two days she drove up again for her answer. The man informed her that he had decided not to leave; he had been there so long and the people were so good to him—in fact just like old friends. She drove away insisting that he had made a big mistake in not recognizing his opportunity. And he never told her his name and she does not know it yet.

From Small Beginnings

Frederick Fargus, the Auctioneer, a Popular Novelist

"What's become of Fred?" the auctioneer asked. "I can't think where the boy is," replied the tired housekeeper. "His dinner was ready; I called him; I looked everywhere. I can't imagine—" "Imagine! You have it!" the father thumped his fist down on the table. "You have it! Imagine! That's the word! That boy is always imagining something or other! He's a dreamer! He thinks he wants to be something better than an auctioneer! Always dreaming over a lot of books. I know where he is! He's gone off to the school ship! That's where he is!"

The auctioneer grabbed up his hat and hurried off to the pier where lay a school ship, the paradise of every boy in Bristol. Sure enough, on board that vessel was his son, Fred Fargus. "I want to be a sailor!" the boy begged. "Sailor nothing!" the father roared out. "You'll come home and be an auctioneer."

He had been only 13 when he went on board that paradise. It was with wretchedness that he went back to Bristol, to the desks and the figures and the dull accounts that he liked so little. His father made him an apprentice in a bookkeeping office. Love for his home made the boy do as he was told. Month after month, year after year he bent over the ledgers and added figures. Meanwhile through his head ran visions of tall masts, of the sweep and dash of the s . and of strange lands lifting above the dim horizon. Who can chain the imagination! In the intervals of his work the young man wrote songs that told of his love of the sea or that used the brilliant imagination that had made him a dreamer. He sent the songs to a local magazine, whose editor was only too glad to print them.

Not wishing to worry his father the youth signed his name "Hugh Conway." In the years that followed he made the name of "Hugh Conway" more famous than his real name. The school ship had been named "Conway" and he delighted in treasuring the memory of his attempt to escape from a cramped life. After a while he wrote regularly for the magazine. When the father died the young man promised him he would carry on the auctioneer's work—and he did! Nevertheless, he kept on writing. Finally, at 35, he wrote a novel that he sent to the same magazine. Immediately he sprang into fame. It was the novel of the day. Everyone read it. Everyone talked about it. In London they made it into a play, and the presses roared out a half million copies. In fact, the people are still reading Called Back, by Hugh Conway, the auctioneer!

Now he let his imagination work at full tilt and wrote other stories and novels. The strain was too great, and it led to his death at 33. His story is the story of a complete triumph, for he fulfilled all his father's wishes, and at the same time used to the full his one great talent, the imagination that had led him, as a little lad, towards the sea. Called Back is well worth thereading.

More than 350 members of the Knights Templar from all parts of Connecticut attended the banquet given the grand commandery of the state by Hamilton Commandery No. 5, at the Stratfield hotel in Bridgeport, Monday.

BACKUS HOSPITAL NURSES' SCHOOL GRADUATES EIGHT IN CLASS OF 1926

Eight nurses were graduated Tuesday evening by the training school for nurses of the W. W. Backus hospital. The graduating exercises were held at the Hugh Henry Osgood Memorial parish house and were attended by about 200 relatives and friends of the graduates. The parish house parlors were beautifully decorated with palms and flowers.

With Henry A. Tirrell presiding, the programme opened at 8 o'clock with the processional of the alumnae, graduating class of 1926 and student nurses, the music being provided by Swahn's orchestra. Following a selection by the orchestra, the invocation was given by Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church. Henry J. LaFontaine was heard in a vocal solo, Where'er You Walk (Handel). Mrs. Charles A. Saxton accompanying him on the piano. Following Mr. LaFontaine's solo, the address to the graduates was given by Rev. John J. Reilly of St. Patrick's church

During his address Rev. Fr. Reilly said his experience with the sick gave him a common ground on which to meet the nurses. He said people have a narrow idea of the duties of a nurse. "Your immediate object is to lessen pain of the human body," he said. "Your finer object is the welfare of the human soul."

It is all right to avoid pain. People would be foolish if they did not take advantage of the attainments of science. But it is not life to live without pain. Christ taught us how to live and Christ taught us how to die and there was plenty of pain in His programme. God will bless those who help relieve pain. It would not be well with this world if it were all pleasure. The nurse must be careful of her health of body. She must be careful to the point of jealousy of the health of her soul. A few days' sickness will ruin the most ravishing beauty but the beauty of the soul goes on forever.

Father Reilly admonished the nurses to keep the high standard of their vocation and the home of God before them. You are here on earth to serve, to serve your God, he said. If you keep your class motto before you, you will be serving God. Give something more than service; something more than your salary calls for. Give your patients kindness. Kindness is something money cannot buy. They may pay for service but they can't buy kindness. By your choice you have enobled your life. Health of the body and health of the soul! Let these two things be your quest in life. Keep yourself fit to serve your neighbor and your God. Be kind and gentle. Be chaste and immaculate. Graduates of the training school, class of 1926, I beseech you to walk in a manner worthy of the vocation to which you have been called."

At the close of Father Reilly's address there was another selection by the orchestra and this was followed by the presentation of diplomas by Mr. Tirrell. Mr. LaFontaine was again heard in a vocal solo, On the Road to Mandalay, (Speaks) Mrs. Saxton accompanying on the piano. So insistent was the applause that Mr. LaFontaine graciously responded with an encore. The class pins were presented by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church and each member of the class was presented a companion case by the hospital executive committee, the presentations being made by Mr. Tirrell, Oliver L. Johnson, vice president of the executive board, in behalf of the hospital flower committee presented each graduate a beautiful bouquet. A selection by the orchestra brought the exercises to a close, adjournment being taken to the Wauregan hotel, where the remainder of the evening was devoted to a reception and dance.

LOST CHAPTERS FOUND OF HAWTHORNE STORY OF 1846

A little-known serial reputed to have been edited by Nathaniel Hawthorne, all but one installment of which was printed in the long defunct Democratic Review is to be published in book form in New York. The volume will contain material in an unsigned manuscript found among the author's papers. This, according to Dr. Clifford Smyth, who writes a preface, is the missing instalment which Hawthorne mislaid when he moved from Concord to Salem in 1846.

The volume will be published under the title of "The Yarn of a Yankee Privateer," in which the writer describes his adventures on an American privateer during the War of 1812, his capture and imprisonment in the Barbadoes and later in the famous Dartmoor Prison.

Dr. Smyth was emphatic in declaring that Hawthorne himself could not have been the author of the tale. Dr. Smyth believes that John Lord, a greatuncle of Hawthorne, was the writer. Lord, according to Dr. Smyth, is known to have experienced adventures during the War of 1812 similar to those described.

The serial was brought to light and the identification of the missing installment took place about three months ago, according to Dr. Smyth. A man he had never met before came to him with two bound volumes of The Democratic Review of Boston for 1846, which contained it. Seven years previous Dr. Smyth had received from Rev., Mother M. Alphonsus Lathrop, Hawthorne's daughter, the unsigned manuscript she had discovered among her father's papers. Dr Smyth had been unable to find a place for it in the author's work until he found the serial. He said the manuscript was composed of nineteen pages, evidently torn from a large ledger. Both sides of the paper were used.

Hawthorne's daughter, who found the missing pages, is a former resident of New London and now is head of the Rosary Hill hospital which she founded at Hawthorne, N. Y., for incurable cancer patients.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS FOR DIOCESAN BUREAU

Plans were completed for the campaign for funds to carry on the work of the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service in St. Patrick's parish at a meeting of the parish committee held Tuesday night in the parish hall. Rev. Myles P. Galvin was appointed by the pastor; Rt. Rev. Msgr. Mayo, to take charge of the campaign in the parish. Nearly 100 members of the parish attended the meeting called by Fr. Galvin. He told of the splendid charitable and philanthropic work accomplished by the bureau in the past, and the need of greater funds to carry on successfully the increasing demands of the bureau Heretofore, Miss Delia M. Maroney of New London had charge of this district, giving but two days each week to the work. Recently, Mrs. Francis Howard Girroir, a graduate of McGill university, has been appointed by Bishop Nilan to give full time to the work, embracing the territory bounded by Norwich, Willimantic, and Putnam. Every Catholic parish will contribute to the funds necessary to carry on the work of the bureau. Last year nearly $3,000 was spent on Catholic charitable work by the bureau, on a two-day weekly working basis. The great need for a much broader service in this territory has become only too apparent to those in charge of the work and it is expected that the Catholics in this territory will respond generously to this appeal for funds.

Last year the central office disbursed $20,575.96; Hartford office $41,435.98; Bridgeport $45,121.63; New Haven $32,456.08; Waterbury $10,948.54; New London, $5,217.94; Norwich $2,949.29 It is apparent that the Norwich office must enlarge its scope of work and must increase its financial support. There is no doubt. It is felt, that this great work will be given generous Catholic support by the people of the various parishes in this section of the state.

St Patrick's parish has been divided into sections, with solicitors in each section, as follows:

RUSSELL HAS REPUDIATED TWO ARSON CONFESSIONS

John G. Russell of Montville was on trial before Judge Newell Jennings in the criminal superior court at New London Tuesday afternoon on the charge of statutory arson for the burning of a dwelling house near Oakdale on Jan. 21, 1926. He is defended by Public Defender Charles L. Stewart.

Russell was a tenant in the house which belonged to a man named Nierderman and upon which Fortunaro Mallmaro of Montville held a mortgage for $3,400.

Russell has made two signed confessions, but he has now repudiated both of these, claiming that they were made because of his desire to see his wife and that he was willing to sign anything at the time if he could be released from custody. In his confession he stated that he was to receive $300 from Mallmaro for burning the house.

Mallmaro pleaded not guilty to the statutory arson charge in court Tuesday and elected to be tried by jury. Mari Mallmaro, his wife, charged with the same offense, had her case nolled at the suggestion of the state attorney, who said there was insufficient evidence against her to warrant a trial.

Two more witnesses remain to be heard before the state rests its case against Russell.

GREENE PITCHES ACADEMY TO FIRST VICTORY IN HIGH SCHOOL LEAGUE

Striking out 11 men and allowing but four hits Johnny Greene pitched the Academy team to its eighth straight victory Tuesday afternoon at Morgan field, New London when Chapman Tech was beaten 8 to 1 in the first league game of the season for the local high school. Greene pitched brilliantly throughout the game the only score coming in the third inning as a result of two hits and two errors. In every other inning of the game Greene was out of danger and had complete mastery over the Chapman Tech batters.

Greene so far this season has worked in six games and has pitched 42 innings striking out 53 men which is a pretty good record for any high school pitcher. In this time he has allowed 23 hits, five of them being made in the practice game with the Riverview club.

In the game Tuesday the Academy team hit well in back of Greene, the features of the hitting being the triple by Cimikoski and the home run by Hymie Sadinsky, his second of the season. Jarvis and Burke and Cimikoski each secured two hits off Gero, the pitching ace of the New London school.

For seven innings the game was a pitching battle between Greene and Gero with the local pitcher having the edge on the New London hurler. In the eighth frame the New London pitcher weakened and the Academy took advantage of his weakness and with three hits behind two errors scored five runs. This was the big inning for the Academy and sewed up the game for the local boys.

The Academy started the scoring in the first inning when Cimikoski the first man to face Gero poled a line drive to the wall in right center for three bases and came home on a sacrifice fly by Mish after Sadinsky had walked and Jarvis fanned. Tombari filed out to Nield.

In the third inning Brewer the first man up dropped a Texas leaguer over third and was followed by Cimikoski who dropped another short hit over the infield. Sadinsky advanced both runners with a sacrifice and while Jarvis was being thrown out at first Brewer scored, the second run of the game.

Chapman tallied their lone run in the last half of the third inning after two were out. Aquillo hit safely over second. The runner stole second and on an attempt to catch him Mish threw wildly to centerfield allowing Aquillo to go to third from where he scored on Montgomery's hit to right field. From then on Greene had nothing to worry about and only one man reached second base after the third inning.

Sadinsky's home run came in the first inning when he drove a liner to left field that Fonzetti overran and the ball rolled to the fence while Sadinsky circled the bases.

The eighth inning was the big inning for the Academy. Gero who had been pitching good ball until this inning weakened and the Academy started to hit. Cimikoski hit a looping fly to Pongetti in left who ingloriously muffed the ball. Cimmy stole second and went to third as Sadinsky was being thrown out at first.

Jarvis dropped a hit close to the left field foul line and Cimikoski scored Jarvis going to second on the throw in. Jarvis took third when Montgomery missed up a throw to second to catch Jarvis off the bag. Mish walked and went to second with no play being made on him. Tombari singled sharply to left field and both Jarvis and Mish scored on the hit, Tombari taking second on the throw to the plate. Burke the next hitter drove a ball between short and third and the Chapman short-stop threw his glove at the ball hitting it as it went by. Tombari was allowed to score and Burke was given three bases on penalty for the act. Burke scored a minute later when Yerrington was thrown out at first. Greene fanned ending the inning.

The Academy threatened again in the ninth inning when a base on balls, a error by Aquillo and a single by Jarvis filled the bags. Hamil was sent in to bat for Mish but hit into a double play, Jackson, who had batted for Brewer and walked, was forced at the plate and Hamil was thrown out at first. Greene took care of the three men that faced him in the last inning throwing out one at first and fanning the other two.

One attractive feature of the game was the cheering section of Academy undergraduates who were led by Jimmy Moore, Claire Brewer and Palmer. The cheer leaders looked very snappy in their white flannels, red sweaters and red megaphones.

STRIBLING TO DISPLACE DELANEY WITH BERLENBACH

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—Young Stribling probably will displace Jack Delaney as an opponent for Paul Berlenbach, world's light-heavyweight champion, in a 15 round title match at the Yankee stadium, June 10, Tex Rickard announced today.

Negotiations with Stribling were opened, Rickard said, as a result of the edict of the state athletic commission that the promoter was at liberty to name a substitute for Delaney if the latter persisted in ignoring overtures made to him. Rickard gave Delaney until today to sign a contract and then definitely abandoned negotiations with him.

Joe Stecher, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling title, who is under suspension in this state for failure to defend his title against Ed Malcewicz of Utica, N. Y., was given permission to meet Jim Londos at Philadelphia, June 10 at the opening of the Sesqui-Centennial outdoor sports program. This was done at the request of William H. Rocap, chairman of the Pennsylvania commission and applies to this match only.

Joe Dundee of Baltimore, one of the leading challengers in the welterweight division, was notified that he must cancel his engagement at Madison Square Garden May 21, to meet Eugene "Shufle" Callahan of Chicago. Promoters of the Coney Island stadium protested the match on the grounds that it was just one week before Dundee faces Willie Harmon there in a welterweight elimination contest and the protest was upheld.

Reddy Mason of Pittsburgh, manager of Harry Greb, former middleweight champion, appeared before the board to attempt to straightened out a controversy involving his contract with Greb. The commission ordered him to return Friday with Greb.

Tommy Burns, Detroit light-heavyweight, who meets Jack Delaney at Ebbets field, May 26, was ordered to complete his training in this state at least 15 days before the match.

RIVERVIEW CLUB HAS TOUGH SLATE FOR NEXT FEW WEEKS

That Norwich fans will see some of the fastest semi-pro teams in New England in action at the Norwich State hospital is assured by the schedule that has been arranged for the Riverview club by Manager Paul Zemke. The schedule for the remaining Saturdays in the month is far from an easy one and includes many teams that have never played before in the Riverview diamond. If the Riverview team can sail through this schedule with a clean slate the club can then lay claim to having one of the fastest semi-pro clubs playing ball in New England.

Next Saturday the opposing team at the hospital diamond will be the R. G. Miller club of Hartford. This is a club that has been organized this year and its roster includes practically the entire lineup of the Capitol city team that was one of the few teams to beat the Riverview team last season. On Saturday, May 15th, the hospital plays the Branford club, champions of the Middlesex County league last year. The following week the New England Oil team of Fall River known as one of the fastest semi-pro clubs in New England will be the attraction. In June the New Departure team of Bristol and the New Departure team of Meriden will appear at the hospital diamond.

NORWICH TWILIGHT LEAGUE FORMED WITH HARRY MILLS AS PRESIDENT

The Duwell A. A., considered one of the most prominent athletic clubs in the state, will again run the twilight league in Norwich. The Duwells ran the league during the 1925 season and the fans of Norwich witnessed practically the best baseball ever played in this city and according to all reports the 1926 season will be every bit as good, if not better than last year.

A meeting was held last week for the managers of the different clubs intending to enter the league but owing to the fact that only three teams were represented the meeting was adjourned to last night which was held at the Duwell club rooms. The meeting opened at 8:30 with James Pedace acting as chairman and the following managers present: James Holland, Centrals; Harry Mills, East Ends; Frank Burch, St. Joseph's; Sam Carden, Yantic, and Peter Frost, Boston Colored Stars. James Pedace announced that the Duwell A. A. would again run the league and would offer prizes to the value of $200, provided that the managers of the various teams were satisfied. After a short discussion it was voted to accept the proposition of the Duwell club as every one agreed that the way the league was run last year was satisfactory in every way.

Harry Mills, manager of the East Ends, well known in sporting circles throughout the state was next elected as president of the 1926 Twilight League. In electing Harry as their 1926 president it is without a doubt a wise move on the part of the league as he is as well acquainted with baseball affairs as anyone in this part of the state and should lead the league to a very successful season.

Earl E. Brigham, Jack Wilson, Myles E. Standish and Earl Mathewson, who acted on the arbitration board last year will again be asked to handle the trouble of the league this season as everyone agreed that these men handled whatever questions that did come up in good shape. The question as to how the prizes would be divided and the drawing up of the rules was put over to the next meeting which will be held next Tuesday night. In addition to the prizes put up by the Duwell club no doubt individual prizes will be donated by some of the merchants as was the case last year. These prizes went a long way towards creating competition amongst the players and proved real valuable towards the welfare of the league. The drawing up of the schedule which will start June 1st and possibly sooner, was again left to Myles Standish, sporting editor of The Bulletin, games to be played on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, leaving Monday and Friday as open dates.

In regard to ground rules it was announced that the field this year was over 250 feet in length at every point, excepting in extreme left field. The minimum length of a regulation field is only 250 feet so that no ground rules will be necessary except in extreme left field. After several other minor details were discussed it was voted to adjourn the meeting to next Tuesday night.

Although only five teams were represented in all probability the Eastern Conn. Power Co. will again enter a team and it was decided to hold open a place for them as they proved one of the best teams in the league last year, not only for their playing, but the clean sportsmanship which they displayed throughout the season.

The entry of the Boston Colored Stars into the league should prove quite an attraction as there are quite a few fast colored boys playing ball in this locality and without a doubt will prove real dangerous throughout the season.

WESTERLY

JUDGE CALLS SITUATION ABSOLUTELY SCANDALOUS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 4—"Absolutely scandalous," was the characterization given to the state of affairs in Westerly by Probate Judge Burke, when Oliver P. Crandall, Westerly director of public aid, appeared in court with the 17-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boucher, who were also in court, with the petition that her two-weeks-old daughter, born out of wedlock, be given the name Jeanette Turano, and be sent to the Rhode Island Home for Dependent Children. She told the court that Angelo Turano was the father of her child, that he was 19 years old, and had married another since the birth of her child and had also left this wife and was living now with his father, George Turano. Her father told the court that by agreement between two Westerly attorneys the sum of $400 had been paid by Turano to one of them and that his daughter had only received $200 of this payment in settlement. Even if the child had been christened Jeannette Turano, Judge Burke said that unless the parties were married, the child could only be called Jeannette Turano Boucher. Not only were there existing, "an absolutely scandalous piece of business," said the judge, but, from statements made, there existed a crime which should be presented to the proper authorities, which was punishable with a heavy penalty.

The petition was granted for the child to be taken to the Rhode Island institution until the mother could provide for her support.

Regular session of Westerly probate court was held in the Westerly town hall on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Probate Judge Edward M. Burke disposed of probate matters as follows:

Estate of Robert Duncan Langworthy. Petition received from Mrs Emma S. Langworthy Burdick, represented in court by Judge Oliver H. Williams, that she be appointed guardian of the person and estate of Robert Duncan Langworthy, a minor under 14, and son of Nathan L. and Grace Langworthy, deceased. Having been given due notice and Albert H. Langworthy, next of kin, advised, there being no objection. Emma S. L. Burdick was appointed guardian of the person and estate. Bond was made $25,000 with the New Amsterdam Casualty and Surety Co., as surety. Judge Oliver H. Williams was named appaiser.

Estate of Samuel A. Gariner. First and final account of Washington Trust Co., represented in court by Thomas Perry, trust officer, from May 3 to April 7, 1926, showing no balance, together with general releases and receipts, among them being the First Baptist church of Westerly, $100, with no objection were received, examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

The second day of the April term of superior court for Washington county, Judge Antonio A. Copotesto on the bench, to consider the Westerly trial calendar, began in the county court house in Westerly Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. All the petit jurors were in attendance.

The first case called for trial was that of Helen Berkeley vs. Domenico Blanda, alias, and co-defendants, Christy Lidestre. Peter and Mary Luppinazzo. Miss Berkeley claimed to have broken her left leg in three places on the evening of March 28, 1923, when she fell on steps in front of the store of Blanda and Lidestre, 135 Canal street.

Jurymen were selected as follows:

Thomas J. Gahan, South Kingstown; Rensselaer S. Palmer, Hopkinton; Arthur N. Peckham, South Kingstown; John E. Waidhaus, South Kingstown; Ralph G. Bliven, Westerly; George F. Luth, North Kingstown; John W Shontell, South Kingstown; Clement D. Taillon, Westerly; Harry W. Gavitt, Westerly; John H. Carpenter, Narragansett; Columbus Pasetti, Westerly; and Louis H. Wall, Hopkinton. Arthur N. Peckham of South Kingstown was named foreman.

The jury was told that the plaintiff went to the Blanda-Lidestri store to make some purchases and to pay them a bill. She also called at the adjoining store of Luppinazzo, the owner of the property, and as she left the Blanda store, to which she had returned, she fell when she stepped on the top step of a short flight which extended the length of the stores and not only broke her leg but bruised her head and sustained a shock so that she was unable to continue in the employ of the Ninigret Co. and was out of employment from March 23rd to the 2nd day of November, 1923. At the mill when she worked nights her wage was from $15 to $22 a week.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following transfers: May 3, Stuart Cruickshank and Helen Cruickshank to Albert J. Loepsinger of Providence, two certain parcels or tracts of land with buildings and improvements. Theft rst of about 140 acres, deeded the grant on Oct. 23, 1917 by Alice C. Arnold. The second on the east side of the highway leading north from Dunn Corners of about 20 acres, deeded the grantor by Otto and Minna Nurmi on April 27, 1925.

Charlotte S. Chapple of Middletown, O., to Wayland A. and Sarah P. Saunders, a certain lot or parcel of land with buildings, improvements and furnishings at Pleasant View beach, Lot No. 45.

May 4, Alexander C. Thompson to Lasll Wood a parcel or plot of land located on a proposed new highway to be known as River View avenue, off Beach street.

Smith Granite Co. to Frank H. Crandall and wife building lot No. 28 on the easterly side of Franklin street.

Edward A. Newell of Concord, Mass., to Frances A. Kinnicutt of Worcester, Mass., a certain lot or parcel of land at Watch Hill, Lot No. 61 Cottage Sites Everett Farm plat.

Rhode Island's Independence day, May 4th, its 150th anniversary, was observed in Westerly by the general showing of the American flag in the Shennandoah uniform flag display. This was the only formal and public notice taken in Westerly to mark the event when Rhode Island declared its freedom from the British crown. This was the first general opportunity for the people of Westerly to observe the pleasing showing made by the nearly 100 flags flown from poles set in the surbstone at regular intervals in the business section of the town. Public and private buildings also made liberal display of the flag from their flag staffs.

COLCHESTER

In Hartford Monday, Rev. Francis P. Nolan, pastor of St. Justin's church, of that city, was unanimously chosen a member of the board of park commissioners to succeed Rev. Dr. Michael A. Sullivan, a native of Colchester, whose term expires this year, at the annual meeting of the board. Mayor Stevens presided at the meeting. The term is for ten years beginning May 1. Edward M. Day, member of the firm of Day, Berry & Reynolds, whose term as a member of the board expires in 1933, was elected president of the board. The following record, concerning the termination of Father Sullivan's term, was placed on the minutes of the meeting:

"Rev. Michael A. Sullivan has just completed an unusually long term as a member of the board of park commissionrs, having served the city for 19 years, including two terms as president of the board.

"It is therefore fitting that this board should express its deep appreciation of the faithful service Father Sullivan has rendered it during nearly two decades. As commissioner for Pope Park, he has combined sympathy for the wishes of those who live in its neighborhood with a practical understanding of their needs and has acted with admirable judgment in meeting the problems that have arisen within his special field.

"At the deliberations of the board, he has always shown a friendly co-operation which has endeared him to its members and they hereby express their sincere regret that through his retirement tthey must lose both a loyal servant of the city and a colleague whose kindly spirit has won their esteem and affection."

Observed Julian Calendar Easter

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The month of April showed a decided increase in building activities in Norwich according to the report of the building permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton for the month. Fire Marshal Stanton's report is as follows:

New Frame Houses	7
Alterations to frame buildings	6
New frame garages	15
New Brick Garages	2
New Cement Block garage	1
Alterations to Brick buildings	1
Total number of permits	33

The valuation placed on the new buildings and alterations by the owners is $27,645. To this amount at least 25 per cent. can be added for it has become the habit of the owners to place the valuation of the new buildings a great deal lower than what the actual cost is.

During the past week five permits were granted by Fire Marshal Stanton. The permits were as follows:

To Francis Rydzewski to erect a frame garage on Second street for himself. The garage will be 17x18 feet and will be constructed of used lumber and box boards.

To [illegible]ss and Roberts to erect a gasoline station on North Main street. The building will be constructed with a wood frame with wire lath and concrete foundation and floor. The interior will be finished in plaster and the exterior will be finished in stucco. The dimensions of the building were not given in the building permit.

To Mrs. Lula Davey to erect a two-car garage on Geer avenue. The garage will be 18x20 feet and of frame construction. The foundation will be of cement with cement floor.

To Henry G. Monte, Jr., to erect for Leon Taylor a frame garage. The garage will be 14x20 feet with cement foundation.

To Mrs. Fred D. Bundy to erect a brick garage at 27 Grove street. The garage will be 18x18 feet with concrete foundation. The walls will be of brick and the interior will be finished in plaster.

Considerable work has been accomplished on local building projects during the past week. The work of tearing down the old building on Franklin street to make room for a new garage and service station for David Goldhaber has been practically accomplished and the new building will be started soon.

The work of remodeling the store in the Young block for William Harrington has been finished and the store is now occupied. Several other remodeling jobs are under way in the business section of the city.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

There were 10 sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week, seven less than for the same week in 1925. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $733,502 and $72,950.

The number of real estate sales in New London during the past week was 14 an increase of 5 sales over the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $186,405 and $29,500.

State Building Permits

A total of 496 building permits were issued during the past week in the building centers covered by The Commercial Record. The total estimated cost of building permitted for was $2,564,365. During the corresponding week of 1925 there were 457 permits issued for new work estimated to cost $1,360,816.

Improvement in Building

After running at a consistently lower rate for the first three months of the current year, building activity in Connecticut has forged ahead during month of April and is likely to equal if not surpass April of last year. This is best illustrated by calling attention to the totals of building permits issued during the past week in the cities and towns in this state covered by the Commercial Record. The total of 496 permits issued during the week is not only a substantial increase over the record for the like week in both 1925 and 1924, but is the highest weekly total reported in any April in the past three years. The total of $2,564,365 in the estimated cost of construction work started during the week is also a figure that approaches record proportions for an April week. The high totals for the past week are all the more noticeable because of the manner in which building activity in this state lagged during the first three months of the year.

The natural conclusion is that the high rate of speculative building activity which prevailed during the second half of 1925 met with a severe decline this year. This fact, coupled with unusually severe winter weather is undoubtedly accountable for the comparatively small totals for the first quarter in Connecticut. But barring the appearance in the scene of an excessive amount of unreasonable labor demands among the building tradesmen, the present indications are that the building totals for the first half of this year will measure up fairly well to the record figures of last year.

Added to this was the friendly attitude of Judge Hinman, who presided at the trial, and no opposition on the part of the state attorney.

THREE-COLOR TRAFFIC SIGNAL BEING TRIED

A new three-color traffic signal light is being tried erected at the juunction of Broadway, Main and Shetucket streets. The lights are the standard red, amber and green, such as are in general use throughout the larger cities of the country. They flash at 30 second intervals, alternately, red, amber and green.

When the red flashes all traffic headed towards the red disc comes to a stop, while traffic, faced by the green disc continues on its way. Amber is the warning signal.

The new light is being placed at the corner on trial and if it proves satisfactory will probably be purchased by the city. It is the intention to do away with the need of a traffic officer at the corner. These traffic lights work very satisfactorily in other cities and it is the claim of those seeking to introduce it here that it will be equally satisfactory at the Broadway corner.

PRES. BENJ. T. MARSHALL, NEW LONDON, GIVEN $1,000 FOR A TRIP ABROAD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 4.—It was announced today that the faculty of Connecticut college, in appreciation of the way in which, since inauguration in 1917, President Benjamin T. Marshall has discharged the responsibilities of his office, has made him a gift of $1,000, intended to provide him with a trip abroad the coming summer. Members of the faculty expressed the hope that he may thus have an undisturbed vacation which he so richly deserves, free from the many duties which have occupied him continuously during the past few years.

Buck Jones, a big negro, put one over on the conductor of the Merchants' limited train that reached here from Boston last evening, but Sergeant Kane of the railroad police shuffled the negro off to the police station and he was in court this morning. Buck was big enough to be seen, but he rode from Boston to Providence unobserved by the conductor. After the train left Roger Williams' plantation, the conductor came upon him but the negro could not then be ejected from the car in which he was found, for the train did not stop after it left Providence until it reached New London. "You seem to select the best trains to ride on," observed Judge Prince, when Buck admitted that he had stolen a ride. Buck said, "I'm guilty, your honor." "Well, you hoof it out of town," was the penalty imposed upon the big negro then, who hustled to get away. Buck admitted that he had come from Pittsburg and said he had beaten his way.

William J. Tracy, driver of a delivery truck, was charged in the police court today with operating that vehicle without taking the trouble to mark the body of the truck with the net weight and horse power of the machine. William had a clever excuse that won him a suspended judgment. He said the body of the truck was marked with chalk, but in cleaning the vehicle the figures were rubbed out. Tracy had been a driver but a month.

Frank Biacinni was fined $5 for parking his car in Meridian street. Evidently residents here are realizing that there is an ordinance against the parking of cars in certain streets and for any length of time the operator desires to leave it, for the number of appearances in court is diminishing.

Frank Shea was funny when presented in court this morning for intoxication. He insisted on asking whether a man could get drunk on two drinks. Nobody attempted to answer the query so a plea of not guilty was entered and Shea attempted to prove that he was not drunk. But Officer Kane of the railroad police contradicted him and said that Shea was very drunk at the union railway station; that Shea was ordered away from the premises, but refused to go. Shea explained that he was on the way to Fishers Island and that he had a bundle of working clothes in his possession. He said he met a friend carpenter and with him he had a couple of drinks. That was the only libation he toyed with yesterday. Judge Prince informed Shea that when he was arrested, to the personal knowledge of the judge, information obtained by looking at the ceremony of arrest, he had a "package" that was not a bundle of clothes. It was a load of liquor and the jurist believed that Shea was quite drunk. However, Judge Prince did not desire to detain Shea here as he was on the way to Fishers Island, that asylum of so many men who drink freely. He allowed Shea to get aboard the next boat that went across the sound.

Frank Piscatella, the driver of a devery auto for Belt Brothers, delivered goods to the home of Mrs. Gladys Goldie and she claims she paid him for the goods so delivered. But Frank did not agree with her and went to the Goldie house to collect. Mrs. Goldie was not there but Mr. Goldie was and the latter paid the bill. Then he told his wife what he had done and she declared that the bill had been paid twice. She telephoned to the lawyer and when he appeared there was something doing. He claimed she attacked him with a whip and the woman declared that Piscatella called her vile names and threw a stone that broke a window in the Goldie house. The pair was given a hearing in the police court, but the evidence they gave did not prove conclusively who was at fault. They were sent away with the good advice to control their tempers and avoid excitement.

Mrs. Martha M. Brewster, 85, widow of William H. Brewster, died this morning at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Randall, 10 Methodist street. She had been ill a long time. Brewster, besides her daughter, is survived by a son, Charles B. Morgan, of Oswegatchie, Waterford. She was born in Springfield, and had resided in New London many years.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the operators' licenses of John Wall, this city, and Edward Bergerin, sailor attached to the submarine base, to be suspended.

Harry Bradshaw, of Henry street, complained to the police late last night that he had heard an unusual noise in the yard of his residence and investigating he discovered a man prowling about the place and peering through windows. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman Frank Philopena were sent to the Henry street house, but by the time the officers arrived, the prowler had disappeared.

In Philadelphia on May 15, Florence L. Duffell of 110 Ocean avenue will become the bride of Charles H. Hadley of Philadelphia. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Byron Lloyd of that place, brother-in-law of Mr. Hadley. Henry Hadley, his brother, will be the best man and Mrs. Byron Lloyd, his sister will be the matron of honor. Florence L. Duffell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Duffell of South Holmwood, Surrey, England. Her father is land agent for the Duke of Norfolk. She is the divorced wife of Walter S. Hunt of New London.

Dr. E. Oliver Winship, Attorney Charles B. Whittlesey, Thomas Fitch and Edgar S. Thomas left by automobile this morning for Dr. Winship's mountain camp at Lake Winisquam, N. H., for a week's fishing trip.

MASTER CARPENTERS DISCUSS WAGE INCREASE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 4.—A meeting of the master carpenters was held late this afternoon at which time the demands of the striking journeymen for a wage increase of 15 cents per hour was discussed at considerable length. Nothing definite was accomplished in the way of bringing the strike to an end. The strikers are now paid $1 an hour and they seek a wage of $1.15, five and one-half days a week constituting a week's work. The journeymen plumbers will also seek a wage increase during the month.

CONDUCTOR R. M. BROCKETT REPORTED CRITICALLY ILL

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 4.—Richard M. Brockett, conductor in the passenger service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, and a former member of the city council, having served the city as alderman, is under treatment at Lawrence hospital, where his condition is reported as critical. Mr. Brockett has long been confined to his home, 51 Ocean avenue, but of late his condition became such that hospital treatment was deemed best if his health was to be restored.

Harry Bell, 26 West Pleasant street, complained to the police because of the act of an automobile driver early this morning causing damage to the lawn in front of the Bell residence. Bell declares that about 3 o'clock the automobile was driven across the lawn and through a hedge.

About every spring or early summer, or as soon as weather becomes such as to bring out automobiles in large number, State or Bank street is excavated for one reason or another, causing an interruption to traffic at a time when conditions should be such as to permit the quickest possible moving of automobiles and street cars. Today an excavation several feet in area and on both sides of Bank street, about 150 feet south of State street, was made and as a result throughout this afternoon and evening congestion of traffic occurred there. Automobiles were held up in such numbers as to extend several blocks, while trolley cars were also prevented from operating through the street until the congestion could be relieved. For several hours Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolman William Manice did no other duty than to remain at that point for the purpose of keeping traffic open. Merchants on Bank street have offered the suggestion that so long as the city authorities have ordered the excavations to be made for the purpose of relieving water supply deficiences, the workmen be maintained on the job during the night, in order that the work may be completed at the earliest possible date and cause a cessation of traffic congestion as soon as possible.

George R. Hempstead, veteran politician of the borough of Groton, is again the borough's chief executive, for the count concluded late last night resulted in Mr. Hempstead being elected on the citizens' borough ticket. warden for his fifth term, defeated Charles B. Lund, pro-borough candidate for the office, by the small majority of three votes. Mr. Lund is an employe of the New London Ship & Engine company and received the support of a majority of the women voters of the borough. The pro-borough ticket was not entirely defeated for four burgesses from among the candidates for that office were elected.

For warden the final count was 220 to 217. Outvoted 160 to 153 by straight tickets, the citizens won the fight for wardenship in split tickets, 67 to 57.

The result of the balloting follows:

Warden—George R. Hempstead, citizen, 220; Charles B. Lund, pro-borough, 217.

Burgesses (six highest elected)—George Marquardt, citizen, 406; Charles A. Ladden, pro-borough, 397; Horace M. Newbury, citizen, 350; Birt G. Fowler, pro-borough, 333; Matthew T. There was a chimney fire in the Goldsmith building, 37 State street, this forenoon when an accumulation of soot became ablaze. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters, the Nameaug Engine company and the Allen Hook and Ladder company responding. A small quantity of chemicals was sufficient, the blaze being quickly extinguished and without damage of consequence.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE HEARS PRACTICAL ADDRESSES

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 4—The May meeting of the chamber of commerce was held at the Colonial club Tuesday night, Lewis Stanton, the president presided. The meeting was preceded by a dinner which was well attended. Much interest was manifested in the two speakers and in the business matters brought up for consideration.

Following the dinner B. A. Spears of the DeVry entertainment service, Boston told the chamber members that any organization needed the enthusiastic cooperation of its own members and that the prosperity of the individual was reflected in the prosperity of the society. He said that cooperation could be attained by showing an individual what there was in it for him Reaction was best obtained by putting over a better entertainment that an individual expected; fraternizing many times arouses enthusiasm and belief in the program which it is desired to get [illegible] Among entertainments named were radio and moving pictures and other entertainment which left a profit with the society which went into it. He spoke of his own experiences, mentioning the publicity of a stunt of his own which figured "Adam and Eve in the Maine Woods". In closing he presented a number of his own writings and urged the use of the "Hammer of Entertainment to Put Together the Boards and Nails," for favorable reaction.

William C. Clarke, general manager of the South county public service company made a short and interesting address on the subject of the gas curb cock shutoff to which he said, his attention had been directed by a written suggestion to the chamber for the prevention of fire. This gas was first used in Westerly in 1864. Fire Chief Egger had told him that but two fires had occurred where gas had escaped in quantities to become ignited. He said that on Main street, where a new service main is being laid, large consumers were to be given curb line shutoffs to be used in case of fire. An appreciative letter is to be sent his company for considering a matter of chamber discussion.

Action taken included the referring of placing dates on old buildings to the Westerly historical society, which is to have its meeting Wednesday night. In the matter of clearing the countryside of signs, it was voted to send a letter to the associated club of the world to learn its attitude on the question. For the benefit of Watch Hill Improvement society people who urged removal, the favorable sentiment of the Westerly chamber was expressed and attention was called to the restrictive clause in the Westerly zoning ordinance recently adopted.

For the repainting need of the Westerly postoffice lobby it was voted to send the chamber's recommendation to the proper authority in Washington, also a copy to Senator Gerry and Congressmen Aldrich and Metcalf, it being learned from Washington congressmen that Westerly had the rating of having the best run postoffice in Rhode Island.

Mosquito extermination was cited as a desirable feature to be presented to those who might become interested in seashore property. A lengthy discussion on the work done along this line in which $1500 was expended and the need of a three-year campaign was shown. Henry C. Rowe of New Haven and Watch Hill was quoted as especially interested and was reported as recommending eradication of the breeding places in Lower Pawcatuck, from which direction the prevailing wind was and the use of tadpoles in permanent waters and oil on marsh land. The president is to name a committee to investigate the need in requirements for such a campaign and to report at the next regular business session.

The June meeting was stated as the date for the annual chamber of commerce banquet.

SAYS ANEURISM MAY LOOK LIKE LUNG TROUBLE

That the difficulty of making correct diagnoses in cases of coughs and wasting is not confined to diseases of the lung, was the contention Monday of the assistant superintendent of Laurel Heights sanatorium, Dr. George L. Bunnell. He claimed that aneurism, that is an acute distention of the main blood vessels of the chest, was frequently supposed to be lung trouble. In proof of his contention, he related many histories and displayed many X-ray pictures of patients at Laurel Heights, the state tuberculosis sanatorium at Shelton, where the monthly meeting of the medical staff of the state sanatoria was held.

That much vaunted thriller de luxe, "The Phantom of the Opera," variously described by the movie critics, all of whom have substantiated the billing, "Greatest mystery thriller of the age," will start today at the Strand Theatre, and the people of Norwich will at last have an opportunity to see Lon Chaney play what is said to be his latest and greatest role at extraordinary low prices.

It is claimed that twenty acres were covered with seventy massive sets for the gigantic production which is adapted from the French mystery romances by Gaston Leroux, sometimes alluded to as France's successor to De Maupassant. The sets are said to include a complete reproduction of the great Paris Opera House, interior, exterior and underground.

Lon Chaney, who plays the "Phantom," is supported by a cast numbering thousands all in the colorful splendor affected by the wealthy and noble of that period with notable extravagance. Many noted principals head the great cast of players. Among them are Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Snitz Edwards, Gibson Gowland, John Sainpolis, Virginia Pearson, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Edith Yorke, Anton Yeverka, Bernard Siegel, Olive Ann Alcorn, Edward Cecil, Alexander Bevani, John Miljuan, Bruce Covington and George B. Palace Theatre

Does friendship between man and man surpass in fineness spirituality and permanence love between man and woman? This is one of the questions of enduring interest to humanity that is raised in "Satan in Sables," the Warner Bros. classic of the Screen, opening on Thursday at the Palace Theatre and starring Lowell Sherman.

In ancient Greece where the intellect held sway and was greatly glorified in, philosophers looked upon love between man and woman much as we are apt today—as the prime motivating force of the world. However, they consider it something purely physical, something inevitable and natural, the decree of nature and nothing particularly redounding to the credit of either person.

Loves or friendships between men were many, based upon similarity of tastes, interests and intellects and were held to be purely of the mind and spirit. Several friendships of this type which could have been called perfect love by these ancient philosophers, such as that of Damon and Pythias, have existed in history.

In "Satan in Sables," this is the kind of love that exists between the brothers, Michael, played by Sherman and Paul, as portrayed by John Harron. Paul, the younger is the one serious interest and love of Michael's prodigal life until Pauline Garon, as Colette, the ramine sunbeam of the Paris dance halls, comes into it. The theme of this Bradley King story, directed by James Flood, is the effect of these two loves in reverberating Michael's wasted life.

POETRY

New England

Hail to the land whereon we tread,
Our fondest boast!
The sepulcure of mighty dead,
The truest hearts that ever bled,
Who sleep on glory's brightest bed,
A fearless host:
No slave is here;—our unchained feet
Walk freely, as the waves that beat
Our coast.

Our fathers crossed the ocean's wave
To seek this shore;
They left behind the coward slave
To welter in his living grave;
With heart's unbent high, steady, brave
They sternly bore
Such toils as meaner souls had quelled;
But souls like these, such toils impelled
To soar.

Hail to the morn when first they stood
On Bunker's height!
And fearless stemmed the invading flood
And wrote our dearest rights in blood,
And mowed in ranks the hireling brood,
In desperate fight:
Oh, 'twas a proud, exulting day,
For even our fallen fortunes lay
In light.

There is no other land like thee,
No dearer shore;
Thou art the shelter of the free;
The home, the port of liberty
Thou hast been and shalt ever be,
Till time is o'er.
Ere I forget to think upon
My land, shall mother curse the son
She bore.

Thou art the firm, unshaken rock,
On which we rest;
And riding from thy hardy stock,
Thy sons the tyrant's frown shall mock
And slavery's galling chains unlock,
And free the oppressed:
All who the wreath of freedom twine
Beneath the shadow of the vine
Are blessed.

We love thy rude and rocky shore,
And here we stand:
Let foreign navies hasten o'er,
And on our heads their fury pour,
And peal their cannon's loudest roar,
And storm our land.
They still shall find our lives are given
To die for home;—and leant on Heaven
Our hand.

—James Gates Percival (1795-1856).

W. W. R. and "Fall River" also copied the poem for the Inquirer.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Butcher—What sort of beef would you like?

Young Bride—Roast beef, please.—The Progressive Grocer.

Do you believe in prenatal influence?

No, I don't. I think young people should marry whom they please.—Life.

George—Well, I answered a question in class today.

Fred—What answer did you give?

George —. Present!—Harvard Lampoon.

Professor—I take pleasure in giving you 81 in mathematics.

Student—Make it 100, sir, and thoroughly enjoy yourself.—Answers, London.

"Are those eggs fresh?" inquired the woman.

"They are very fresh, madam," replied the grocer. "I lay them in that receptacle, myself, every morning."—The Progressive Grocer.

"Mom," said little Bobby, bursting into the house all out of breath, "there's going to be the devil to pay down at the grocers. His wife has got a baby girl and he's had a "boy wanted" sign in the window for a week."—Colgate Banter.

"My mamma's got a nice new scarf," said little Hazel.

"Well, what of that?" replied Dorothy. "My mamma's got a half-dozer scarfs."

"Yes, but my mamma's scarf is hand painted," said Hazel.

"Oh, gee, that's nothin'!" rejoined Dorothy, "our whole house is."—Chicago News.

Nell—It's an opal ring Mr. Cheapside gave me.

Belle (examining it)—Er—do you like it?

Nell—Yes, but there's that old superstition, you know. I'm afraid it will bring me bad luck.

Belle—Don't worry. The worst thing this could bring you would be an imitation of bad luck.—Edinburg Scotsman.

KALEIDOSCOPE

The roof of a flat-topped building in Washington D. C. is being used as a parking area for automobiles.

Suing George Neuman for breach of promise Fraulein Emma Trondheim, of Berlin, Germany, demanded compensation for the evening she had given him.

Need for sanitary regulations in garages is shown by the fact that lead is present in garage dust, and carbon monoxide is often present in the air in dangerous quantities.

A nation-wide study of noises made by street cars, trains and other sources of loud noise, is planned by the national safety council, to investigate their effect on sleep, hearing and health in general.

Each squardon of Italy's air fleet will be equipped with large type ambulance airplanes. These aerial ambulances are designed to carry six comfortable hospital stretchers in a cabin ventilated with compressed air tubes to prevent draughts.

So severely cold was March weather at Saranac Lake, N. Y., that rain went to roost with hens. When Mrs. Charles Marshal, a North Elba farmer's wife fearing that her poultry might be chilled, visited her henhouse just after dark, the light of the lantern revealed rain cuddling closely to the hens.

The mideast fair, held with much success in the city of Tel Aviv, Palestine, last year, was reopened in Tel Aviv by the British high commissioner on March 26, 1926. The newly-established Palestine industries are reported to be making an effort to have their goods well represented, and according to local reports, special interest is being shown in the fact that the first pianos manufactured in Palestine are exhibited.

One of the largest frog farms in the country is under construction near Denton, Tex. Several dams are being built and a low, swampy region, already plentiful with frogs, is being further stocked. The frogs will be raised for Texas and other markets. One of the preliminary operations was the draining of the lakes to get rid of fish, a menace to frogs. Several miles of fence will be built round the lakes to keep out snakes, another enemy of frogs. The several lakes will be used for frogs of different ages.

At a recent trial in a California city a young woman was suing for damages following injuries suffered in a street car accident. A former motorman testified that a car traveling 90 miles an hour could be stopped in a space of 20 feet. The young woman's counsel denied vehemently the former motorman's statement. Thereupon the judge and jury went to the scene of the accident and gave him a chance to demonstrate. A special speedometer, consisting of a wheel attached to the side of the car, was used in the test, says Popular Science Monthly. Measurements made by this instrument showed that the best the driver could do, with the car going 20 miles an hour, was to stop the car in a space of 114 feet.

STOCK MARKET FIRM

NEW YORK, May 4—(AP)—Speculators for the decline failed today in their effort to bring about another unsettlement in stock prices as a result of the general strike in Great Britain. Prices were carried down 1 to 3 points in the first outbreak of selling, but the reaction did not bring out any appreciable volume of forced or urgent liquidation and prices rallied briskly during the afternoon.

Closing quotations were generally higher, a long list of active issues showing net gains of 1 to 6 points on the day. Total sales were 1,067,800 shares, as compared with 1,568,700 yesterday.

Wheat prices were the hardest hit by the strike news, breaking 3 1-2 to nearly 4 1-2 cents a bushel, and then rallying slightly. May wheat closed at $1.58 1-4 a bushel after having sold down to $1.56 3-4. Cotton held relatively steady. Foreign exchanges were heavy although sterling was strongly supported by buying reported to be for the account of the British government. French and Belgian francs touched new low levels at 3.22 and 3.20 cents, respectively.

The calmness with which the London markets accepted the strike, the continuation of easy money rates and the constructive nature of most of the day's domestic business and earnings reports helped to restore confidence in the market. There seemed to be a rather general opinion in financial circles that the strike would be of short duration and that any adverse effect on our business with Great Britain would be compensated by increased business in other countries particularly those where British competition is a serious factor.

Standard industrials and rails took a prominent part in the afternoon rally. U. S. Steel common touched 123 1-2 and then eased slightly for a net gain of 1 1-4 points on the day, after having sold down to 120 3-4 during the morning. General Electric rallied from a low of 313 to 318 1-2 closing at 317 1-4 for a net gain of 2 1-4. American Smelting, Consolidated Gas, Davidson Chemical, Famous Players, Montgomery Ward, Postum Cereal, Pullman, Radio Corporation, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Ward Baking B, White Motors and Woolworth were among the many issues to close 1 to nearly 2 points higher Sinas-Sheffield Steel was run up six points to 118 on buying influenced by reports of special developments favorable to stockholders. Du Pont jumped over 4 points to 215.

Oils were in steady demand as a result of recent constructive trade developments. These included the publication of statistics showing an increase of 35 per cent. in the consumption of gasoline in March and predictions that the net earnings of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey would exceed $100,000,000 and the announcement that gasoline stocks on April 1 represented only 73 days supply against 81 on that date last year. Atlantic Refining rallied 3 points to 116 1-2 and Colorado Fuel, General Asphalt, Mid Continent and Panhandle producers all advanced a point or two.

High grade rails, large blocks of which are held abroad were heavy during the morning, but rallied with the rest of the list during the afternoon. Atlantic Coast Line advanced 2 1-2 points to 199 and Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, Pere Marquette and some of the lower priced issues such as St. Paul preferred and Western Pacific closed a point or two higher.

Call money held steady at 3 1-2 per cent all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Sterling cables held firm around 4.85 1-2. Norwegian krone broke nearly 15 points to 21.72 cents, but the recessions in the other European currencies was nominal.

STATE PRISON SENTENCE GIVEN GLADYS LORRAINE FOR COAT THEFT

Gladys Lorraine, alias Marie Boyd, was in tears in the criminal superior court at New London Tuesday morning when she pleaded guilty to larceny of a fur coat last fall from the Caron Specialty Shop in this city. After listening to State Attorney Arthur M. Brown's presentation of the case and a plea for the woman by Public Defender Charles L. Stewart, Judge Newell Jennings sentenced her to not less than one year nor more than five in state's prison.

The Lorraine girl's case came up on the opening day of the May term of the criminal superior court. Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth offered prayer at the opening of court.

In moving for sentence for the Lorraine girl, State Attorney Brown informed the court that the accused had a record she being wanted in Worcester and Boston, Mass., for shop-lifting. According to the state's attorney, she stole a fur coat from Caron's Specialty Shop in this city and was arrested, when the police found the stolen coat upon her person beneath another coat. He said she was 24 years old, and one of a family of 10 children. The state's attorney told of her being bound over to the January term of the superior court under bonds of $2,500. He said she did not appear at that time, forfeiting her bond. The state's attorney said she was found at her home in Springfield, Mass., brought back to this county, the bond being reopened. Since, he said, she has been in jail.

Public Defender Stewart, in her defense, said that during the occurrence in the Norwich store, she was in company with one Hazel Ellis, whom he said actually stole the coat, later giving it to the Lorraine woman. He presented a strong plea for the girl following which Judge Jennings imposed the prison sentence.

Year in Jail

John Quinn of New London, a cripple, pleaded guilty to keeping liquor with intent to sell and was sentenced to not less than one year nor more than two years in state prison. Several months ago, he was convicted of a similar offense in the court of common pleas, and after being given a jail sentence, attempted to commit suicide in the outer office of the court house.

For Automobile Thefts

Darwin Morse of Lyme, pleaded guilty to the theft of a motor vehicle and was sentenced to not less than one year nor more than 10 years in state prison. Morse was accused of having stolen two automobiles and was implicated in a number of breaks. Judge Jennings, in pronouncing sentence, told the accused that if his condition could, both physical and psychological, be cured, steps would be taken to have it done at the prison as early as possible, so that if he were safe to be released such would be done. However, the court told him that if he could not be cured he would be given a long enough sentence for the good of the public and also himself.

Nine Months in Jail

Nine months in jail without costs was given Arthur Dunmire of Waterford, charged with statutory manslaughter, in connection with the death of Roy Nelson, an occupant of his automobile during a fatal trip, caused by all but one of the occupants being intoxicated, according to State's Attorney Brown.

Public Defender Stewart spoke for Dunmire and in concluding asked that the three months already spent in jail by the accused in awaiting trial be taken into consideration. Attorney Stewart also informed the court that in the accident Dunmire received a fractured pelvis bone, which necessitated a long time in the hospital. Dunmire, who is 35 years of age, pleaded guilty.

James Sentenced

Thomas Benjamin James, alias Thomas James, negro at one time a bell-hop, charged with assault with intent to commit statutory rape was sentenced by Judge Jennings to one year in jail, without costs. James pleaded guilty to the charge, which involved a 15-year-old New London white girl who had been living with the negro and his wife. He was defended by Public Defender Stewart.

Jail Sentence Suspended

Edward McClue, of Groton, a World war veteran, decorated twice for bravery in France, thanked Judge Jennings when the latter suspended the execution of a six months' jail sentence and placed him under supervision of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield for one year. McClue, 34, pleaded guilty to indecent assault on an 11 year old boy. State's Attorney Brown said that the ex-soldier committed only a "technical assault" and the circumstances surrounding the offense were such as to entitle McClue to consideration. Public Defender Stewart appeared for the young man, saying among other things, that McClue was for some time listed among the dead, he being one of but a few survivors of his regiment following a terrific battle in France. This experience might have somewhat weakened McClue's mind, said Attorney Stewart. McClue was also ordered to pay the costs of court and probation.

Three Months For Griswold Man

Michael Dwyer of Griswold was committed to jail for three months on a charge of statutory burglary. The state's attorney told the court that he went to school with Dwyer and that the latter, when sober was an honest citizen and a good worker. He said that Dwyer had a long record of intoxication offenses and that this time he entered a hardware store to get some denatured alcohol to drink.

Put On Probation

Because he had a wife and nine children to care for and because it was his first offense, Burdette Doubleday of Colchester, had the execution of a not less than two nor more than five year term in state's prison suspended and he was placed on probation under Probation Officer Mansfield for one year. He pleaded guilty to statutory rape. Public Defender Stewart appeared for the accused.

The cases of Mrs. Anna M. Chapman, of Old Lyme, and Harry Mather of the same place, charged with adultery, were noted upon the recommendations of the state's attorney. Mather had been in jail since last September.

Kearney Case Put Over

The case of Mary Kearney of this city, former cashier of the Plaut-Cadden Co., charged with embezzlement of $1,000, was continued at the request of the state's attorney.

The cases of Zezes Costules of Norwich and John Vallas, also of that city, both charged with arson in connection with a fire at the new Olympia Candy Kitchen, were continued at the request of the state's attorney, who said that the real firebug had not yet been caught but was liable to be eventually. He said that in his opinion the accused should not stand trial until the firebug was apprehended.

In Liquor Case

The case of Rose Behnke, charged with violation of the liquor law, was nolled at the request of State Attorney Brown, he stating that there was insufficient evidence to convict.

The case of Joseph Simborski of Norwich, charged with sodomy, was also continued. It is believed by the Norwich police authorities that Simborski is the man who is to blame for the mutilation of a number of cattle in this vicinity. Since he has been in jail, the mutilations have ceased.

Schleifer Case Nolled

The case of Ernest Schleifer, charged with the sabotage in connection with an alleged speech before the shopmen of the New Haven railroad some time ago, was nolled. State Attorney Brown said that the case had remained on the docket at the request of the state's attorney for New Haven county, pending the outcome of the accused's appeal to the supreme court from his conviction in the latter county. The state's attorney said that the supreme court had sustained his appeal and therefore he recommended the nolle.

NORWICH TOWN LECTURE ON HOLY LAND TRAVELS

Under the auspices of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, of the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, an exceptionally large and interested audience attended the illustrated lecture with stereopticon views, in the auditorium of the chapel Sunday evening, given by Miss Alice W. Cogswell and Miss Edith M. Bliss, on their trip to the Holy Land.

Ralph H. Marsh presided and introduced the speakers. Miss Bernice Underwood, soprano, sang "Galilee, Bright Galilee." Miss Louise Sterry played the piano accompaniment.

The interesting addresses, the hour being divided between the two speakers and the beautifully colored slides held the close attention of the audience, which included a large delegation from the First Methodist Episcopal church, upon special invitation.

Miss Cogswell told of the trip from Egypt through the desert with glimpses now and then of oasis with picturesque bedouins and their camels. Leaving the desert, the train made the steep ascent of the Judean Hills to Jerusalem, which is situated two thousand feet above sea level. The ancient walls with their several gates are an interesting feature of the city. The party entered by the Jaffa Gate. David street, the heart of the native quarter was visited, also the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the traditional site of the crucifixion and burial of our Lord. Though not considered authentic now, the spot has been revered for so many centuries, it has an historic interest, at least. The temple area, covering the summit of Mt. Moriah, on which now stands the Mosque of Omar, is one of the most authentic spots in Palestine, reverenced alike by Jew, Christian and Mohammedan. The Mountain of Olives and Garden of Gethsemane are especially sacred to Christians.

Bethany, the home of Mary and Martha, was visited. From here the road leads down to Jericho, and truly it is down, for in 21 miles there is a descent of four thousand feet to the level of the Dead Sea. The Jordan, at about the place of Christ's baptism, was seen. Bethlehem, the birthplace of our Lord was also visited, the road leading past the tomb of Rachel and the fields of Boaz.

Miss Bliss told of the trip through Samaria and Galilee. The party left Jerusalem by the Damascus Gate, so named for the road which begins at this point, over which travellers to the north have passed through unnumbered centuries. Just outside the gate is the hill called Gordon's Calvary, named for General Gordon, who advanced the theory that this is the true Golgotha. There are several reasons why the so-called Garden Tomb at its foot may have been the place where Joseph of Arimathea laid the body of Jesus.

Nearing Gerizim and Ebal, the Mountains of Blessing and Cursing, the party came to Jacob's Well, associated with Christ's memorable conversation with the Woman of Samaria. The Plain of Dothan, where Joseph was sold by his brethern, was crossed, and further on the beautiful Plain of Esdraelon, the battleground of many nations, was traversed. Mt. Tabor, considered by many to have been the site of the Transfiguration, though others give Mt. Hermon that distinction, was seen to the right, after which Nazareth, the boyhood home of Jesus, was soon reached. The party spent the night here at a Hospice. The next day the trip was continued to Tiberias, passing on the way Cana of Galilee, and the Horns of Hattin supposed to be the Mount of the Beatitudes. Crossing the Lake of Galilee the party visited the site of Capernaum, for the place, as Christ predicted, is in ruins. Returning to Nazareth the party motored to Haifa where they were met by their steamer. About 60 views were shown of the places visited.

TIMELY LOCAL TOPICS IN C. OF C. MONTHLY LETTER

A proposed aviation field here, Slater Memorial museum, the Thames river, credit bureau and the local broadcasting station are the topics touched on in the monthly membership letter of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce which has been mailed out to the members of the chamber by Secretary John J. O'Rourke. The letter follows:

Aviation Field—The question of the establishment of an aviation field in Norwich was discussed with considerable interest at the April meeting on April 20th. Major Ira Longanecker, commander of the Boston aviation field, was the speaker. He explained the development possibilities of the commercial airships; the desire of the federal government to establish landing fields about every 20 miles on the air lane courses; the essentials of the field, its equipment, its supervision, and its location.

Major Longanecker was shown every known available location for a field in Norwich and its immediate surroundings during his visit. The ideal field is a mile square, with firm level ground. This type of land provides a four way landing field, that is, airplanes can land in any direction of wind, without surrounding obstructions. Any other kind of field provides only for two way landing possibilities, which means that flights or stops can be accomplished only in two directions. The latter type of aviation field is of course limited in its possibilities and utility.

Norwich is not blessed with a number of available locations such as are adaptable. Indeed the number of such locations is very limited. The committee in charge of this matter will make an investigation of our local possibilities and in due time make its report to the directors. The committe is composed as follows: Willis Austin, chairman; Rev. A. H. Abbott; Weston W. Goodnow; Walter F. Lester; James E. Roantree.

Slate Memorial Museum—It would be interesting to know how many local persons have ever visited this excellent museum in Slater hall. Perhaps it is safe to state that a very large number of our people do not even know it exists. The following excerpts from the "Nation" of August 16, 1888 is interesting: —"Persons visiting the beautiful city of Norwich a few months hence will find there a museum of fine arts of a kind which every big town or little city might possess, given only sufficient knowledge and good taste. W. A. Slate has been the good genius to bestow this boon upon the city of Norwich, and Edward Robinson of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, has, to his great credit, had sole charge of the selection and arrangements. There are now about 150 important classical sculptures in place, and more are to come."

Not every city has been blessed with the wonderful gift such as bestowed by Mr. Slater. The museum is a valuable asset to Norwich and the general public should avail themselves of this exhibit to a far greater degree than has been shown.

On May 28th, the art school connected with the Norwich Free Academy will commence an exhibition of the work done by the students of the school. It is a revelation to those of us who have made a visit to the school to see the quality of art work accomplished by the students. The general public should avail themselves of this special opportunity to visit the art museum and the art school. The museum has recently been renovated and is under the capable direction of Mrs Ozias Dodge.

Thames River—The favorable report of the rivers and harbor committee of congress in approving the board of army engineers appropriation of $325,000 for deepening of the Thames river channel from Allyn's Point to Norwich, and $20,000 for annual maintenance of the channel is a genuine source of gratification to those interested in the development of Norwich. One wonders too what Springfield or Worcester or any other large inland city would give to have a navigable river at their doors. The results of this improvement may not be apparent at once but it is bound to prove a tremendous asset to the future welfare and growth of Norwich.

Credit Bureau——This bureau is a co-operative clearing house of credit information which seeks, on one hand, to elevate the credit character of a community by establishing credit information for people who meet their obligations, and on the other hand, to protect its members against poor credit risks.

There are about 600 credit bureaus, one in each city, throughout the United States and a number in Canada. Every large city and some smaller ones throughout New England and New York state has its credit bureau for the exchange of credit information. Contrary to some opinions credit ratings are not established by credit bureaus. The customers existing account on the books of the merchant is the sole basis of information.

During the past several years 24 local business houses have maintained a credit exchange. Meetings are held weekly and accounts 90 days or over have been discussed. Many inquiries regarding the paying habits of local people have been answered, by the local exchange, to nearly all the credit bureaus of the large New England cities and in New York state, during the past few years.

Recently, the Norwich Credit Rating bureau, was incorporated with $1,000 paid in capital and 19 shareholders. The office will be in the chamber of commerce headquarters, Thayer building, and at least one permanent manager will be in charge of the bureaus office and business. Alfred Moreau, manager and organizer of the Hartford credit bureau, will supervise the work of installation and the operation for a year, through regular visits to the local bureau. The local bureau will be affiliated with the National Retail Credit Mens association and will have its powerful assistance in locating "skips" throughout the United States. Credit bureaus safeguard a customers credit, and warn members against the customer who evades his obligations, not only in Norwich, but elsewhere.

Broadcasting Station—The committee appointed several months ago to look into the question of the establishment of a local permanent broadcasting station provided a temporary arrangement for a station as a test of local public sentiment and support. The cost of erecting broadcasting towers, studio, station and operating expenses is very large. In addition to this, the federal government refuses to grant any more licenses to operate these stations. Official notices of good receptions of local programs were received from Halifax, Nova Scotia, all the New England states, New York state, and Pennsylvania. The lack of public financial support caused the suspension of the station.

NAMES CRUICKSHANK TO SUCCEED C. E. CARPENTER

William H. Cruickshank of No. 121 Broadway, named a member of the city gas and electrical commission by Mayor Miss R. Waters at the May meeting of the court of common council, Monday evening, will take office May 15th for a period of five years. Mr Cruickshank, is a member of the Reid and Hughes company, The Boston store, with which company he has been connected for a number of years. Mr. Cruickshank is well known throughout the city and town and his appointment will be a valuable addition to the board. He succeeds C. Edward Carpenter whose term expires May 15th.

FINED IN COURT FOR ABUSING HORSE

Following a hearing in chambers Tuesday morning Joseph Smotvich, local peddler, was fined $15 and costs and given a suspended 15 day jail sentence by Judge Arthur F. Libby. The jail sentence is suspended for one year. Smotvich was found guilty of abusing a horse. He was given a severe reprimand by Judge Libby who informed him that if he appears before the court again within a year he will be sent to jail. Smotvich overloaded his team and left the horse out in the cold, unprotected, etc. He parted with the sum of $20 81 which he paid over to the court clerk.

It was Humane Officer F. H. Wyant who summoned the man to court, the complaint being made by Mrs. E. W. Perkins.

MADAM KNIGHT'S JOURNAL IS QUOTED IN NEW YORK

Early American jewelry, a number of intimate personal possessions of Americans of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries are among the recent accessions of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, placed on view in the American wing.

Among these articles of personal adornment are a pair of paste and enamel shoe buckles and a pair of gold sleeve buttons from the Van Cortlandt family, two gold mourning rings of the middle of the eighteenth century, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Moore and a little gold snuff-box, presented to Chief Justice John Jay in 1784.

Among those of New England provenance are a little pair of gold cuff links which bear the mark of Paul Revere, whose handiwork was not confined to silver.

According to a recent number of The Bulletin, the official publication of the museum, much jewelry was worn by both men and women of the eighteenth century. The love of gay jewelry was brought to New Amsterdam by its Dutch settlers and mention is made of an excerpt from the journal of Madam Sarah Knight, of Norwich, who rode from Boston to New York of those days. But the Dutch, especially the middling sort, differed from the English women in their dress.

She tells of the Dutch women wearing head bands set with large jewels, their fingers hooped with rings, and pendants in their ears.

George W. Poor, who spent several summers with his family at the Broadway cottages, Lord's Point, reached his 81st birthday April 27. He is now visiting his daughter, Mrs. C. L. Fairinger, in Waban, Mass., having returned recently from Florida.

BRITISH NATION IS MEETING CONFLICT WITH UNION LABOR QUIETLY AND CALMLY

Subjects Are Following Premier Baldwin's Advice, "Keep Steady"—The Government is Making Efforts to Reestablish Railway, and Other Transportation Lines in Order to Maintain Essential Services of Supply—Premier Baldwin Reiterates That No Government in Any Circumstances Could Ever Yield to a General Strike—Predictions Are Made in Some Quarters That the General Strike Would Be Ended by Monday.

LONDON, May 5.—(AP)—The close of the second day of Great Britain's vast industrial upheaval found the country on the whole following out Premier Baldwin's advice—"Keep steady."

London endured a drizzling rain, and a midway fog, which overhung the city, turned day into night and the holiday spirit of yesterday into phlegmatic sullenness on the part of many workers.

But late in the afternoon the skies brightened, and evening added just a faint ray of hope that tomorrow may bring developments for renewed negotiations between the government and the trade unions.

Instances of isolated rioting and disturbances were features of the sparse news bulletins and handbill newspapers, but these incidents seem almost negligible when the vital issues and potential forces involved in the greatest industrial struggle of modern times are considered.

From widely separated points in the metropolis and the provinces come reports of a few autobusses wrecked and improvised tram services attacked by strikers, but many of such acts are attributed by the police themselves to "hooliganism."

News from the coal mining area is particularly scarce, but such as has been received indicates unusual, and perhaps unexpected, calmness.

Both Sides Standing Off

The official position of the strike has reached a point tonight where both sides are standing off, demanding that the other must make the first move to reopen the negotiations, that came to an end dramatically Sunday night and stalled the economic life of the country.

In the meantime both government and workers are consolidating their positions like great opposing armies.

The government is bending every effort to reestablish railway, intercoastal and municipal transport in order to maintain essential services of supply, while the trades union congress is devoting its energies to maintaining solidarity in organized labor ranks.

Claims Made by Both Sides

In setting forth the situation to the press, the government's spokesman at the admiralty declared that the nation was meeting the crisis quietly and calmly, with food and fuel supplies guaranteed for many weeks; an official of the trades union congress at Eccleston square, labor headquarters, announced that the railway tie-up was the most complete in the history of Great Britain and that the striking men and their women folk were standing solidly together for the cause of labor.

Based on various conferences held this evening, one of which was believed to be between Ramsay Macdonald, A. J. Cook and Herbert Smith, labor leaders, there were predictions in some quarters of possible important developments. One was that the general strike would be ended by Monday.

Striving for Settlement

Nevertheless there is no precise information on the subject, although it is known that such men as Ramsay Macdonald are striving with might and main to bring about a settlement, the former labor premier even imploring the house of commons, prior to its adjournment, to "do something toward a settlement."

A sensational incident of the day was a raid by Scotland yard on the office of the Daily Herald, the labor organ, which had undertaken the printing of the British Workers, a paper issued by the trades union congress to offset the British Gazette, published by the government.

The raid caused considerable excitement, but the authorities withdrew the embargo after a sample copy of "The British Worker" had been examined.

Firm Stand by Government

Throughout the afternoon the opposing councils of war faced each across the narrow floor of the house of commons. With characteristic firmness and quietness Premier Baldwin met all approaches from the labor benches for the reopening of the parleys, regarding the coal miners dispute, with the declaration that no government in any circumstance could ever yield to a general strike. The moment it was officially withdrawn unconditionally the government was prepared to resume negotiations.

Former Premier Lloyd George joined the laborites in deploring the precipitancy shown in breaking off the negotiation, which he characterized as a grave error. Ramsay Macdonald bowed the cabinet not to remain adamant, but to make some concessions in order to get the government and the trades union congress around the conference table.

For the first time the debate brought out how slight a touch was needed to sever the thread of negotiations and send the sword of a general strike crashing on the heads of the British people. It was the "overt act" of a few printers in the Daily Mail plant, who, acting without authority of the unions' representatives, disagreed with an editorial and stopped the machinery of the paper, preventing its publication.

The debate tended to center more and more on the precise reasons of the breakdown of the negotiations Sunday night, and after a strong appeal by Lord Hugh Cecil for dispassionate consideration of all the circumstances, J. H. Thomas rose and said that on Sunday night the negotiating committee of the trades union congress had accepted a formula drawn by the prime minister's own hand and had left to discuss it with miners in an adjoining room, when they received the government's decision to terminate the parleys.

Premier Baldwin's Contention

Premier Baldwin intervened to explain that all the time he had entertained doubts about the wisdom of continuing negotiations under the threat of a general strike, and that when news was received, that the first steps toward this end had been taken, namely, interference with the expression of opinion in the press, the government decided that the conferences could not continue.

Ramsay Macdonald, in a further plea for bringing the government and the trades union committee together again, said that after receiving the government's final communication Sunday night the trades union congress and miners sent a committee from their room to the prime minister's room to discuss the situation. When the committee arrived, Mr. Macdonald declared dramatically, they found the door locked and the room in darkness.

In consequence of this disclosure, members of the house of commons repeatedly demanded to know the terms of the formula mentioned, and wherther the miners had accepted since the breakdown, but information on this point was not forthcoming.

Premier Baldwin insisted that the negotiations were terminated because of the actual beginning of a general strike and declared they could be reopened as soon as the strike orders were officially withdrawn.

The laborite, James Maxton, Glasgow, asserted that the strike had been precipitated because the dignity of a great newspaper proprietor had been injured. It was disgraceful that the whole nation's services should be stopped and that millions should suffer because of this.

Gov't Confident of Winning

Confidence that it will win the great conflict now testing the nation was the keynote of the government's communique to the press. This communique stated that distribution of food and fuel was being carried on methodically and that rail transport was recovering gradually and was already in better shape than during the crisis of 1919. Power and light were adequately maintained, with electric stations manned by efficient technical volunteers. More volunteers had been registered as special constables; the nation was bearing its discontents with fortitude and good temper, and no troops had been called upon except for general protection.

GENERAL STRIKE TAKEN AS CHALLENGE TO PARLIAMENT

LONDON, May 5.—(AP)—"The general strike is a challenge to parliament and is the road to anarchy and ruin," the British prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, thus characterizes the vast labor movement in support of the miners' strike, in a message printed by the official government paper, the British Gazette.

He calls upon all good citizens to stand behind the government "to preserve the liberties and privileges of the people of the British Isles."

In the house of commons the prime minister made the unequivocal declaration that the general strike order must be withdrawn before the government would resume negotiations for industrial peace.

Prime Minister's Message

The prime minister's message said: "Constitutional government is being attacked. Let all good citizens, whose livelihood and labor have thus been put in peril, bear with fortitude and patience the hardships with which they have been so suddenly confronted.

"Stand behind the government, who are doing their part, confident that you will co-operate in the measures they have undertaken to preserve the liberties and privileges of the people of these islands. The laws of England are the peoples' birthright. The laws are in your keeping. You have made parliament their guardian. The general strike is a challenge to parliament and is the road to anarchy and ruin.

(Signed) "STANLEY BALDWIN."

Success in all quarters was reported by the spokesman for the trades union congress at the press conference tonight. The announcement was made concerning the railways that there never had been so complete compliance with strike orders.

The spokesman declared that the trades union congress had received resolutions of support from the French confederation, as well as the Dutch, Canadian, American and Irish organizations and the international transport workers.

LONDON MAIL HAS TWO PAGE TYPESCRIPT EDITION

LONDON, May 5.—(AP)—The Daily Mail, which has been unable to print since Sunday because of a strike of mechanical workers who objected to an editorial, reappeared this afternoon in a two page typescript edition.

The Daily Mail says there are now two governments in Great Britain; one the lawful government representing 40,000,000 persons and the other "an unconstitutional, revolutionary government representing 2,000,000 trade unionists."

The paper declares that one of these governments must go. "We are not going to see J. H. Thomas and Ramsay MacDonald, imitating the work of Lenin and Trotsky here," the Daily Mail says of the labor leaders. "Nor will the British people—which is entirely different from the pathetic, submissive Mujiks of Russia—submit to such an odious tyranny."

The British Worker, made its debut in appearance tonight after the issue had been passed by Scotland Yard men.

"From 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 workers have ceased work," it declared. This is the first official utterance from labor quarters as to the exact number of strikers.

The paper adds: "The government has announced by wireless that 30,000 volunteers have registered, expressing a willingness to take the strikers' places. It doesn't seem enough."

The British Worker asserts that the cabinet has brought out a newspaper (The British Gazette) which is "crudely biased and unfair to the workers."

While the Worker explains that the trades union congress does not complain of the Government Journal, it feels it must issue its own paper to give the labor movement and nation "a true record of events."

SINCLAIR LEWIS DECLINES TO ACCEPT PULITZER PRIZE

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Sinclair Lewis today refused to accept the $1,000 pulitzer prize for his novel "Arrowsmith."

Asserting that all prizes, like all ties, are dangerous, and that the pulitzer prize is "peculiarly objectionable". He wrote the award committee that he considered by such awards "every compulsion is put upon writers to become safe, polite, obedient and sterile."

He wrote that although it was generally believed the prize was given to the novel of greatest literary merit, the terms of the award actually called for selection of the book "best presenting the wholesome atmosphere of American life, and the highest standard of American manners and manhood."

"This phrase, if it means anything at all" he wrote, "would appear to mean that the appraisal of the novels shall be made not according to their actual literary merit but in obedience to whatever code of good form may chance to be popular at the moment."

Warden Stabbed to Death By Convicts

Seven Escaped in Prison Auto From Great Steel Modern Prison at Stateville, Illinois.

STATESVILLE, Ills., May 5.—(AP)—Seven Chicago convicts serving long terms in the new state penitentiary here, made their escape today after killing a deputy warden, wounding a guard and forcing another guard, under penalty of death, to conduct them through the outer gates.

They kidnapped the escort guard and escaped in a prison automobile which a trusty was forced to drive. Later the guard and trusty were found handcuffed to trees in a woods near Ottawa, Illinois.

Four of the prisoners who escaped were serving sentences for murder and three of them ten years to life for robbery.

Peter M. Klein, a deputy warden, was stabbed to death in the first escape from the new penitentiary. Jacob Judnick, a guard, was stabbed while John Keeley, another guard, and James Cassidy, a trusty, were kidnapped.

The prisoners, who apparently had carefully planned their break, had been summoned to the deputy warden's quarters in the solitary cell house for disciplining. There they set upon Kline and after inflicting fatal wounds attacked Judnick when he appeared and resisted. They locked Klein and Judnick in the solitary confinement building where they were found some time later by guards who were forced to cut through doors to reach them.

Keely after being released at Ottawa told of the escape.

"The captain of guards told me the deputy warden wanted to see me," he said. "I went to the solitary cell house and had just stepped in the door when seven prisoners armed with knives confronted me. They took me into another room where the deputy warden lay dead. They told me they were going to kill me and put my body on top of his. I told them there was no way out. They told me that if I would open the solitary cell house door they would not hurt anyone else, so I opened the door. They wanted to get another man out, but I told them I did not have the keys so they took some handcuffs and came out.

"They told me to take them to the south gate and threatened to kill me if I refused. They said if I refused they intended to kill me and call Captain Kelly. If he refused they intended to kill him and call Captain Hammermeister. So I finally agreed to take them to the south gate. At the gate the gateman and Captain Hammermeister both asked where I was taking the men to work. I did not answer and tried to let them see a bloody finger, thinking they would become suspicious, but they passed us out.

"Cassidy, the trusty who drives Klein's automobile, was summoned and they shoved me in the car. They were going to kill Cassidy who was driving but I persuaded them not to. Near Morris two of the men left the car. The other five turned south near Marseilles and when they had reached a woods near Ottawa, took Cassidy and me into the woods and handcuffed us to two trees about 50 feet apart.

We kept shouting for help for about three hours and finally some one notified the sheriff."

All of the convicts had been received at the penitentiary since 1922. After the escape, all of the prisoners were locked in their cells and there was no indication of further trouble.

Warden John L. Whitman started an immediate investigation and Chauncey M. Jenkins of the state department of public welfare left Springfield for Stateville to assist in the inquiry. Deputy sheriffs within a radius of 100 miles of Stateville were notified and were patrolling roads while the Illinois Bankers' association notified their vigilance committees to watch for the convicts.

Judnick, the wounded guard, said he was outside Klein's office and that his suspicions were not aroused until the convicts rushed out and attacked him.

SCOTT RETURNS TO CHICAGO TO STAND TRIAL FOR MURDER

CHICAGO, May 5.—(AP)—Robert Scott, returned here from a California penitentiary to stand trial for the murder of a drug clerk in a holdup two years ago, tonight was found guilty by a jury in less than 25 minutes on a charge of robbing another pharmacy at about the same time.

The state, which asked for the removal of Scott to Chicago on the murder charge, elected to try him first for robbery. Members of the jury said they did not even take a formal vote.

Scott laughed when the verdict was read and his father, Thomas Scott, called the decision a "frame-up."

Earlier in the day Scott had testified in his own defense. He was asked only two questions, whether he committed the robbery and whether he was in the drug store the night of the robbery, and replied in the negative.

Russell Scott, brother, was found guilty of the murder of the drug clerk, sentenced to be hanged and escaped the gallows several times by a margin of a few hours and finally was found insane and is now in an asylum. the death penalty to be carried out if he regains his sanity.

POLICE GUARDING HOME OF MRS. CURTIS GUILD

BOSTON, May 5.—(AP)—A police guard was maintained today at the home of Mrs. Curtis Guild, widow of a former governor of Massachusetts, after a trap set for the author of a letter threatening Mrs. Guild with death failed of its purpose. The writer of the letter demanded $100,000 on the ground that the person to whom it was addressed "could afford to give that amount."

In accordance with the terms of the anonymous letter, a police woman disguised to resemble Mrs. Guild was driven last night to the place where the money was to be delivered, the police made public today. Police Inspector George Augusta acted as chauffeur of the Guild automobile for the occasion, and several detectives were concealed about the remote spot in South Boston, near the army base, specified by the letter-writer. A package purporting to contain the money "in bills of large denomination" was in the hands of Policewoman Irene McAuliffe, ready for delivery, but no claimant appeared.

LITTLE INTERFERENCE WITH TRANS-ALANTIC SHIPPING

An Incipient Break in the Engine Room Crew of the Steamship Arabic Was Sternly Suppressed—46 Men Attempted to Rush the Deck Shortly Before Sailing—They Abandoned Their Purpose When They Saw the Guard—Crew Was Complete as the Liner Left Quarantine.

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—The harbor here today felt the first repercussion of Great Britain's two day old strike, when a firm hand was necessary to quell a disturbance among the engine room "black gang" on the Arabic.

A check-up of the crew this morning showed 14 desertions, which the White Star Line, owners of the vessel, said was not unusual. Fourteen men were sent to take the vacant places and six more men added to relieve the crew of extra work because of possible inefficiency of the new members.

Shortly before sailing, reports came above decks of ominous words in the engine room. Gangplanks immediately were guarded. When 46 men of the "black gang" rushed on deck they saw the guard and decided it would be better not to rush the line. Three spokesmen then sought a conference with the captain.

These demanded written agreements that no man would be required to do more than eight hours work in each 24, because of an impression the crew was short. This was refused, as being covered in the articles.

Captain Davies was instructed by the company to take the ship to Quarantine and there "count noses," and a large crowd saw the ship go down the stream with the "black boys" still above board.

As the Arabic left Quarantine, Captain Davies reported to his line by wireless that has crew was complete.

After the ship had passed beyond Sandy Hook and was well out from the American coast on its way to England, Captain Davies sent a wireless to The Associated Press saying: "Conditions on board are normal."

No further action by the men was expected as under maritime regulations such actions on the sea constitute mutiny, which carries a severe penalty under British law.

The Orca and Aquitania, both British vessels, departed in a routine manner today.

The President Harding, of the United States Lone, left port on her voyage to Plymouth, England, with instructions to keep on to Southampton if strike conditions on her arrival at Plymouth interfere with the discharge of the vessel. Similar instructions were wirelessed to the liner Republic now at sea.

A cable was received today from the London agents of the line stating that all European agents of the line were cooperating in dispatching the line's vessel on schedule time.

The engine room of a vessel is known in shipping parlance as the "black gang." This has no reference to race but probably originated from the fact that the hands and faces of the men in the engine room are generally smeared with oil and grease.

CONVENTION OF LIONS CLUBS IN NEW LONDON

NEW LONDON, May 5.—(AP)—J. Nelson Alexander, of Providence, R. IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OF JUDGE ENGLISH NOV. 10

WASHINGTON, May 5.—(AP)—Over the protest of a small group of senators, the senate today postponed until November 10 the impeachment trial of Federal Judge W. English, of the Eastern Illinois district on charges of usurpation of power and other "high misdemeanors" in office.

This date was acceptable to counsel for Judge English who said he would not undertake to discharge the functions of his office until after the trial. Managers on the part of the house, who are to prosecute the case, announced that in view of this they would be content to let the senate fix the date of trial.

The order for November 10 then was approved, 65 to 10.

The senate then adjourned its sitting as a high court of impeachment until that date, an action which makes unnecessary the calling of a special session of President Coolidge.

Whether it will be necessary for the house to convene also on November 10 was left to future determination. Authorities in the two houses are divided on the question of whether the senate can proceed with an impeachment trial in the absence of the house.

A POLICEMAN KILLED BY ANNOYER OF WOMEN

EVERETT, Mass., May 5.—(AP)—Two policemen were shot, one killed tonight while pursuing a man who had been annoying young women. The man was wounded and captured after several had bombarded a house in which he took refuge.

Two young women, Mary and Helen Doyle, told police they had been accosted by Labriola several times recently. Today they saw him approaching them in the street and their brother called the police. Labriola ran, dodged into a yard and then turned and shot Staples. The pursuit was continued by Lonergan and Patrolman B. oks who had joined the chase. The man went toward a house, turned as he neared it and shot down Lonergan.

Labriola then entered the house and menaced Brooks with his revolver through a crack in the door. The patrolman summoned help, and a force of reservists surrounded the house and opened fire. They soon burst in the door and found the killer hiding slightly wounded, in a closet.

STILLMANS RETURNING FROM THEIR "SECOND HONEYMOON"

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Returning with her husband on the Olympic today from their "second honeymoon," which marked the end of five years of litigation and attendant publicity concerning their marital troubles, Mrs. James A. Stillman characterized the whole sensational affair as "an educational thing." She said that she would act in exactly the same manner if she "had to go through it all again."

"It is an education," Mrs. Stillman said, "to have one's nose held flat to the sidewalk. It gives you understanding of the pavement. We are all members of the same club. After you have had your nose held to the sidewalk it gives you confidence in yourself, if you get off the pavement and stand on your own feet again."

Mr. Stillman remarked that his wife "is a most clever woman."

Mrs. Stillman, reaffirming her belief that she would "go through it all again," said, "so many things have happened in that time. There have been so many kind things, so many kind people, that it has all been worthwhile."

Mr. Stillman would not commit himself as to whether he would not commit himself as to whether he would recognise Guy Stillman, the baby whose parentage he denied in his divorce case.

They were both glad to get back to the United States and said that all they wanted was to live quietly in the home off Fifth avenue on Fifty Second street, that Mr. Stillman has leased. Mrs. Stillman expressed the hope that today's arrival would mark their last appearance on the front pages of the country's newspapers.

SENATE PASSED $165,000,000 PUBLIC BUILDING BILL

WASHINGTON, May 5.—(AP)—With most of its principal provisions rewritten, the $165,000,000 public buildings bill was passed today by the senate and sent to conference.

As the measure now stands Secretary Mellon retains only a semblance of the broad powers conferred upon him by the house measure in expending both the $100,000,000 general fund for new construction outside of the District of Columbia and the $65,000,000 for completing buildings authorized under the last buildings bill, passed before the world war.

Under an agreement approved today after conferences between republican and democratic leaders, the $100,000,000 fund would be made available during the next two fiscal years in equal sums for each year instead of over a period of years with annual expenditures to be determined by the treasury.

PAYS FINE FOR OFFENSE COMMITTED TWO YEARS AGO

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 5—After holding a bench warrants for two years for James Monnihan of Manchester, Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink of Andover found his man Wednesday and arrested him on a liquor violation charge comprising six actual sale counts. Monnihan had been in Florida and upon making known his return he was sought out by Sheriff Frink. The accused was taken immediately before Judge Simpson, presiding over the superior court in Rockville. He was fined $100 for each of the six counts plus the costs. The assessment was paid. Monnihan's departure from the section came when warrants were made out for him and also nine other men who were doing a bootlegging business within one mile of the Hartford-Willimantic highway at the foot of Bolton Hill. All nine men, including Walter Bowman, who was Monnihan's partner in conducting a gasoline station on the Johnson property, were rounded up. Each drew a fine of $200 and a 30 day jail sentence to the Tolland county jail. The warrant for Monnihan had been made out at that time by Judge Allen Brown.

TO ELIMINATE DANGEROUS CURVES AT SOUTH WINDHAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, May 5—A 30-foot road, 20 feet of which is to be concrete, will soon be making driving through the village of South Windham something to look forward to as an unmarred recreation rather than a hazard. The new road will be straight for about one half mile and the five dangerous corners which have claimed thousands of dollars in automobile damages and considerable in personal injury, will become merely something to remember. To make way for the new road one building will be razed, two others will be moved and one shed will be done away with. The building which is to be razed is one of historic fame in South Windham. It is a one and a half story wooden structure which has been used for years as a store and post office conducted by E. W. Avery. The houses to be moved are occupied by the Backus and Holden families.

State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald and Engineer Elmer Wellcox made known the plans to the following committee from the Windham and South Windham Community men's clubs at a conference: George S. Stiles, Walter Abbe, Jr., William F. Maine, H. Clinton Lathrop, Charles Larrabee, Frank H. Foss and Charles Backus.

In stating that the plans for improving the highway through South Windham had been under consideration for the past five years, Commissioner Macdonald said that it had been definitely concluded that the corners in the village should be eliminated. A substitute plan presented by the committee for the elimination of street corners with a layout to continue on from the Norwich-Willimantic state highway across the main street of the village called for a route through the north of land of the Stiles property, east of the property of E. W. Avery and back to the present highway at the first trolley crossing entering the village. Following a discussion of this and other plans the commissioners made it known that they would adhere to the program drawn by the highway department.

In detail the highway plans will do away with the trolley crossing north west of the village. The new road is to lead off from the highway from Willimantic on a short stretch of the present road leading to Obwebetuck Hill and proceed in an almost straight line to the southeast, going in the rear of three houses, through an open lot and onto land of Walter Abbe, Jr., thence directly through the present store of Edward Avery, crossing the present road and trolley tracks with a right of way over the power station brook and past the trolley car barn, now used as a power station, to the rear of the Woodward and Erickson houses. The road plan then encounters the Holden and Backus houses and joins the present Norwich-Willimantic road.

It was intimated by Commissioner Macdonald that the work would be started next fall. In the meantime a committee is to be appointed to assess damages and benefits to the property holders affected. The result of this however, is not expected to affect the construction of the proposed highway as the department has practically the right of eminent domain. The project of putting a straight road through South Windham was hastened by committees of the community clubs when it was learned that the state was preparing to put a new concrete road from Williams' crossing, through South Windham over Hoxie and Dugway Hills to the Willimantic city line.

Lyman Maine of this city has instituted civil proceedings against his wife, Mrs. Flora A. Maine and the case is returnable before the Windham county superior court on the first Tuesday in June, it became known Wednesday. Papers in the case were recently served by Constable Joseph Peck on property owned by the defendant on Pleasant street. It is understood that the damages asked for are $5,000 and according to Attorney Harvey for the plaintiff the basis of the action is "malicious prosecution." Lyman Maine was taken into custody while in Canada about one month ago and returned here by County Detective William E. Jackson on charges of abandoning his wife and minor child and cohabitation with another woman. Maine was tried in the local police court. The charge of cohabitation was not pressed and he was acquitted of the charge of abandoning his wife and child.

Fire of unknown origin, starting about eleven o'clock Tuesday night destroyed a barn, wagon shed and a garage in which was a Ford coupe, on the Clayton W. Hanks farm at Bear Hill in the town of Chaplin. The contents destroyed in addition to the automobile included hay and farming tools and some paint valued at $50. Volunteer fire fighters made up of every available man in the neighborhood saved the homestead and the live stock. The volunteers, already impeded by the lack of apparatus and water, had to redouble their efforts when nine gallons of gasoline in the tank of the Ford exploded. Five hundred dollars in insurance was carried on the barn.

Jan Zajer, known locally as "Jack the Rabbit" was charged with intoxication in police court Wednesday morning and pleaded not guilty. Constable Alfred P. Abbe of Windham arrested the man on the Windham Center road Tuesday night after he had received a complaint that a boisterous man was in the vicinity. The court imposed a fine of $15 and costs amounting to $26.15. He was unable to pay and was taken to jail.

Eugene Boudette, charged with intoxication pleaded guilty, adding that he had a job to go to. Some time ago he was given 24 hours to leave town when arraigned on a similar charge. Judge Foss imposed a fine of $15 and costs, amounting to $22.15 which he could not pay and he was also taken to Brooklyn jail.

John Mizak of 49 Brook street, charged with violation of the liquor law on the night of April 27, when federal, county and local police found a still and 15 bottles of home brew beer at his home, was arraigned in police court Wednesday morning. Samples on his beer had been analyzed and found to be very low in alcoholic percentage. Upon receiving this information Judge Foss noted the mizak's payment of the costs of $20.15. The beer and the copper boiler section of the still were returned to Mizak. Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officer Stanton L. Briggs retained the coil and drip pipe used as part of the still. Other than the beer no liquor had been found on the Mizak premises.

East Killingly has its Memorial day plans well advanced. Each year Memorial day is observed at East Killingly with impressive exercises, a feature of these exercises being the annual address. Attorney Warren D. Chase of Hartford, a Killingly man, is expected to be the speaker this year.

A frost and temperature down to 32 degrees was the record for Danielson on Wednesday morning, May 5. While frosts in May are not unheard of hereabouts, they are particularly disturbing this year on account of the very late spring and the predictions of poor growing weather for the entire season. Wednesday's frost did practically no damage—few things having grown sufficiently to be damaged.

Church and Sunday school services were held at Goodyear as usual last Sunday morning. The subject of the sermon was Green Pastures, based on the text Psalms 23:3 "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." The speaker mentioned that rural life offers illustrations of solid comfort notably the feeding flocks in the early springtime. A life governed by the hand of Jehovah should experience a peculiar enjoyment and realize the christian goodly heritage. The jass jaded mind in the end responds to fewer thrills than the life characterized by plain living and high thinking.

Veterans night at the Killingly grange meeting Monday evening proved an enjoyable affair to the older members of the grange. Of the seven living past masters, five were present. They were Frank Bailey, Ray W. Pellett, Charles A. Downs, Ella Day and Myrtice Blanchard. Mrs. Frank Warren and Mr. A. D. Dipp, the other two living past masters, are not now members of the grange. Paper Our Past Masters, Frank Bailey; 8. Talk—Interesting Matters in Our Grange History, Ray W. Pellett; 9. Address—The Grange, William H. Barron.

Out of the abundance of good material in the program the outstanding number was no doubt the picturesque rendering of John G. Saxe's poem, The Proud Miss McBride, by Brother Charles D. James, one of Killingly grange's oldest members. The original story by Annie Page was well written and much enjoyed. William H. Barron made a special trip to be present and gave a fine address.

During the program Charles A. Downs was presented a past master's jewel. Mrs. Harriet L. Wood, worthy master, made the presentation.

The grange voted to conform to the daylight saving schedule in accordance with the rest of the community.

PUTNAM, May 5—Miss Elnora Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Fisher of School street gave a piano recital on Wednesday evening, May 5, at Providence, assisted by Miss Gertrude Waddington of that city. The program was as follows:

Tambourin, Romeau-Godowsky: Pastorale, Scarlett: Fugue in G minor, Rheinberger; songs, May Day, Walthew and Nymphs and Fauns, Bemberg; Prophet Bird, Nachtstuck, Schumann; Berceuse, Etude in F, Chopin; songs, The Brownies, Leoni, and Paris Ardij; Troika, Tschaikowsky; Melodia Paderewski; May Night, Palmgren; Lotusland, Scott; Country Garden, Grainger.

At the town court of Killingly, Judge W. Fenner Woodward presiding, Nemzig Kamalian was bound over to the superior court charged with causing the death of Peter Charron of East Putnam, about three weeks ago by hitting him with a club. There was a quarrel at Kamalian's home where Charron and some of his companions had been drinking hard cider, and in the fight Charron was said to have been hit by Kamalian. The injured man was taken to the Day Kimball hospital and later transferred to the State hospital at Norwich where he died. The autopsy revealed a fracture of the skull. Kamalian, in default of bonds has been awaiting trial at Brooklyn jail.

A Boston paper recently carried an article about "Josephine," a hen owned by Alfred Bachand of South Attleboro, Mass. It was said that three eggs laid by his hen weighed three and three quarters ounces apiece.

Soon after this article appeared, Miss Anna Leavitt of the Putnam Savings bank took to the Farmers' association office three eggs produced by three Rhode Island Red pullets owned by Mrs. Maud Perrin of West Woodstock. These eggs were carefully weighed and the average weight was a little better than three and three quarters ounces. Mrs. Perrin's hens also deserved a place in the hall of fame.

Elmer Rhoades of this city, who was arrested by State Trooper Noonan at Auburn, Mass., on Sunday last, following an automobile accident, and who was charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license, has had his case continued and is released on $25 bail. The case was ordered still further continued when the court learned that he had made good the damage to the other man's car by giving him his own car.

Mr. and Mrs. Lendell Houghton of Woodstock have returned from Florida where they spent the winter.

Wallace Frink of Woodstock, who has been a patient at the Day Kimball hospital for some time, underwent another operation recently, instead of returning to his home as he had hoped.

About 50 Jewish children were recently entertained with a picnic lunch at the home of Jacob Gurwitz in North Woodstock.

Mrs. William N. Bates of Thompson is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital.

The Mission groups of the Baptist church held a meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Newton Ballard on South Main street. There was a large attendance.

Two large black snakes were shot by Mr. Hale a few days ago in the chicken yard of W. A. Houghton at East Putnam.

SEWING GUILD SEEKING DONATIONS FOR HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, May 5—The directors of the Sewing guild of the Day Kimball hospital are now at work in the city as well as in the surrounding towns. This solicitation comes but once a year and it is the only means which the Sewing guild has of raising funds for this very important part of the hospital work. Gifts of bed linen, table linen, towels, wash cloths or money are desired and welcomed.

As this guild furnishes the above articles to the hospital and as their needs are constantly increasing, it is hoped that everybody will give as freely as possibly. Mrs. Walter Rich is in charge of the directors in Putnam and the work of soliciting is to be done during the month of May.

Funeral services of Onisime Robillard were held Wednesday morning at 9:30 from St. Mary's church and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. He died at the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston, where he went about three weeks ago for an operation. Mr. Robillard was born in Canada 64 years ago but came to Putnam when a very small boy and has made it his home ever since. For many years he was night watchman for the Morse-Nightingale mills and he has also worked in the street department. Besides his wife he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Isaac Lizotte and a son Zenon Ribillard, both of this city.

Troop No. 1, of Putnam, Boy Scouts of America, is conducting a 15 day membership campaign for 15 new members, stating that any boy who has reached his 12th birthday may apply for membership if he has the written consent of both of his parents. Troop One affords a boy many good times during the coming season, including seven overnight hikes and a 15 days camping period at Camp Wallace W. Tuttle, the new Boy Scout camp at Crystal lake, Eastford, Conn.

The overnight hike includes a seven mile hike and supper, then the members of the troop generally play games or have a forest study hour. At taps the members of the party remain overnight at their desitnation, returning about noon the following day.

PLAINFIELD

NORWICH WOMAN'S CAR FIGURES IN COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, May 5.—A collision occurred about 5 p. m. yesterday, about a quarter of a mile north of Bishop's Crossing on the state highway between a Hupmobile touring car driven by Charles Ladd, of Norwich, and a ford touring car driven by Miss Alice Reed of Norwich Town, now staying with relatives in Sterling. The Lord was badly damaged about the front end, and the windshield of both cars was smashed. Aside from a few minor cuts to an occupant of each car, no serious injuries were reported.

Miss Emma Metachie of 106 Old Village, while walking home after a visit to Mrs. Walter Clark on Plainfield Street at 9:15 p. m., Tuesday evening, was struck by an automobile and knocked down. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ledger who were walking in the same direction, a few feet ahead of Miss Metachie, had a narrow escape from being hit by the same car. The car had no lights, and did not stop Mr. Ledger shouted after the driver and gave chase afoot. At Mathewson's filling station he borrowed a car, and with Constable Sidney Mathewson gave chase after the car, which had disappeared. Although the license of the car was indistinguishable the car will easily be recognized by several people who saw it. Apparently the same car was reported by Harry Holloway as the one which nearly struck him at the junction of Plainfield Street and Railroad avenue, a few minutes after the other affair.

AMERICANS IN ITALY.

It would be hard to tell from this distance where the trouble lies in that clash between an American and an Italian guide, which resulted in the arrest of the former and the placing of a charge against him of insulting the Italian premier. The latter has been heard and the young man discharged, so that much more was made of the affair than was justified, but perhaps it is a case where a valuable lesson may be learned by those who contemplate a visit to Italy as well as by Italians in the entertainment of visitors from other countries.

It is an old saying that discretion is the better part of valor. No one likes to be imposed upon by guides or anyone else, and when they encounter what they regard as wrong treatment it is quite in keeping with human nature that something be said about it. Some are more voluble than others. Some carry a chip on their shoulder most all the time and some are far from being discreet in their conduct and acts. It is possible for such demonstrations to be made either by the guide or his patron, but they don't always pay.

The stranger in a strange land is more or less at the mercy of those he comes in contact with and it has been made quite evident that those who go to Italy must be on their guard, not only against the imposition on the part of guides, but against putting themselves in a position where unwarranted charges can be brought against them that will mean delay and imprisonment, to say nothing of the embarrassment and trouble.

But while the traveler must get a warning from this case it cannot fail to impress the people of Italy, the guides and the authorities, that if it is expected to receive the substantial business that is gained from visitors from other countries it must be expected that they will be given fair treatment. Otherwise Italy will be shunned by many.

The fact is that with a reasonable display of courtesy and good judgment on the part of all concerned such cases as that of the young American in Italy will not occur. Italy least of all can afford to encourage them.

DIVERSIFYING CROPS

Announcement to the effect that the tobacco growers of the Connecticut valley are to go in for crop diversification is in keeping with expectation. It is the logical outcome of the situation which prevails among them of having more tobacco than they can dispose of.

Production of tobacco in large quantities has gone on despite the fact that the demand for the Connecticut valley product has undergone a decrease because cigars have given away to cigarettes. The result is that the tobacco growers have crops which have no market and they are going to employ part at least of their farms for the growing of vegetables this year.

The situation is not so different from that which prevailed among the cotton growers where big crops made it difficult to dispose of them and there was hard picking until the cotton which had been raised could be disposed of. The introduction of other crops in that region furnished the growers with many of their necessities without interfering with the production of sufficient cotton to meet the requirements and to keep prices from sagging too greatly.

Where only one thing is produced there is bound to be felt the serious effects of overproduction and the benefits of underproduction. That is the experience of the potato growers of Maine where the poor results of past years with large crops in this year being balanced by the high prices which are being obtained from a good crop in that region but a small one elsewhere.

With the resort to the production of garden truck the Connecticut valley growers will have a chance to tap several markets and will not be dependent upon one. They will not lose their hold upon tobacco production, for which their soil is particularly adapted, but they will reach out and undertake to serve the requirements of mankind in other directions. Probably a one year test will not tell the whole story but it will undoubtedly offer much help in reaching a solution.

FIGHTING CANCER

In its educational efforts to gather the results of research work in this country and elsewhere concerning cancer and distributing this information for the benefit of the public and the assistance of doctors and nurses the American Society for the Control of Cancer is engaged in a worthy effort, and recognition of it is shown by John D. Rockefeller through his gift of $125,000 to the million dollar endowment fund which the organization is endeavoring to raise.

The fight against cancer is not a new one. It has been going on for years, but each year shows greater determination to discover the cause. According to the present estimate there are 160,000 deaths from cancer each year in this country and of that number it is believed that 50 per cent. are preventable. In that very fact can be seen the importance of the work that the American Society for the Control of Cancer is doing through the dissemination of the data that those studying the disease have discovered.

When a real cure for cancer will be discovered is not known. It is believed that such a goal will be reached as the result of the persistent research work that is going on, but until that time comes there is much that can be done in pointing out the importance of early treatment of suspected cases instead of keeping them a personal secret until such a time as medical skill at the present time can do nothing and surgical aid can be no more.

Various funds exist at the present time for the continuance of the research work. Even though no great progress is shown there is no let up. New ideas and new tests are undergoing the slow tedious process of being worked out to a conclusion. When it is known what causes cancer a cure and a prevention can be expected to follow in due time. Till then such aid as can be given to known methods of prevention will mean much relief to suffering humanity. The endowment fund for such a purpose is deserving of generous support.

KEEP THEM FROM THE STREET

Probably there are more who notice the numerous instances of broken bottles, pieces of glass, nails and pieces of sharp metal in the streets than speak of it, but there is no doubt there is justification for the complaints that are made concerning such conditions and the criticisms offered concerning them.

Those who are responsible for such conditions are thoughtless. They are like the person who has a box or paper bag from which the contents have been taken. Their first disposition is to crush them up and deposit them in the gutter or cast them into the center of the street, unmindful of the harmful effect which such acts have upon the appearance of the thoroughfare, and the result which similar untidiness on the part of many has upon the streets of the whole community.

Those who find themselves possessed of an empty bottle are too often disposed to throw it in the gutter. Should a person happen to drop a bottle on the sidewalk the inclination is not to pick up the pieces but to kick them into the street. It is the same with broken glass of other kinds, nails and sharp pieces of metal.

In these days when there is a steady stream of automobiles it is easy to reckon what the effect is going to be upon the tires of those machines when they come in contact with such material. For the most part those who are guilty of such acts are giving no thought to the consequences, but the street is most certainly not the place for things, any more than it should be made the dumping place for all kinds of rubbish. Those who are responsible for it do not seem to think that it might be their own or a friend's machine that would be damaged by their heedlessness.

HOME CONDITIONS

According to news from Washington the strike situation in England is having its effects in demonstrating the need of early legislation concerning the coal situation in this country.

The strike in England has gone far beyond that which existed in this country. It is no longer a matter between the coal miners and the operators, but it has been shown that the British authorities have the means of dealing with the situation which prevails there, whereas in this country the government was without authority to do anything in connection with the recent coal strike here.

This was not because trouble in the coal fields had not been anticipated and it was not because recommendations had not been made concerning what was needed in the way of legislation, but because congress has failed in dealing with this problem and gives promise of continuing to daily in spite of the lessons which the recent trouble taught.

Regardless of the efforts which have been made to spur congress to its duty it has turned a deaf ear. The country has gone through experiences time and again which it should have been protected against. Nothing has been gained by waiting. Procrastination by the law makers has meant hardships and higher prices for the coal consumers. When the strike was on there was a desire to avoid emergency legislation, but now that it is over there is the same disposition to avoid doing what is needed and what can be done under the calm deliberation that should produce effective and sound legislation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Are you going to get the real kick out of hearing a baseball game by radio.

It is said that money talks but if the French franc drops much lower it will be speechless.

Law not war is the slogan of the peace workers. War on law is the slogan of the Chicago gunmen.

It will only be a few days now before the straw hats will be as welcome as the flowers in May.

It is easy to see what the pleasant week ends are going to do for the encouragement of auto traffic from now on.

There's a bill before the Massachusetts legislature to punish lawyers who cheat their clients. Now what do you think of that?

The man on the corner says: Can you imagine what a mess you would make of it if you were in the place of the traffic cop?

Massachusetts is elated that the auto fatality record for five months shows a decrease from 230 to 214, and well it may be. But the year is young yet.

The gunmen in Chicago now use machine guns and kill prosecuting attorneys. And yet Chicago would have the world disbelieve the stories about crime there.

IN THE TOILS

"I'm having a party for you tomorrow night," said the married sister whose elusive bachelor brother had stopped over a few days to visit her. "And you'll be surprised at the dandy crowd of attractive girls there is in this small town. Some of the nicest—"

"Ophelia," said the wary bachelor brother turning very pale and beginning to walk up and down, "if I had dreamed that you would do this to me I should have gone around by way of Alaska to avoid this town, believe me! Nothing in the world is so dangerous as a lot of girls in a small place, all through college and finishing school and with absolutely nothing to do but run up a golf score and wonder why they can get up no enthusiasm about Lefty Smith at the drug store soda fountain, whom they have known since childhood, or Arthur Fisher, the town's professional beau, whose hair is getting a bit thin on top and whose smile is productive of wrinkles all over his face."

"Something new," they groan: 'anything new is better than what we have. Oh, kind heaven, let a man drop off the train at Speedunk Center who does not eat with his knife. That's all we ask, just so he has a different face from the faces we see every day!

"An unthinking man a trifle given to exotism might fancy that the rush in his direction was merely the result of his superattractions, but if he considers the matter at all he will see it in its true light.

"One step farther, Lord Montmorency, and all is over for you on this earth! Something like that rings in his ears if he dares poke his nose out of doors. Between Akers' hardware store and the Hon Ton grocery at least six girls will shed their purses, handkerchiefs or small parcels to the sidewalk just as he passes and a dozen will blockade the dry goods store if he stops in to match a sample given him by his cousin, aunt or sister whom he may be visiting as I am!

"In a small place like this a visiting bachelor is robbed of one of his greatest protections, vague previous engagements. When I am back in Chicago it is dead easy because if Sally Bottleneck, the man hunter, phones and asks me to dinner I can say glibly I am so sorry but I have another date and she has no way of proving me a prevaricator while out here nobody in town can give so much as a cup of tea to a neighbor running in across lots without everybody's knowing it clear to the county line.

"If Mrs. Jones gives a party on the 15th of the month, that day is sacred to Mrs. Jones, because all the other women are going to her party anyhow. I can't tell little Flossy Marcelle that I am moved to tears at being unable to come to her house that evening but am going elsewhere, because Flossy knows darned well she's the only girl in town giving a party that night and when Doodle Frisbie invites me to a canoe picnic up the river and I am to go in her canoe it's up to me to leap out anywhere that's away, because these Doodles drifting down the sparkling river with the moon just right do deadly execution and a man spends the rest of his life trying to figure out just how it happened and why.

"There'll be a girl here tomorrow night with real color in her cheeks who will want me to walk ten miles with her to look at Lovers' Leap or Hangman's Turn, another who says oh, come on over and let's dance to the new records, and still another who knows I read out loud beautifully and she has a lot of new books and additional girls who mention rides, teas, matches at the country club, card parties and dinners, all of which will just naturally blow up in smoke if I fail to appear."

"There will be six tables of bridge," mused his sister who had not been listening at all, being entirely accustomed to brothers' and husbands' futile rebellions. "I'm going to put Lorry Beamish at your table because she's the prettiest girl here—"

"Well," muttered the wary bachelor hopelessly turning still paler, "I suppose good weather can't last forever and I'm due to get caught out without an umbrella some day! What color are her eyes and is she a good shot if she gets mad? Lor' lummie!"—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

At the annual dinner of the National Institute of Social Science in New York tonight a gold medal is to be presented to Stephen Tyng Mather, in recognition of his distinguished social service as director of national parks, a position he has filled for nearly ten years. Previously he had been for two years assistant to the secretary of the interior. Mr. Mather is a native of San Francisco, though a descendant of the famous Mather family of early New England. After graduating from the University of California he went into journalism. Six years later he took up a business career as manager of large properties inherited from his father. Owing to his intelligent and ardent interest in the national parks of California, he was enlisted by the federal government in the interests of the entire national park system, and for some years he has given himself and his wealth unreservedly to this work.

Stories That Recall Others

He Knew What He Wished

The making of dollhouses was a part of the daily program at the kindergarten for a week. The boys and girls were greatly interested in the project, and seemed anxious to have every detail true to life.

One five year old completed his house and came to the teacher with this request: "Please make a 'Measles' sign for my house."

More Hydrophobia

This little story reveals the deep dark secret of how to use the latest method for acquiring fever blister effectively.

The day wasn't what it looked. Although the sun shone brightly, the man and wife shivered as they drove hatless and coatless to a neighbor's home to get goose eggs for the children.

Friend husband endeavored to keep his wife warm by the use of his right sleeve, his arm inside. Spring did its worst and the man was kissing his wife squarely—but of course country roads are bumpy, and the bumps appeared just in time to cause the wife to be severely bitten.

Yes, it looks like a fever blister.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

How Fear Was Turned to Joy.

You'll find it true the world around
That fear with joy is closely bound.
—Old Mother Nature.

Never had Mister Smarty, the silly young Grouse who had met with an accident and been found by Farmer Brown's Boy been so thoroughly frightened as he was now. To him Farmer Brown's Boy was simply a strange two-legged creature, so big as to be wholly frightful. The young Grouse at once gave himself up for lost. He didn't even notice that Farmer Brown's Boy picked him up very gently and carried him very gently.

Of course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw right away what had happened. He saw that stick in one wing, and he guessed that the young Grouse, flying in great fright, had not seen where he was going and had dashed, his wing against a dead twig of a tree.

"You poor little chap," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "It must be that a hawk was chasing you. We'll see what we can do. We can't let you go this way."

Of course, the young Grouse didn't understand a word of this, and he was dreadfully frightened as Farmer Brown's Boy sat down and held him firmly while he examined the injured wing.

"I guess," said Farmer Brown's Boy that I shall have to cut this stick off on the under side." So he bound his handkerchief around the young Grouse in such a way that Mister Smarty couldn't get away. Then he took out his knife and opened it. That knife was sharp. Farmer Brown's Boy always keeps his knives sharp. He was glad of it now. Picking up little Mister Smarty, Farmer Brown's Boy held him in such a way that he couldn't struggle. Then with the sharp knife he cut away that stick where it projected through on the under side of the wing. Then, very, very gently, so as to hurt as little as possible, he drew the remainder of that stick out on the upper side. Then he very carefully examined that wing. He gently felt of every little bone to make sure that none was broken. Not a broken bone could he find.

Hardly had he removed his hand when with a whirr of wings little Mr. Smarty flew away.

"I don't know what to do with you, you scamp," said he. "I don't know whether I ought to take you home, or whether I ought to let you go. If I thought you could fly, I'd let you go. But if you cannot fly, you'll be safer at home with me. A bird that can't fly isn't going to live very long. But I'm afraid if I let you go and you cannot fly, you will run away from me and I shall not be able to catch you again. Then, if Reddy Fox comes along, that will be the end of you."

Of course, the young Grouse couldn't tell him. Anyway, he didn't understand what Farmer Brown's Boy was saying. But he was missing nothing with those bright eyes of his.

"If I get a chance I'll get away. I do hope Mother will stay around," said Mister Smarty to himself. Little by little he was becoming less afraid. Now that stick was gone that wing felt very much better. He wished he had a chance to try it. He had a feeling that it was as good as ever.

Meanwhile, poor Mrs. Grouse was dreadfully upset. She recognized Farmer Brown's Boy, and this made her a little easier in her own mind. You see, once or twice Farmer Brown's Boy had been very good to Mrs. Grouse. She couldn't believe that he would hurt little Mister Smarty. Still, she did wish that he would let little Mister Smarty go. But Farmer Brown's Boy was so afraid that this young grouse couldn't fly that he hesitated a long time about letting it go. Finally he decided on an experiment.

"I'll just take him to a big open space," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "If he can't fly, I probably can catch him again before he has a chance to hide."

So Farmer Browns Boy tramped along the Green Forest until he came to an open space. In the middle of it he put the young Grouse down. Hardly had he removed his hand when, with a whirr of wings, little Mister Smarty flew away. My wee fear turned into great joy.

GAVE ENTERTAINING LECTURE ON POLAND, THE RISING NEW REPUBLIC

Under the auspices of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women, Rev. S. A. Icick, rector of St. Joseph's church, gave a splendid lecture on Poland Wednesday evening at the Community house, Church street. The evening opened about 8 o'clock with selections on the organ by Henry J. LaFontaine. Frank R. Murdy entertained with two excellently rendered vocal selections, after which John J. O'Rourke presented Rev. Father Icick as the lecturer.

In his lecture Rev. Father Icick said:

Nations to some extent are like individuals. They are born, they reach a certain very often high state of culture, development and power, they have their ups and downs, their triumphs and sorrows and finally when they have accomplished their task they pass out from the sphere of historical activities. Ancient Egypt, Babylon, Greece and Rome are historical examples of such nations. They long since ceased to exist, they were conquered and absorbed by other nations.

Many historians and at least three great empires thought that Poland, dismembered by them in the eighteenth century was also a thing of the past. But Poland's mission was not accomplished. Poland was not ready to die, it was comparatively a young nation composed of very vigorous and hardy stock. Poland was simply waylaid by three robbers. Prussia, Russia and Austria, she was so to speak knocked on the head, her property was stolen from her, she was torn asunder, but she was not dead. On the contrary, her national strength, in spite of persecution, was growing, each generation took up arms against the oppressor in vain attempt to regain its independence. Although conquered each time by sheer force of numbers, the love of liberty, the desire for national independence was burning in the heart of every Polish child.

The Germans in pre-war times used to drink a toast "Der Tag." The Day, when they could conquer the world. It came and Germany lost. The statesmen of Poland likewise looked forward to that very day—to a world war, as they were convinced that retributive and historical justice, the peace and safety of Europe, demanded a strong Polish republic.

The great statesmen of Poland always planned their faith in a great world war. None of them however presupposed that Poland would bear the brunt of it, that the whole vast plains of Poland, covering an area equal to from Maine to New York, would be one great battle field, that millions of soldiers would cross and recross the country a dozen times, that some of its cities like Lwow (Lemberg) would be besieged, taken and retaken at least seven times; that towns, cities and villages would be completely destroyed, that several hundred thousand dwellings, railroads, bridges, roads would be demolished that tens of thousands of people would be herded together and driven into Russia like our western cattle; that families would be hopelessly separated and lost, scattered over the four quarters of the globe; that pestilence and famine would reap a harvest of many hundreds of thousands during those four years of war and a few more after the war; that several hundred thousand young men would be compelled to serve, to fight and to die for their oppressors. It was not an uncommon thing to meet men wearing the Russian, Austrian and German uniforms and all speaking Polish. It would be useless to mention some of the tragedies which I heard from eye witnesses.

Poland Devastated

The world war had left that territory, which now constitutes Poland, a land of pestilence, famine and ruins. There was no food, no clothes, no medicines and no work. Factories were either completely destroyed, or systematically pillaged. The very door knobs and copper kitchen utensils found their way to German munition plants. People lived in dugouts, fed on frozen turnips, acorns, birch bark, straw, in a word, on anything and everything that could be put into the mouth. Shortly after the armistice, those that were spared by disease and bolshevik revolution started returning to their villages or what was left of prosperous and thriving communities. Brambled and young birch covered the once fertile fields. The people had no money, no machinery, no food and no help. People stood in line in the large cities literally in rags, waiting from early morning till noon to buy a loaf of bread, and such bread, it contained everything except flour. After waiting for hours they would go home empty handed, because the bakeries did not have enough substitutes to bake it. I watched this many times with my own eyes. To give you an idea how expensive things were in Poland after the armistice, I bought a pair of boots, made by a shoe maker in the city of Warsaw and paid him the equivalent of $1000. That is why I saw many people going about the city in wooden shoes and many or them barefooted.

To these famished, diseased and ragged millions of Poles the makers of the Versailles peace treaty said—you are free, you have your own country. There were no frontiers established. Poland was a sort of haphazard state, somewhere between Germany and Austria to the west and Russia to the east. It made no difference if the frontier line was drawn hundred miles further east or west. No one had authority to establish the frontiers, the only frontier established by the peace conference was a small strip between Poland and Germany, the rest of it was left to plebiscites and what could not be settled by plebiscite was settled by force of arms. When I came to Poland in January 1919 a war was going on with Russians in the east, Ukranians in the south, Bohemians in Cieszyn and Germans in Posen and West Prussia. I saw many young girls and women in uniform on the fighting lines. I saw many boys of school age who were fighting in the siege of Lwow. Hundreds of them gave their youthful lives for their country.

The Bolshevik Invasion

When most of these frontier wars were terminated either by victory as with the Ukranians, or by compromise and intervention as with the Czecho-Slovakian republic and Germany, when the frontiers began to take definite shape, leaving only few disputed areas that were to be settled by plebiscites and the country began to breath easier and started to rebuild itself from its ruins, the bolshevik invasion took place in 1920.

Only superhuman efforts saved the young republican from disaster. One can hardly realise and comprehend of what importance, not only to Poland, but to the world was Poland's victory, under the very walls of Warsaw. Had bolshevism conquered Poland, in all likelihood the rest of Europe would become its victim, but, as in ages past Polish knighthood defended Europe against the invasion of the Hun, Turk and Tartar, so did it in the 20th century defend Europe against the red torch of bolshevism.

The New Republic

The new republic was devoid of everything. Few men in the country were trained for public office, for executive positions. Before men could be trained many and costly mistakes were made. Many of the factories were ruined, most of them were idle because they had no raw materials such as cotton and wool to give occupation to the thousands of idle laborers, who were very apt to take up the bolsheviatic doctrines. Soon a change took place. Credits were established, raw materials were shipped to the factories, locomotives were furnished by American manufacturers on long term credits, food was supplied to the starving. Hoover's organization looked after the children, the American Red Cross fought pestilence and diseases, the Y. M. C. A. and kindred organizations looked after the welfare and social work in the war ravaged country. And their efforts soon began to bear fruit. America wrote a very beautiful and a very noble page in Poland's history and has merited the gratitude of the entire nation.

The new republic had many financial difficulties to overcome. The war left the country with four kinds of money and all of it put together amounted to four kinds of printed paper, some in Russian, others in German. While in Poland I never saw a gold or a silver coin, money was made from cast iron and for a dollar you would get a few pounds of these iron washers that were supposed to represent money. That situation was eventually overcome, the zloty was established as the coin of the realm. Poland was one of the first to send a mission to America to settle its war loans and it will not be long before the country will pay all of its credits one hundred cents on the dollar.

Data on Poland

The area of Poland is 288,320 square miles, and its population close to 30 million it is the sixth in size and population in Europe.

Over 24,000 elementary schools at present; before the war there were 13,-400, an increase of about 10,000 schools, nearly a million more pupils and over 10,000 teachers. Colleges before the war 467, at present 784, an increase of over 300. There are six universities and a number of university colleges attended by over 36,000 pupils of both sexes. Before the war there were 24 state and 46 private normal schools or teachers' colleges, now there are 116 state and 46 private colleges for advanced pupils in which some 20,000 students are receiving their training. There are special departments for backward children in normal schools with an attendance of over 2,000. There is compulsory special training for all school children. Poland stands next to the United States in Boy Scout work. Special courses are given in the army for all soldiers who do not know how to read or write; besides that in so far as it is possible, the soldiers are given an opportunity to learn some trade or profession.

Industries of Poland

Poland being a great plain is primarily an agricultural country. In some sections and especially in the district of Posna, land is very intensely cultivated sugar beets, potatoes, grain and hay being the staple products. The southern districts raise corn, wheat flax and other grain produce. Poland has increased its production of fine horses, cattle and many of the fine Strassburg "pate de foi gras" or goose livers were raised in some Polish villages and later transported to Strassburg, where they were transformed into the tasty morsels.

Poland is rich in natural resources. It has vast timber reserves. Forests are planted and harvested just like we harvest corn or some other crop. The only difference is that it takes at least 75 years to raise a forest. Poland also produces large quantities of oil, which finds a ready market and has a very large gasoline content. The coal deposits are enormous and according to engineers of engineers will supply all demands of the country for over a thousand years.

Music and Pictures

At the close of the lecture several selections in Polish were sung by the Polish choir and Rev. Father Icick closed the evening with a series of stereonticon slides showing views in Poland. Father Icick explained the slides as they were thrown on the screen.

Mrs. John E. Burns was in charge of the sale of tickets at the door and Leonard Desmond took tickets at the door. Joseph A. Donnelly and Michael Murphy were the ushers.

NOLLE IN CHECK CASE AGAINST E. L. McEVOY

The charge of issuing a fraudulent check to James Sellas for $50 on the Jewett City Trust Co., was nolled against Edward L. McEvoy, formerly manager of the Palace theater, when the case was called up in the city court Wednesday morning, having been continued to May 5, but it was re-opened Wednesday at the request of City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins, who said he had completed his investigation and was ready to proceed with the case.

The city attorney made the following statement:

I recommend a nolle in this case. My investigation has disclosed that at the time of the injunction suit brought against Mr. McEvoy and which prohibited him from acting as manager of the theatre he (McEvoy) realizing that there were no funds in the bank to meet several outstanding checks that he knew would be presented to the bank, went to Jewett City, saw Mr. Dutkowski, the cashier, and placed $5,000 in value of stock as collateral with the bank and understood that the bank would pay all checks presented against his account. As a matter of fact the bank officials misunderstood as to the number of checks that they were to honor and refused to honor the last three or four presented, one of which was the one connected with this action. My investigation thoroughly convinces me that there was no intention on the part of Mr. McEvoy to defraud anyone but, on the contrary he took reasonable precaution to insure the payment of all outstanding checks. In addition to this when notified that the several checks, including the one upon which the prosecution was brought, had not been honored by the bank, he sought out the people who held them and paid the face of the check together with the protest fees. I therefore, recommend a nolle in this case.

Judge H. H. Pettis at once accepted the recommendation and nolled the case.

One man was fined $5 and costs and a Voluntown non-support case was continued to the next day.

KID KAPLAN IS NOW UNDER SOLE MANAGEMENT OF DENNIS M'MAHON

MERIDEN, May 5—(AP)—Dennis T. McMahon, of this city became sole manager of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight champion today, when he purchased William (Scotty) Monteith's interest in the services of the titleholder. The monetary consideration was not announced.

The deal completed in a local lawyer's office this afternoon, brings back full ownership to McMahon after nearly three years of partnership with the well known New York manager.

Kaplan opened his ring career under McMahon's management in 1920 and Monteith purchased an interest in the titleholder late in 1923. Monteith was Kaplan's New York representative and was a prominent figure in arranging Kaplan's New York bouts since that time.

Dissension has been rumored between McMahon and Monteith for more than a year and several open breaks in will occurred between the two, but today's deal came as a surprise to local admirers of the champion.

Kaplan is the second featherweight champion with whom Monteith has been affiliated. For several years he piloted Johnny Dundee, whom Kaplan succeeded as titleholder in the featherweight division on January 3, 1925, when he defeated Danny Kramer in the final round of the elimination tournament conducted by the New York boxing commission to determine a successor to Dundee, who had relinquished his claim to the crown.

KAPLAN PARTS WITH SERVICES OF MONTEITH

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Kid Kaplan, world's featherweight champion, has parted with one of his managers at a price understood to be close to $20,000. He paid this sum for the interest in his services held by Scotty Monteith, veteran New York boxing manager, who announced the deal tonight upon his return from Meriden, Conn., the title-holder's home.

Dennis McMahon, of Meriden, who formerly shared the role with Monteith, is now Kaplan's sole manager.

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE ABSORBS SIX WESTERN TEAMS

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Complete absorption of the six western hockey league clubs by National Hockey League promoters, a result of the tremendous growth of the professional game in eastern Canada and the United States was indicated today by announcement of negotiations for a five-club player sale

With the league champions, Victoria Cougars, already purchased by Detroit interests for $100,000, advices from Calgary, Alberta, today disclosed that the remaining clubs in the circuit, Portland, Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Calgary are involved in a new transaction. Disbanding of the circuit and the reorganization of the old Western Canada league are forecast by Calgary hockey men.

Dove-tailing with an announcement in Calgary by owner Lloyd Turner that the Calgary Tigers would soon probably be turned over intact to an American promoter, Col. John S. Hammond of the Madison Square Garden corporation revealed further details in plans for increasing New York's representation in the National league to two clubs. In addition to the New York Americans which competed in the league last year, a club playing under the name of the Rangers also will use the Garden rink for home games.

Patrick Confirms Sale

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 5—(AP)—Confirmation has been received by Lester Patrick, manager of the Victoria Cougars of the sale of all clubs in the Western Hockey league to interests in the National Hockey league.

It is understood that the lump sum involved for all teams was $300,000 and that the Portland team will go to Chicago and Victoria to Detroit.

ATHLETIC UNION WARNS HOFF TO APPEAR AT MEET

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Charley Hoff's reported refusal to appear in a track meet in San Francisco Saturday has drawn a warning from the amateur athletic union to the world champion pole vaulter from Norway that "unless you have reasonable basis for refusing to compete there the foreign relations committee will cancel your permit for further appearances in the United States."

This word went by telegraph to the Norwegian after a conference of the eastern members of the committee with Secretary Frederick W. Rubien following press reports that Hoff had decided not to compete in the Pacific Athletic association meet. The foreign relations committee has charge of his tour.

One of the reasons advanced by Hoff for his refusal was that he did not know until three days ago that he was to appear at San Francisco. A. A. U. officials said today that Hoff was advised of the Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco contests at the same time and that on March 31 they received a letter from him in which he said that he hoped to compete in all three cities.

The letter noted the change in date for the San Francisco meet.

PA LENGLEN DISCOURSES ON DAUGHTER'S TENNIS

PARIS, May 5.—(AP)—Speed and accurracy are the secrets of success in tennis, Papa Lenglen has told L'Auto the French sporting paper, in an interview on the success of his daughter Suzanne.

"When Suzanne was young, she was frail and delicate," Papa Lenglen said "I wanted to develop her physique. I first thought of swimming but remembered that I had been a tennis player in my youth and began to give her 15-minute lessons daily. Reports that I made her play the same stroke twenty times over until she placed the ball in the exact spot I indicated, are pure legend, but speed and accuracy are what I concentrated on."

"I am not going to play, it is my daughter," she said.

The secretary grimaced and answered, "the Nice club must be hard up for players to send out children."

"Well, the little girl won everything to the stupefaction of the secretary," continued Papa Lenglen. "Another day at the casino I asked a fortune teller if my daughter would become champion of France. The woman smiled and replied 'better than that. Oh, yes, much better than that.' After that I had nothing to say against those who foretell the future."

AGGIES WIN FREE-HITTING GAME FROM CLARKE UNIVERSITY TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, May 5.—Connecticut Aggies won their third straight game here this afternoon defeating Clark university 7-3 in a free hitting game that was marred by loose playing and erratic base running.

Anderson on the mound for Clark was touched for 16 safe singles, including four doubles and a triple. Despite this, however, the Aggies were unable to sent more than two runs across the rubber in the first six innings, poor base running costing them several chances to score.

Eddy started on the mound for Connecticut, and he held Clark scoreless for six innings, while his mates gathered a two run lead.

Clark tied the score in the seventh inning. Beaton, led off with a double and scored when Boyden followed with another two bagger. At this point, Coach Dole pulled Makofski from center field to relieve Eddy on the mound. Eddy took Makofski's place in the outfield.

Makofski fanned the first two men to face him, then Anderson singled to score Boyden to tie the score. Shea struck out retiring the side.

Connecticut came back strong in the last half of the seventh, three hits and a Clark error enabling the Storrs team to score three times. Nanfeldt led off with a single, Williams bunted safely, advancing Nanfeldt. Ahern sacrificed, Schofield followed with another single that scored Nanfeldt, and he went to second on the throw home. Makofski drove a grounder to Shea, Clark second baseman that should have gone for an easy out, but the throw to home was wild and both Williams and Schofield scored. The side was retired with no further scoring.

Nanfeldt retired Clark in the next inning, making three upassisted putouts at first base.

Connecticut scored two more runs in the eighth. Gilbert doubled, and the next two batters were retired in order. Then Williams doubled, scoring Gilbert. Ahern walked, and Schofield beat out his slow roller to first, filling the bases. Anderson then walked Makofski, forcing Williams across the plate for another Aggie run. Ajello, pinch hitting for Eddy, flied out.

Schofield had a good day, making four hits and two runs. In addition to playing a flawless game in the field. Williams and Horne also connected for three hits apiece, besides scoring one and two runs respectively.

POETRY

Once—And Forever

Once again spring sunshine
Creeps my threshold o'er,
Once again pale jonquils
Smile beside my door;
The footstep that I long for—
Ah, that comes nevermore.

Robins and song-sparrows
In the apple-tree,
Calling to each other,
Peering down at me;
But the smile I long for—
Ah, that no more I see.

Sadly shall I greet them—
Birds and flowers and spring?
Tearfully remember
That they used to bring
Joy to us together?
And that now alone I sing?

We together watched them—
Precious springs gone by—
So all springs shall forever
In mystic sunshine lie,
We together watched them!
Their sweetness cannot die!
—Mary Starbuck in Boston Transcript.

May

Faith, me,
What can this be?
Two little shoon,
Companions boon,
Beneath the hawthorn tree!

And oh! the grass is emerald green,
And oh! the flowers are sweet;
But fruit or fern
She will return
To cover up her feet!

Let be,
This sorcery:
The world would say
That blossoms lay
Beneath the hawthorn tree!

And oh! her feet are far and swift
And white beneath the moon;
But ere its wane
She'll come again
To find her little shoon!
—Margaret Tod Ritter, in "Mirrors."

"Sir, will you give me your daughter for my wife?"

"Couldn't say, son. I never saw your wife."—Detroit News.

Elderly Husband—"Would you care if I should leave you?"

Young Wife (absentmindedly) — "How much?"—Williams Purple Cow.

"Don't you think those open petting parties should be stopped?"

"Well, it seems to me that public sentiment is against sentiment in public."—Boston Transcript.

First Waiter (in de luxe restaurant)—"The boss is angry today. I'd bet he'll fire someone."

Second Waiter—"You said it — or else raise the prices."—Life.

"What's your name?" asked one little five-year-old miss of another.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the other, "you're as bad as grown-up people. They always ask me my name the first thing."—Chicago News.

Little Johnny, a city boy in the country for the first time, saw the milking of a cow.

"Now you know where the milk comes from, don't you?" he was asked.

"Sure!" replied Johnny. "You give her some breakfast food and water and then drain her crankcase."—The Progressive Grocer.

"Pat, you owe me $10."

A blast of 100,000 pounds of dynamite is to be made in a hill of copper ore in Arizona. The blast is intended to loosen the ridge of ore to permit it to be handled by steam shovels.

Paganini's favorite violin is preserved under a glass case in the municipal palace at Genoa, his birthplace. He bequeathed it to the city on condition that it never should be used.

Gas masks similar to those used during the war are supplied by the Swiss federal railway to engine drivers, their assistants and guards employed on freight trains which pass through the Grand Moutier tunnel. They are used for the prevention of inhaling poisoned air.

Declared exports from China to the United States during 1925 totaled $153,502,913 compared with $129,118,386 in 1924 and $176,965,508 in 1923. These totals represented the combined returns for all of the American consulates in China. The increase in 1925 is remarkable in view of the numerous serious obstacles to trade during the period.

A movie "ticker" has been invented for brokerage houses. The regular form of ticker is used, but with a special tape. A strong light projects the figures off the tape on to one mirror, from which they are again reflected to a screen, visible all over the trading room, thus eliminating the delay of waiting for clerks to copy quotations on the blackboards.

The war time iron coins of Sweden, weighing about eighty tons, have now been sold to a Gothenburg firm as junk. During the blockade the shortage in copper forced the Swedish government to print in iron $237,270, of small change and of this sum a little more than one-half accumulated in the vaults of the Swedish treasury. The remainder or $103,180 worth is presumably in circulation and is still good money.

BIRTHDAY OF NEW LONDON TODAY-
JOHN WINTHROP MAY BE REMEMBERED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 5—Tomorrow is the anniversary of the founding of New London, but the city will take no official notice of the anniversary. Perhaps the flags of the city will fly but of that there is no certainty. Over in Groton more patriotism prevails and at the Fort Griswold reservation the Stars and Stripes will be displayed from sunrise to sunset. Possibly the schools and historical organizations here may make some reference to John Winthrop.

SEAMAN MATTLOCK SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 5—The condition of Sylvester E. Mattlock, fireman first class, one of the seamen injured in the explosion aboard the submarine S-48 at the submarine base two weeks ago when a battery in the battery room exploded, has improved to such an extent the past 48 hours that the surgeons at the base hospital now hold out a slight hope for his recovery. Mattlock suffered the fracture of both legs.

A couple of youths who stole an automobile from a garage a few days ago have probably been taught a lesson that will be beneficial. They damaged the automobile to the extent of $75, which damage their parents or friends paid for. They narrowly escaped a term in jail for their conduct, for equally serious offenses have been treated with the offenders going to prison. The youths took the automobile from a garage and drove it into the country where their supply of gasoline became exhausted and they were obliged to secure aid to get the stolen auto back to New London. One of the youths is understood to be subject to epilepsy.

Frank McGill, a stranger here, has been arrested twice within twenty-four hours and he has been under treatment at the hospital also as a dipsomaniac. McGill came here on a drunk and remained in that condition until arrested. After his release he returned his rum and became in a condition that necessitated medical attention. Today he was allowed to go to Fisher's Island upon his earnest plea that he would get work, also get on the water wagon.

George H. Rich, 72, a former resident of New London, died Monday at his home in Scotland, Conn., after an illness of a year. Mr. Rich was a former locomotive engineer in the employ of the Central Vermont railroad and was retired 13 years ago. He was a member of Mohegan lodge, I. O. O. F., of this city and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Mrs. Frank Mitchell of Old Mystic, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged today.

Frank McGill of Providence; Miss Hrainie Vallee, 6 Connecticut avenue; Miss Catherine Turino, Westerly; Mrs. Robert Bean and infant son, Black Hall; Jeremiah Turtell, Westerly; Mrs. Nicoetta Santaorece, Groton; Alvaro Aguir, 20 Denison avenue; Miss Clara Frazier, Westerly; Miss Emma Muppers, Mystic; and Miss Marguerite Pellegrino, Westerly, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were dismissed today. Mrs. Arthur MacInnis and infant son, of 404 Williams street, were discharged Sunday.

Helen Patterson Kellas has sold a house and lot, corner of Pacific street and Ocean avenue to Edward S. Deten.

Sirocio Rocco Cavino, two months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cavino, 50 West Coit street, died late yesterday at the residence of his parents, death being caused by convulsions.

William Rodomaski died this afternoon at his home, 60 Federal street, where he had been ill a long time. Mr. Rodomaski was of advanced years. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, the latter a resident of New York. Mr. Rodomaski was employed many years as a machinist by the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company.

Beatrice Harriman, 20, and Mable Murphy, 18, were taken into custody this morning when they were believed to be soliciting in the vicinity of State and Bank streets. The girls were observed by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Clarence Wells and were charged with street walking. At the police station where the girls were known to be strangers in New London, was learned that they had been inmates of the Massachusetts Home for Girls at Lancaster and were on parole. Officials of the institution were communicated with and a parole officer will come to New London tomorrow for the purpose of accompanying the girls back to the institution.

The arrest of men who have approached degeneracy to a degree that they are pretty certain to be taken into custody as a menace is anticipated here, if rumors are to be relied upon.

All the merchants in the city are figuratively praying for warmer weather in confidential expectation that the change in temperature would bring greater activity in business. And the opinion of the merchants is quite generally shared by the buying public, who represent that they do not desire to make a change of clothing while so low a temperature as is prevailing at present holds on. The mercury last night dropped to 40 degrees with a probability that it will go as low again tonight.

There is considerable building going on at Ocean Beach and its vicinity. Notwithstanding there is a strike of carpenters in progress here there appears to be as much building as formerly.

The strike of the journeymen carpenters for an increase in wages for 15 cents per hour, which has been in progress since Monday, is no nearer a settlement tonight than at any time since it was started. The masters held a session last evening, but nothing definite was accomplished, the bosses simply discussing the matter. Late this afternoon the journeymen held a meeting in their hall, Bacon block, State street, but upon its conclusion it was stated that nothing had been accomplished in the way of a settlement of the differences. It was hinted by one of the masters that a compromise offer would be tendered the strikers within a day or two and if it was not accepted that the masters would not make any further attempt to bring about a resumption of labor by the strikers. Following the action of the strikers in quitting, it has become known that the working schedule of the plumbers and painters will expire during the present month and the journeymen of these bodies are seeking an increase in wages. Like the master carpenters the master plumbers and painters are not in a mood to grant the desired increase.

Mrs. Charles A. Pinney, of Howard street, wife of Captain of Police Pinney, is spending a few days in New York.

FAREWELL PURSE OF $1,800 FOR FATHER WOLLSCHLAGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 5—Rev. Alexander Wollschlager, until recently a curate at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, now promoted to pastor at East Portchester, was honored this evening when he was tendered a testimonial in the assembly hall of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. Over 500 members of the parish assembled to tender the former priest their best wishes for his future welfare and for agreeable surroundings in his new pastorate. During the evening a musical program was rendered and Rev. Dr. Crowley, in behalf of the parishioners presented the departing priest a purse of approximately $1,800, the subscription of the male parishioners of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's parishes. Rev. Fr. Wollschlager accepted the generous gift with words of appreciation. He will leave tomorrow for East Portchester. Fr. Wollschlager had been a zealous and popular assistant at St. Mary's church for 18 years.

COAST GUARD SAILOR DROWNED FROM HAWSER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 5—William Patterson, United States Coast Guard, stationed at the local section base, state pier, was drowned in the Thames river this afternoon and his body has not been recovered. Patterson was 18 and his home was in Stapleton, L. I., where he has relatives. Since the fatality members of the coast guard forces have grappled for the body, but have not been successful in locating it.

Early this morning the schooner Admiral Schley was seized in Block Island sound by a coast guard destroyer and when liquor was not found aboard the craft, the schooner was taken in charge and the crew seized on a technical charge of violation of the navigation laws. At the state pier this afternoon it was decided to take the schooner to New York, where it was intended that the crew would be arraigned. Patterson and another member of the crew of the United States Coast Guard patrol boat 188 were placed aboard the schooner as guards. After Patterson and his comrade had been assigned and while the craft was being towed down the harbor Patterson, it is stated, started to return to the patrol boat 188, which was towing the schooner, in order to do so he was forced to travel over the hawser, hand over hand. He had nearly succeeded in reaching his goal and when the patrol boat and its charge was passing the former yard of the Groton Iron Works, Patterson is said to have lost his hold on the hawser, falling into the river. Three life lines were thrown to the sailor, but before he was able to grasp one he was struck on the head by the bow of the Schley and in another instant Patterson's body sank from view.

The Schley, it is understood, has been suspected of having been engaged in the transporting of liquor from the rum-fleet at anchor off Block Island a long time, but not until this forenoon did coast guardsmen come upon the boat and attempt a seizure.

Elmer Kenderson, manager of Riverside Park, anticipates that place will be patronized as a sort of motorists camp to a greater extent during the coming summer than it was used last year. The park is nicely situated overlooking the Thames river. The new project to erect an overhead passage from the grove to the river has been abandoned for the season. Councilor Streeter made a determined effort to secure a passage over the tracks of the Central Vermont railroad, but as there was no appropriation for the work he abandoned the scheme with a promise that it would be taken care of another year.

There is no change in the situation at the Bloom mills where a strike has been in progress for a fortnight. It is the opinion of many that the trouble will adjust itself and that the former employes will drift back to their labors gradually until such time as the mill is in operation as heretofore.

An automobile owned and operated by Fred Leiper, Clark lane, Waterford, and a commercial car owned by the Salett Dyeing & Cleaning company, were in collision late this afternoon on State street, near Union street. Both cars were damaged slightly.

Floyd L. Fuller, chauffeur in the employ of the American Railway Express company in operating his car through Bank street late this afternoon found a large roll of tar paper. Fuller had the paper taken to the police station.

There is no change today in the condition of Fire Chief Charles Rose, who sustained a compound fracture of the right leg and several broken ribs as a result of his automobile being struck by a truck of the Eastern Dairy Co., corner of Green and Pearl streets Sunday afternoon. At Lawrence hospital it was stated that Chief Rose was suffering considerable pain as a result of the fracture.

A pleasant social affair, arranged by Mrs. N. N. Fisher, assisted by Mrs. H. M. Pendleton, was held in Wheeler school dormitory Friday evening, in honor of the 25th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. George Wyman Tryon. About 50 were present all inscribing their names in the wedding book, continued from 1901. Mrs. Tryon was presented a handsome silver tray and a beautiful white gold wrist watch. Y., where her people lived for a time, that she met Mr. Tryon, then engaged in newspaper work in New York city. She has been librarian of Wheeler library in this village, since its opening in 1903, by her geniality and obliging ways winning the warm regard of all the patrons of the library.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Films developed free during May. Desmarais Popular Priced Studio, 525 Main St.

Breed Theatre

Tom Mix and his remarkable horse, Tony, will be seen at the Breed theatre in a three day engagement beginning today. "The Best Bad Man" is the name of his latest picture and the modern Buffalo Bill is supported by Clara Bow, Judy King and other well-known players.

This story, in which Tony has some of the most thrilling moments of his equine career, was written by Max Brand and adapted by Lillian Hayward. Vital action scenes are laid in Colorado.

Others in the cast include Paul Panzer, who won fame in "The Fool," Frank Beal, veteran character actor, Cyril Chadwick, Tom Kennedy, Buster Gardner and Tom Wilson.

Comedy high lights are supplied by dainty Judy King, well-known as a Fox fun-provoker, and big Tom Wilson, who plays the part of a southern butler. J. G. Blystone directed the picture.

Casey of the Coast Guard, the Pathe News and a Juvenile comedy, titled "Raising Cane", completes this program.

Palace Theater

Vaudeville that is vaudeville is the heading which the Palace heads their ad with in today's paper and the line-up surely looks like a great program. It will open with Luster Bros. in thrills and spills. Margie Carson will follow with some good singing that is bound to please. No. 3 will be Covey Powell Trio in a revue different to anything ever produced. Helene Smiles Davis and Bob Nelson two loose nuts will dish out plenty of laughs. Denno Sisters and Thiebalt will close the show with a novelty act of Military Dancing.

Satin in Sables, the Warner Bros. Classic of the screen opening at the Palace theater today with Lowell Sherman in the stellar role, is the story of a profligate nobleman's regeneration through love and tragedy. Prince Michael Lvov Yervedeff, of Russia and of Paris, has only one redeeming characteristic, his love for his younger brother Paul. When in a moment of good resolutions, Michael dismisses his lovely mistress, the jealous beauty determines to make Paul love her and so punish Michael. The suffering of Michael when his disillusioned brother races madly to death is assuaged by the love of Colette, a gay gamine, and he learns that life holds more than idle pleasures and petty passions. James Flood directed this picture version of Bradley King's story.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

There are five exceptional Keith-Albee vaudeville acts at the Broadway theater starting today, that is promised to outclass anything seen in the city in some time. They are all standard acts and favorites wherever variety is enjoyed.

Hoot Gibson comes to the front again in The Arizona Sweepstakes, a Universal-Jewel to be shown in the Broadway theater commencing today. There is a new angle to this latest Gibson picture which the hard-riding Hoot is first seen caught in the labyrinths of a great city's underworld before he finally gets back to his native stamping—the free and unbound plains of the west. Romance runs rampant.

It is a thrilling story of an unsophisticated cowpuncher's adventures in a city's gang life and of his battle of wits and nerve with an unscrupulous millionaire rancher from the east. Of the many exciting scenes that feature The Arizona Sweepstakes the great cross-country race participated in by Hoot, the villain and a score or more of real cowpunchers is the most exciting. It is one of the best races that has been seen on the screen in a long time.

The supporting cast is a notable one. Playing opposite Hoot in the leading feminine role is pretty Helen Lynch with Philo McCullough, one of the screen's best villains, cast in one of his favorite parts. Some excellent comedy work is contributed by two old favorites, Kate Price and Billy Schaeffer, Jackie Morgan and Turner Savage, three very precocious youngsters. Others in the cast include Emmet King and Tod Brown.

Strand Theater

Thrills and spectacle. These two words sum up Lon Chaney's successor to The Hunchback of Notre Dame, Universal's astounding filmization of The Phantom of the Opera, now playing at the Strand theater. The thrills are born of the weird cellar scenes. Lon Chaney in his strangest makeup; chased by a mob of several thousand people; the spectacle is in the great festivals and operatic scenes, all photographed in actual color, in the huge replica of the Paris Opera.

Gaston Leroux's famous mystery story is the basis of the astounding new picture. Lon Chaney plays the weird creature of the darkness, half man and half devil, who launches a reign of terror that holds a city in its throes, and who finally meets a fate as tragic as that he meted to his enemies.

Mary Philbin is even more appealing than she was in Merry Go Round in the part of the little opera singer for whom the Phantom defies the world, and Norman Kerry is a dashing and romantic figures as her lover and rescuer.

Arthur Edmund Carewe as the mysterious "Persian," is a compelling, sometimes forbidding, but always amazing character and Gibson Gowland is convincing as Simon, the huge sceneshifter, seeking the Phantom to wreck a grim revenge. Snitz Edwards offers the comedy relief, and Virginia Pearson, John Belmonte, Cesare Gravina and some 25 more principals are all adequately cast. Several thousand people appear in the mob scenes and other astounding crowd specticles.

The music is rendered by a ladies orchestra. Several short subjects are on the bill also. At the small prices prevailing not one man, woman or child can afford to miss it.

Passenger service was resumed on the Cuba railroad, after having been shut off several weeks because of a strike by the company's workmen.

Plaut-Cadden Fire Sale Begins To-morrow

No selling event ever held in Norwich or eastern Connecticut has been awaited with such intense expectancy as The Plaut-Cadden Company's Fire Sale which begins tomorrow morning at 10:30.

Regrettable as are the circumstances resulting in the necessity for the announcement of this sensational fire sale one cannot help but realize what extraordinary buying opportunities it provides when thought is given to its tremendous scope and to the vast amount of varied merchandise that is involved in the sale. This fire is the first disaster of its kind that has ever befallen The Plaut-Cadden company in its 54 years of business history and the firm is going to make their misfortune of the greatest good fortune to thousands of people.

The company's entire stock will be included in this event, as the fire, with its resulting smoke and soot damage, left its imprint on practically everything in the store. Some of this merchandise has not been damaged to any great extent but none of it can be returned to regular stock nor sold at regular prices. Consequently, and in accordance with the strict policy of The Plaut-Cadden company of having on its floors only the newest and finest quality merchandise everything, no matter how little has been the effect of the fire damage, must be sold as quickly as possible without regard to its cost, value or former selling price. Articles that were badly harmed, burned or destroyed beyond repair have been disposed of, but there remains an immense assortment of miscellaneous merchandise including furniture, pianos, player-pianos, reproducing pianos, orthophonic victrolas, radios, musical instruments and musical merchandise of every kind, oriental and domestic rugs and floor coverings of every kind, imported tapestries, art woods, mirrors, pictures, statuary, lamps, house furnishings, crockery, jewelry, watches, clocks, diamonds, cameras, teakwood pieces and thousands of other needed articles for the home. Preparations have been made to handle the great crowd which it is expected will be on hand to take advantage of the opportunities which will be without parallel in local merchandising history.

HOSPITALITY
begins in the kitchen!

"This modern ice man" calls once—with Frigidaire—and the ice stays always

And what a difference it makes if the ice-box is a Frigidaire Electric Refrigerator. All food is kept better, colder, longer. You can buy provisions for days in advance without fear of their spoiling, and have a well-stocked larder if the unexpected guest arrives. And you can serve those enticing Frigidaire cubes in iced drinks, tinted or clear, and delicious frozen desserts, home-made, ready whenever you want them.

Come in and see the new metal cabinet Frigidaires. Or write for catalog.

MARKET WAS DULL

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP)—Extreme dullness characterized today's stock market with prices displaying a relatively firm undertone. The British general strike apparently ceased to be a factor in the determination of price movements, such activity as occurred being predicted on domestic trade reports which, in the main, were favorable. Total sales were only 672,200 shares, the smallest of any full session since the autumn of 1924.

Foreign exchanges continued to feel the effect of selling caused by the strike. French and Belgian francs crashed to new record low levels in reflection of fears that the British crisis would indefinitely delay international stabilization credits to those countries. A more cheerful feeling was apparent, however, in the commodity markets.

The lethargy of the stock market was attributed to a rather widespread desire to restrict commitments, pending further developments in England. Unless the strike takes a more serious turn and develops into a bitter class struggles, it is felt in many quarters that the immediate effects will be bullish rather than bearish in character. The possibility of a check to British pig iron shipments to this country already has been reflected in a stiffening price tendency for the domestic product.

The Iron Age reports that the rate at which new business is coming to the steel mills has changed but little in the past week. The Iron Trade Review says May has started off with less evidence of general sagging, while some elements of improvement, at least in sentiment are developing.

Oil shares gave one of the best exhibitions of group strength with buying influenced by recent publication of constructive trade statistics, reports of large current earnings and favorable dividend rumors. Standard Oil of New Jersey was one of the leaders of that group, moving up to within a point of the year's high at 45 1-2. Good buying also was noted in Pan-American B, Tidewater, Marland, Macatibo and Houston.

Standard industrials showed practically no change on the day. U. S. Steel common drifted within a range of 1 1-2 points, closing half lower at 131 3-4. General Motors closed unchanged at 131 1-2 after having touched 133 7-8. Bullish demonstrations developed in a few specialties, such as American Bank Note, the Commercial Solvents issues, New York Canners and Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron. Buying of the rails centered largely in the low priced issues with a gain of 3 points in Texas and Pacific as the outstanding feature. Rock Island and Kansas City Southern also were well bought.

Wheat futures rallied more than a cent a bushel on reports of persistently dry weather over the spring wheat belt. Cotton showed net advances of 2 to 3 points. Sugar prices were practically unchanged and coffee closed 10 points higher to 4 points lower.

Foreign exchanges were heavy. Demand sterling yielded over one-quarter of a cent to around $4.84 11-16 with some of the selling probably inspired by authoritative denials that the British government was supporting the currency in this market. French francs broke over ten points to 3.11 cents and Belgian francs collapsed over 25 points to 2.95 cents, both making slight recovery from the low levels. Norwegian krone dropped 14 points to 21.58 cents, but recessions in other European rates were nominal.

Call money renewed at 3 1-2 per cent, but advanced to 4 when banks cashed between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 in loans. Time money ruled firm at 4 to 4 1-4 per cent, but prime commercial paper was slightly easier, the best names ruling at 4 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 5.—(AP)—Attention of wheat traders shifted largely today to the precarious outlook for the spring crop. Word of large export business in Canadian wheat and flour tended also to lift wheat values. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled but 3-4c to 1 1-4c net higher, May (new) 1.59 3-8 to 1.59 1-2 and July 1.39 1-2 to 1.39 5-8 with corn unchanged to 3-8c off, oats 3-8c to 1-2 and 5-8c up and provisions at 7c to 15c advance.

Predictions of serious crop damage in the spring wheat belt unless rain came soon were given wide notice, especially as late reports from the northwest indicated but slight hope that an early forecast of possible showers would be fulfilled. The early prospect of moisture relief did a good deal temporarily to weaken the market after an initial upturn here that was due to higher quotations at Liverpool. Announcement that Kansas City had sold 60,000 bushels of 9.2 hard wheat to come here at 1 1-2 c over may counted also as a temporary depressing factor.

Apprehension aroused over news of extensive dust storms in Minnesota and other parts of the spring wheat area, however

TAFTVILLE

The members of Troop 3, Boy Scouts, which has recently been reorganized with Victor H. Davis as Scoutmaster, held an interesting meeting on the bluff west of North Third avenue Tuesday evening. The Scouts pitched a tent early in the evening, and had as their guests Scout Executive Fred Bielefield of Norwich, and the members of the troop committee.

Later in the evening the members of the committee met at the residence of George H. Young, and had the committee program outlined to them by the Scout executive. The members of the troop committee and the duties they are to assume under the plan submitted are as follows: Chairman, George H. Young; promotion, Earle M. Wood; official inspector, Harold E. Linderson; instruction, Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis; outdoor activity promoter (camping and hiking), Alfred Linderson; supervisor of treasury and records, E. Tracy Clark.

A talk on bird study for the troop is to be arranged in the near future, and an effort will be made to send the two patrol leaders of the troop as delegates to the council pow-wow at Hartford council, to be held each Monday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church, and Harold E. Linderson will make his first official inspection next week.

Mrs. Victor MarcAurele, Miss Albertine MarcAurele, Mrs. Gabriel Paquette, Toulssaint MarcAurele and Joseph Paquette, all of Providence street, have returned from an automobile trip to New York and Whippeney, N. J. In the latter place they spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bowe and family. Mrs. Bowe is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor MarcAurele.

Miss Anna M. Beardow of Providence street has been a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. James Harroun of Willimantic.

Robert McNeeley and Gilbert S. Raymond of Norwich were business callers in town Wednesday.

The members of St. Veronica's T. A. and B. society enjoyed a delicious chicken supper at their rooms on Providence street Tuesday evening. The tables were attractively decorated with baskets of spring flowers. The menu:

Fruit Cocktail Tomato Bisque
Roast Chicken with Dressing
Mashed Potato Mashed Turnip
Creamed Carrots and Peas
Cranberry Sauce Celery
Rolls Assorted Cakes Ice Cream
Coffee

Miss Mary Murphy was chairman of the committee in charge of the enjoyable affair, and Mrs. Richard Berkoff catered.

"What is it the poet says about the rose that is born to blush unseen and waste its fragrance on the desert air—or words to that effect," inquires Damon Runyon, well known writer of sports, in a recent issue of a Boston paper. He refers to Denny Murphy, son of Postmaster and Mrs. Dennis G. Murphy of South A street, and continues: "My west coast operatives inform me that the best catcher in those parts is one Denny Murphy, who was once with the New York Yankees. He was sent to the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league, now the Missions of San Francisco, in the trade that brought Bob Muesel to the Yanks. Murphy was then quite young but of course he has grown older. Bob Muesel has long been accounted a veteran player with the Yanks. Murphy still lingers in a minor league when he might have been a big league star had circumstances been just a little bit different.

My operatives tell me that he has a great arm, that he is a heady fellow behind the plate, who uses his head for something besides a hat rack, and that he is a good man with the pitchers. He knows how to work 'em and steady 'em, so I am told. It seems strange that the big league scouts haven't taken cognizance of Murphy long before this, if he is as good as my operatives say.

And of course you know I don't mean to infer that the west coast is desert air."

The regular monthly business meeting of the Taftville Social and Football club was held Monday evening in the rooms in the Ponemah building. President Allen Bogle presided, and there was a good attendance. A new pool table has been purchased and is being covered by the committee in charge. New rules and regulations are in the process of being drawn up, and they will probably be submitted to the members at the next meeting. One new member was ballotted on.

The members of the Ponemah Wheel club held a meeting Tuesday evening at their clubhouse on Norwich avenue.

A meeting of the Lisbon town school committee was held Tuesday evening.

President Walter Wuczik was in the chair at the meeting of Branch 28, Polish Workers Sick Mutual Aid association held last Sunday. Routine business was transacted by those present.

Paul Verville has purchased a tract of land near the city line.

FINDS NO BLAME ON DRIVER FOR BOYS' DEATH

No criminal liability in causing the death of Arthur C. Higgins, 3, when the boy was struck by an automobile, is found against Charles Oppenheim of 514 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Coroner J. J. Desmond in a finding he has made on the accident.

In his finding the coroner says:

On April 21, 1926, between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Oppenheim was operating his automobile (a Ford coupe) going northwardly on West Thames street in Norwich; he was alone in his car. He was proceeding at a speed of about 20 miles an hour, his car was in good condition and its brakes in good order. As he was approaching the point where Spring Garden avenue intersects West Thames street travelling on his right hand side of the street, he observed three or four children on the sidewalk of West Thames street, on his right; one of these children was Arthur C. Higgins. As Oppenheim drew near the children, one of them suddenly darted toward the Higgins boy, who then ran from the sidewalk directly out in the path of the car, which was then only five or six feet away from him, and he continued to run across the street until he was struck by the forward bumper, which fatally injured him. When Oppenheim saw the Higgins boy rush out into the roadway from the sidewalk, he applied his brakes, turned his car sharply to his left, and did all in his power to avoid striking the child, and brought his car to a stop on the extreme left of the street; he went at once to the boy picked him up, and took him to the Backus hospital in Norwich, in the automobile of Patrick Brown, of Norwich, that happened to be near the place of the accident. Oppenheim remained at the hospital a short time, and then went directly to police headquarters in Norwich, where he reported the accident; and thence to the home of the parents of the injured boy, in Norwich, and informed them of the accident.

At the time of this accident Charles Oppenheim was a duly licensed motor vehicle operator by the Massachusetts Motor Vehicle department, and his car was duly registered; and he was an experienced motor vehicle operator.

At the time when the Higgins boy left the sidewalk and ran out into the street, he was not facing the direction from which the auto was approaching and apparently did not see it, or know of its approach.

Contradicts Davis Legend

The generally accepted story regarding the escape of Jefferson Davis is thus controverted by Poultney Bigelow, in a New York paper: Captain Briggs of Athens, N. Y., is quoted as having described the late president of the Confederate states as "masquerading in woman's clothes" when captured in 1865. Will you permit me to correct the late gallant captain on a matter of historical detail and at the same time clear the reputation of Mr. Davis, who from the day he entered West Point until his death in 1888 was a pattern of social rectitude and military courage.

The story of his alleged attempt at escape in woman's dress has been abundantly proved apocryphal in the ten volumes edited by Dunbar Rowland for the state of Mississippi. For those who had the honor of knowing him, no proof was ever thought necessary.

Surprise Birthday Party

An enjoyable surprise party was given to Fred Kershaw, in honor of his 21st birthday, at the home of Mrs. William Crawshaw, of 125 Main street, Baltic. There were about 40 relatives and friends present. During the evening, Mr. Kershaw was presented a fine ruby ring by Mrs. Crawshaw, responding with a speech. Games were played, and several instrumental and vocal solos rendered. A luncheon was served by Mrs. Crawshaw.

FOUND GUILTY OF ARSON, PRISON SENTENCE SUSPENDED

John G. Russell, 36, of Montville, tried and found guilty in the criminal superior court at New London Wednesday, on the charge of statutory arson, was sentenced by Judge Newell Jennings to not less than two nor more than five years in state prison, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended and Russell was placed in the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield for one year.

Trial of the case was begun Tuesday and was finished Wednesday when Judge Jennings found the man guilty and imposed sentence. The criminal court then took an indefinite recess.

The case against Russell was worked upon by State Policeman Henry J. Albright of the Groton barracks, following a fire on Jan. 21 which destroyed a house at Black Ash Swamp road, near Oakdale. Russell was a tenant in the house upon which Fortunaro Malimaro of Montville held a $3,400 mortgage. As a result of his investigation, the state policeman arrested Russell and Malimaro, as well as the latter's wife, Maria, charging all three with statutory arson. In the court Tuesday, the case against Mrs. Malimaro was nolled at the suggestion of State Attorney Arthur M. Brown, who declared that the state was not in possession of sufficient evidence to warrant a trial.

Repudiated Confessions

Judge Jennings and State Attorney Brown faced an odd situation in the case, for Russell, who had signed two detailed confessions to setting the house on fire at the behest of Malimaro, who offered him $300 to do it, pleaded not guilty on Tuesday and repudiated his statements made to the police officer. When the evidence was all in, State's Attorney Brown informed the court that Malimaro, who also pleaded not guilty and had elected to be tried by a jury, must go free, for no jury in this country would convict the man on the testimony of Russell now, even though he were to change his story again. Malimaro, he termed the "arch criminal" of the two.

Public Defender Charles L. Stewart, who represented Russell, told Judge Jennings that there was no question about Russell not telling the truth but stressed the point that if the court found him guilty, the judge would be obliged to believe that Russell told the truth in the confessions and yet in another moment would have to reverse his stand to nolle the case of Malimaro.

Satisfied As To Guilt

Judge Jennings in rendering his decision said that he was satisfied that Russell was guilty of setting the place on fire and that he should find him guilty but that what was to be done with him was another matter. The judge termed Malimaro the "show man" of the offense and said that he was sure and hoped that Russell was a rare type hereabouts, saying that he did not believe that Russell really appreciated what was going on.

State Attorney Brown said that he did not know as he wanted to press for the accused to be sent to state prison in view of the fact that he must let Malimaro go free, the man whom he said "acted with a motive." The judge then pronounced sentence and suspended the execution of it.

Secured Confession

State Policeman Albright, when on the stand, told of securing the confessions from Russell, whom he first visited at the farm of Charles T. Armstrong in Griswold, where Russell had secured employment and to which place he had brought his family. The state policeman said that Russell at first denied that he was guilty, but mentioned the fact that Malimaro had offered him $300 to fire the building. Later, according to the officer, Russell voluntarily made a detailed confession that he set the place on fire, which the officer recorded on paper in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, read it over to Russell, who signed it of his own free will and accord.

The confession was read and then placed in the evidence. The paper related when and how Russell and Malimaro met; that Russell was offered $300 by Malimaro to set the house on fire and that Russell, against the advice of his wife, filled a burlap bag full of papers, placed it in the attic near the chimney and lighted the bag.

Watched House Burn

The signed confession also told of how Malimaro suggested that Russell leave his furniture in the house and that he would "fix it up with him when he collected the insurance. Following the setting fire to the place, according to the confession, Russell and his family went out in the yard and from a position near a fence upon the property, they watched the building burn. Malimaro drove long in his automobile, according to the signed statements, and Russell told him that his furniture was burning up, to which Malimaro replied, "Never mind, I'll pay you money just the same," and told Russell to wait until he got the insurance.

Another Confession

State Policeman Albright then testified to having secured a second confession, in the company of Sergt. Frank Virelli, of the state police, from Russell at the New London jail. The officer said that he took a second confession so as to secure more information as to the previous occupations of the accused. The second confession, which was corroborative of the first, was also read and placed in evidence.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Stewart, State Policeman Albright said that in no way did he persuade or force Russell to make the statements and in this respect, he was borne out by the testimony of witnesses. Officer Albright said that he told Russell that whatever he said would be used against him.

Sergeant Virelli, who was to have testified in court, was not present, he having left for Italy after a prisoner, according to State's Attorney Brown.

Witnesses called by the state to testify were State Policeman Albright, Charles T. and Nettie A. Armstrong of Griswold, County Humaine Agent Frederick H. Weyant of Norwich Town, Julia E. Beckwith of Montville, sister of the accused; George Hazam of Norwich and Sarah O. Yoselawsky of Oakdale.

Those called by the defense were the accused, Charles C. Brown and Hattie Brown of Willimantic, brother-in-law and sister, respectively of the accused; Harlo Scott, Willimantic; and John M. Mahoney, Ashford.

Russell in testifying in his own behalf claimed that he made the statements upon the promise of the officer that he would go free.

WITH BRITISH UNION LABOR BREATHING DEFIANCE TO GOVERNMENT ULTIMATUM PARLIAMENT HAS ADJOURNED TILL MONDAY

Council of the Unions Will Return "an Unqualified No" to the Ultimatum That a Recall of the Strike Order Must Precede Resumption of Negotiations—Each Side Realizes That Suspension of the Newspapers is Determental to Its Cause—An Abundance of Volunteer Labor Throughout the Nation is Responding to Country's Call.

LONDON, May 8—(AP)—The British government and the trades union congress are still far apart. Neither has shown signs of giving way in the struggle now entering upon its fourth day that has caused the greatest industrial upheaval the British Isles has ever experienced.

Premier Baldwin still insists that the general strike orders must be withdrawn before he will enter into new negotiations. The labor leaders reply with an emphatic "no" to such a condition, but declare themselves ready to go into conference with the government with a free hand.

The adjournment of parliament today until Monday removes another possible source of appeals for peace. The prime minister has the backing of the house on the measures undertaken to control the strike situation. A labor amendment seeking to modify a clause in the government's bill for the protection of property was defeated by a large majority.

Exemplary conduct on the part of the strikers is again called for by the union leaders, and they are obeying orders in a rather unexpected way, for only at two places in Scotland, have any serious disorders occurred. There have been innumerable clashes, the breaking of windows, the overturning of automobiles, minor attacks on strike-breakers, and similar incidents, but in an amazing manner, the two or three million men involved in the strike are keeping the peace.

At Musselburgh, near Edinburgh, numerous passengers were injured in an attack on a tram. Five policemen and as many civilians were hurt sufficiently to make hospital treatment necessary. At Glasgow, always a hotbed in time of strikes, the police were roughly handled, and some of the rioters were placed under arrest.

In a message addressed to all workers the trades union council says: The council wishes to emphasize the fact that this is an industrial dispute. It expects every member taking part to be exemplary in his conduct and not to give any opportunity for police interference. The council asks pickets especially to avoid obstruction and to confine themselves strictly to their legitimate duties.

The king and queen are spending most of their time in Buckingham palace keeping in close touch with the situation. Today was "accession day," but under the exceptional circumstances there were no public celebrations of the anniversary.

An abundance of voluntary labor, which is being slowly, but surely organized by the government is greatly relieving the worst aspects of the stoppage; food is plentiful and transport is improving daily, not only in London, but throughout the country.

London, underground railways and tubes are reopening with fairly frequent services. More trains are in service on the main lines, and those who are engaged at their employment are going back and forth with less inconvenience than on the first day of the strike.

SAYS LABOR WILL NOT BOW TO GOVERNMENT ULTIMATUM

LONDON, May 6—(AP)—Organized labor involved in the British general strike will return "an unqualified 'no'" to the government's ultimatum that a recall of the strike order must precede resumption of negotiations.

A statement to this effect from the council of the unions and a decisive government victory in commons on measures designed to tighten control of the situation featured the third day of the tremendous industrial struggle.

Sporadic disorders continued, but as in the preceding 48 hours they all were of a secondary nature, not attributable wholly to activities of the strikers. Disturbances today centered chiefly around Glasgow and Edinburgh.

The proceedings in commons became heated as the government pressed its proposal of a bill dealing with the protection of property. Jack Jones a miner-laborite, at one point invited the government spokesmen to "do your damnedest," adding "we are prepared to fight."

If the term is permissible, however, in connection with such an unconstitutional movement as a general strike, it may be said that the great struggle between the parliamentary government and trades unionism is being carried out up to the present in a constitutional manner. There has been much disorder in various places, but its sum, reckoned in comparison with the magnitude of the conflict, is small as testified even in the communique issued by the government tonight.

What it may develop into later, should the struggle unfortunately be protracted, nobody dare predict. There still appears little prospect of a renewal of the peace negotiations. The difficulty of such renewal, on the surface, seems almost insuperable, owing to the feeling aroused on both sides that it would be impossible without great loss of prestige, to make the first advance.

In this respect it would seem to an impartial observer that the almost total suppression of newspapers by the strike acts detrimentally not only to the government and the capitalist cause, which it was intended to embarrass, but also to the strikers themselves. The disappearance of this forum of public discussion naturally keeps the general public in more or less ignorance of the exact state of affairs in the country and leaves the way open for all sorts of alarming rumors to spread.

Although the government itself and the labor side is each publishing its own paper, the difficulties of distribution as well as of production are so great that the papers reach but a small portion of the populace.

The strikers believe that the suppression of the press acts in their favor because in a general war a large majority of the newspapers, and this applies especially to London, represent the capitalist cause. On the other hand, the voice of peace is equally barred, and this to the disadvantage of the strikers.

GOVERNMENT HAS NO DOUBT OF RESULT OF THE STRIKE

LONDON, May 7—(AP)—The British Gazette, the government's newspaper, contains in Friday's issue an official government communique declaring that trade and industry throughout the entire country is suffering grievous injury through the general strike.

Equally through the country vital services, food, milk, light and power, are being successfully maintained by the government and every obstacle is being progressively surmounted, "although," it adds, "strenuous and possibly prolonged efforts will be required from all loyal citizens.

"There is no doubt whatever of the result," the communique continues, "no serious disorders have occurred; abundant food transport is available, but picketing is interferring with distribution. The special police are being increased steadily, and protection on a growing and wider scale will be afforded daily.

"The navy has rendered prompt and effective civil assistance at several seaports, but no use or display of armed force has been required, and the public is advised to disregard alarmist rumors such as 'the postoffice savings bank has suspended payment' and 'mutinies have occurred among his majesty's forces'. Such reports are wholly untrue; their circulation is a criminal offense.

"Road and rail communication has markedly improved with further extensions of service; continual milk and fish supplies are working well.

"The policy of his majesty's government is in every case to refuse co-operation from those who are organizing the general strike, and it is recommended that this attitude should be maintained by all authorities.

"The attempt of the trades unions to silence the press is being defeated. Over half a million of the British Gazette were delivered throughout the country. More than 40 daily and weekly newspapers are being published, and it seems probable that the failure of the attempt to strike the organs of public opinion will be the first definite event in the conflict.

"Guarantees are given that all persons who continue or resume their work in faithful duty to the country will be protected hereafter from reprisals or victimization by the trade unions, and the government will take all necessary steps to secure this."

FEATURES OF THE BRITISH STRIKE BRIEFLY OUTLINED

(By the Associated Press)

The British general strike has interfered with rapid transmission of Paris fashion plates, which are sent to the United States by wireless. Plates of the newest creations are rushed across the English Channel by airplane to the Croydon Airdrome, then whisked in automobiles driven by strikebreakers to the radio sending room, only to meet delay in transmission because of the flood of strike pictures being sent across the Atlantic by various news agencies.

Another barking back to World war days is seen in a rush of women volunteers to help out during the strike in various capacities, ranging from driving motorcars to working in canteens.

Thousands of women who saw such service during the war are volunteering again in answer to a call issued by women's recruiting headquarters. A constant stream of feminine applicants today passed in and out of the recruiting office, which is a wartime hut erected in the foreign office quadrangle in Whitehall street.

London's licensed victualers are considering the advisability of voluntarily closing their public houses, the general rush home after working hours having caused these establishments in Central London and the West End to be practically deserted in the evenings.

The Daily Mail announces that it has sold 500,000 copies of today's issue, including 250,000 printed in France and brought to London by airplane and steamer. Ten copies were delivered at Buckingham palace for the king and queen and ten to St. James palace for the Prince of Wales.

FRANCE TO TAKE MEASURES TO PROTECT THE FRANC

PARIS, May 6—(AP)—Announcement by the French government that measures would be taken to protect the franc this afternoon steadied the exchange after a series of violent fluctuations had carried the franc back and forth.

The franc opened at $1.77 to the dollar and then dropped to 32.32 during the first two hours creating a new low. It went back to 31.5 and then weakened to 32.25 at the official closing but strengthened to 31.90 after the close of the bourse.

The sharp reaction this afternoon was taken in financial circles as indicating that London is about at the end of its supply of francs. Many deals on markings were reported and were reflected in increasing interest rates for future operations.

TRAILING CONVICTS WHO KILLED DEPUTY WARDEN

LEONORE, Ills., May 6.—(AP)—One of the biggest manhunts in the history of Illinois narrowed tonight to the trails of three convicts whose escape with four others from the state penitentiary resulted in the death of a deputy warden and serious injuries to four others.

Two of the convicts were pulled from underneath the bay in a barn today on the farm of John Rose, three fourths of a mile northwest of here. Two others were captured last night after a pistol fight with Leonore citizens.

Having dropped two of their number between Morris and Ottawa in their flight from Joliet in the automobile of Deputy Warden Peter M. Klein, whom they had slain, five of the escaped prisoners entered the village on foot. They wrecked the automobile about four miles from here.

Warned of their approach by a farmer, whom they had robbed, Leonore residents armed themselves and laid in wait. They chased the prisoners amid a shower of bullets, to the outskirts of the village, where they caught two, Bernardo Kos, badly wounded was taken to a hospital, and Robert Torres was lodged in jail. The three others escaped in the darkness.

One of the posses scoring La Salle county today, found Walter Stalesks and Gregorio Riso in the barn. The men showed little fight after their revolver failed to work. Charles Buschowski, the third to slip away in the night, was believed to have hidden on the farm of William Schmidt and posses were dispatched to search for him.

The two who left the automobile near Morris, Charles Spader and James B. Price, were believed to have boarded a freight train for Chicago.

SENATE VOTES TO INCREASE SALARIES OF FED. JUDGES

WASHINGTON, May 6.—(AP) — Increased salaries for all federal judges were voted today by the senate, 66 to 8. The bill now goes to the house where an identical measure is pending and will be taken up after farm relief legislation is disposed of.

Favorable action by the house is forecast and, although the measure would place a continuing charge against the treasury, President Coolidge has indicated to congressional leaders that he would approve the bill in the form in which it passed the senate.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, is the author of the senate measure, while Chairman Graham of the house judiciary committee, is sponsor for the house bill.

Under the bill as finally perfected, the chief justice of the United States would receive $20,500 instead of $14,500 while each assistant justice of the supreme court would receive $20,000 instead of $14,000.

Federal circuit judges would get $12,500 instead of $8,500 and each district judge $10,000 instead of $7,500. Judges of the court of customs appeal would receive $12,500 as against $8,500; those of the court of claims $12,500 instead of $7,500 and members of the board of general appraisers $10,000 instead of $9,000.

Five Miners Killed And Four Injured

By an Explosion of Gas in the South Penn. Colliery Near Pottsville, Pa.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., May 6.—(AP)—Five miners were killed and four injured by an explosion of gas in the South Penn colliery late today. Two of the injured were seriously hurt.

Those who lost their lives were William Coulson and his son, Albert; Edward Green, Bruno Trycko and Albert Brimbo. All lived in or near this city.

First reports were that a number of workers had been entombed, but colliery officials set the rumors at rest by issuing a statement that all had been accounted for. Rescue parties reached the dead and injured without difficulty.

The explosion was said to have been caused by the discharge of dynamite in a gas-lade atmosphere. The victims were preparing to cut coal in a gangway 450 feet below the surface and had drilled and tamped down a charge of dynamite. The spot where they were working formed a pocket difficult to ventilate and gas is believed to have accumulated. When the dynamite was set off the gas exploded, hurling the men working nearby in all directions.

THREE MEN DROWNED OFF PHILADELPHIA NAVY YARY

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—(AP)—Three men were drowned off the Philadelphia navy yard today when an aluminum hull of an airship capsized in the Delaware river. The hull was completed today, and in tow of a flight steamer, was being tested for watertightness.

The victims, W. Morgan, sheet metal worker A. Renzi and R. Langley, were civilian employes in the naval aircraft factory at the navy yard.

Sixteen men were aboard the hull and all were thrown into the water. Quick action by the crew of the steamer which had the hull in tow saved 13 of them, but the other three sank before the vessel could reach them. None of the bodies has been recovered.

The hull was that of one of the new P-N "super-airships" under construction at the navy yard. It is to be a sister ship to the PN-9 which under Lieutenant Commander Rodgers, attempted a non-stop flight to Hawaii, but ran out of gasoline and came down in the Pacific Ocean.

British Strike May Benefit U. S. Textile

New England Wool and Cotton Manufacturers Expect Increased Activity in Mills.

BOSTON, May 6—(AP)—The "artificial tariff" brought about by a suspension of British shipping due to the general strike will benefit the textile industry of New England wool and cotton manufacturers agreed today. The situation that existed during the war, when imports from Europe were suspended was pointed to in proof of the contention.

While opinions of textile men varied as to the extent of the influence the British strike would wield on the industry here, it was agreed that in the natural course of events it would result in stimulating activity in the mills of this country. It was pointed out that imports or goods were heavy during March and April and that a cessation of British shipping activity would bring to an end the influx of seasonable goods to be finished here.

Several New Bedford textile men expressed their views as to probable effect of the strike in the field of cotton textile. Charles M. Holmes, treasurer of the Cosnold and the Homes mills said: "If the goods stop coming it will give us a chance. It seems to me the only noticeable reaction to be felt here will come as a result of the tying up of Great Britain's shipping. There is no doubt that they have been exporting heavily to this country recently, particularly in the line of seasonable goods and there has been no question that if this is stopped by a general shipping tieup it will prove beneficial to the fine goods mills in this country."

Charles F. Broughton, treasurer of the Wamsutta mill, expressed the opinion that the British strike would have no material effect in this country. He added that "it would go a long way toward bringing those fellows to their senses."

The combined flocks of growing chicks on the farms of the 90 amounts to 1,036,412. Every county in the state has oversubscribed the quota set at the opening of the campaign last fall except Hartford and New London.

She added that the boy would be placed in a school soon.

TO ALLAY FEARS ABOUT MORAL STATUS OF STAGE

It will be held at the Fulton theatre. The Guild issued this statement about the event:

"The Guild has made a survey of the shows that are taking in the best returns in gate receipts and finds that the clean successes are, from conservative estimates, representative of 75 per cent of current production.

FRANCE AND SPAIN ARE TO RENEW WAR IN MOROCCO

With Peace Negotiations at an End 80,000 French Troops and 30,000 Spaniards Are Ready to Attack the Warring Tribesmen—Hostilities Are to Be Carried on With the Utmost Vigor Against the Rebellious Riffs.

OUJDA, Morocco, May 6.—(AP)—The negotiations for the settlement of the war in Morocco have come to an end, and the Spanish and French governments will again take up arms against the warring tribesmen.

Eighty thousand French troops are lined along the Ouergha river, facing the north, and 30,000 Spaniards stretching to the south from Melilla nearly to Sidi Bourokba and facing the west, are prepared to march forward within a few days for the purpose of convincing Abd-el-Krim, the Riffian chieftain and his 30,000 warriors, of whom 8,000 are regulars that the terms of peace offered to him at Camp Bertreaux on April 18 were right, and that he was wrong in refusing them after three weeks' negotiations.

The spirit of peace which hovered above Ourja vanished today before the gathering war clouds as a mirage on the edges of this desert town fades away when night descends. Si Mohammed Azeltane, Si Cheddi and Haddou Ben Hannou, the three Riffian delegates, have returned to Temasnit, the present capital of the Rif to carry the message of war to their chief.

Abd-el-Krim has proved untractable, and to those who have followed the negotiations from their beginning it seemed as if the Riffians had conceded nothing. This was in a measure corroborated by Azerkane's statement to General Simon, head of the French delegation.—"We cannot alter our attitude," when the three delegations first met here and all broadcast their intense desire for peace.

The peace conference had been summoned through the efforts of M. Steeg the French resident general, who has been called "the Pacificator of Morocco."

The sultan, Mulai Yussef, who since he ascended the throne of Morocco has religiously kept away from politics took a hand in the peace struggle at Fez last Sunday and even went so far as to admit that Abd-el-Krim might be allowed to remain in Morocco. The general feeling here seems to be that France and Spain have shown much patience in dealing with the Riffians in this series of discussions. Abd-el-Krim alone has failed to make any concessions. The conclusion is drawn that war is necessary for him to maintain his hold on the tribes; peace would see him returned to the rank of a caid.

The Moslems in Morocco had become accustomed to regard France as supreme and were unable to understand why that government could not crush Krim by force of arms instead of negotiating; therefore the prestige of France has diminished so far as the peaceful tribes are concerned.

This war, it is declared, will be carried on with the utmost vigor. French and Spanish circles, however, feel that the patience displayed by the French and Spanish negotiators has had the effect of showing the outside world that they were prepared to make peace on equitable terms.

General Simon refused to make any comment. Senor Olivan, of Spain, referred inquirers to Madrid, while Mohammed Azerkane said: "There is no justice in this world. I go back to resume command of my men."

'RADIO BURGLAR" GUILTY OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

NEW YORK, May 8.—(AP)—A verdict of first degree murder was returned today against Paul F. Hilton, "radio burglar," by a jury in Queens county court. The verdict is an automatic death sentence. Hilton will be sentenced Monday.

Hilton shot Patrolman Arthur Kenny, of Brooklyn, during March, while Kenny and two other officers were trying to capture him as he was engaged in one of numerous robberies of wireless sets.

The jury deliberated three and one half hours. When it filed into the courtroom at 4:30 o'clock, Hilton turned appealing eyes to his counsel and his voice trembled when he spoke to them. As the foreman read the verdict, Hilton turned pale.

No witnesses were called in Hilton's behalf, and the only defense offered was contained in remarks of defense counsel to the jury during argument, in which the possibility was suggested that Kenny had died from blood poisoning resulting from alleged improper medical treatment and not from the wound inflicted by Hilton's bullet.

For this reason, Judge Adel charged the jury that it might bring in a verdict of first degree murder, second degree murder, first degree manslaughter, second degree manslaughter or acquittal.

William J. Ryan, chief of counsel for Hilton announced after the verdict that a motion in his client's behalf would be made Monday.

Staples and held without bail for the grand jury. Immediately afterward evidence was presented to the Middlesex grand jury, in session at Cambridge. Twenty-five hours after the crime La Priore stood indicted for first degree murder, and for assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to murder Lonergan. Hospital officers said early tonight that there was still hope of saving the inspector's life. La Priore was under treatment for two wounds sustained during his battle with the police.

TWO MORE PONTOONS ARE TOWED TO RAISE SUB S-51

NEW LONDON, May 6—(AP)—Two additional pontoons were towed today from Newport, R. I., to the scene of operations to raise the submarine S-51, rammed and sunk off Block Island last September. Preparations for lowering and attaching them to the hull of the vessel took precedent over all other activities of the salvage fleet. Diving operations have been suspended for the past two days because of rough weather, but salvaging work was resumed today, it was reported in radio messages from the Vestal, flagship of the fleet, to the submarine base here, tonight.

Favored by ideal weather divers worked all day, adjusting the first two pontoons, lowered several days ago and preparing for the sinking of the second pair. These will be attached to the forward deck of the submarine just aft the three inch gun. Late today divers were tunnelling through the sand under the bow of the sunken vessel to make way for the chains which will be placed under the hull and attached to the two pontoons. Commander Edward Ellsberg's new hose nozzle was again used in clearing away the sand.

It was reported that four pontoons in all will be attached to the bow, two to the stern, and two amidships, probably just aft the coming tower. When all are attached and the water in them pumped out with compressed air, the final attempt will be made to raise the S-51 to the surface.

Captain E. J. King, commandant of the submarine base, who is in charge of salvaging operations, left here tonight aboard the tug Panobscot for the salvage fleet, where he will remain overnight, returning tomorrow.

Thin Rickety Children Find Sturdy Health in New Food Help

New Form of Natural Food Builds Up Frail, Puny Bodies

Children who are pale, thin and listless are seriously ill. They need immediate help to bring them back to the radiant health and strength that is the right of childhood.

Oftimes the little weakened bodies are unable to extract from their daily food the necessary supply of the vital food factors such as vitamins, lime, phosphorous, and iron.

Lack of these elements in childhood means rickety bones and poor teeth throughout life.

Science has recently found the way to concentrate all these vital elements into pleasant, easy-to-take tablets called McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Everybody knows how wonderful Cod Liver Extract is to build children up to normal weight and give them strong bones and sound teeth.

But many sickly children cannot take it because of its nasty, fishy taste and odor. Now in McCoy's Tablets all these objections are removed. They contain the vital elements of Cod Livers without the disagreeable oil and they are made doubly effective by the addition of other well-known body building ingredients.

If your children are not growing and gaining weight as they should, don't delay a day to give them these wonderful McCoy's Tablets. So remarkable have been their results in literally thousands of cases, they are now sold by Lee & Osgood Co., or your favorite druggist anywhere with a specific guarantee to add at least 5 pounds of healthy flesh after 30 days' use or your money will be instantly refunded.

Protect your child's health, fortify his strength for future years. Give him the priceless gift of sound teeth throughout life by beginning treatment with McCoy's Tablets today. 60 for 60 cents.

The children had a Maypole on the church lawn, Miss Sybil being Queen of the May. Games were played, Charlotte Cook and Eileen Nichols winning prizes. At each place were snap cracker caps, and a wee Maybasket in yellow, green and pink, filled with candies. The center piece was the birthday cake, frosted in yellow and bearing the name Sybil, age five and five candles. It was placed in an immense canopy covered pink and green basket, and was a pretty centerpiece. Candies added to the table decorations. The children were served meat, jelly and peanut butter sandwiches, fancy cookies, cake and lemonade. Mrs. N. B. Parkhurst and Miss Ethelie were assisted by Mrs. Abraham Zegeer and Margery Webster. BAD GRASS FIRE IN LISBON ON THURSDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 6.—The worst grass fire Lisbon has had for years occurred today and swept about a quarter of a mile from below John Whalley's farm to back of the Sylvanddale houses. It started near the railroad and the flames shot into the air and rushed like a veritable prarie fire up the track and fields until they came to the rives. Fire Warden Paul Geist, Jr., and the railroad section men, foreman Walter Field from Jewett City, with all the help they could summon, until about 40 men were secured, kept the flames away from the houses. Another bad fire burned the woods near the Quinebaug camps, and help from Plainfield and Jewett City went up.

The funeral of Mrs. Bernice Miner was held Thursday afternoon at the home of her son, Gilbert Miner in Lisbon. Rev. J. W. Carter officiated. The burial was in Jewett City cemetery. The bearers were Benjamin Charles, Ernest and Grover Wilcox, Sherman Stone, Elmer and Fred Waite. There were flowers from George G. Miner, husband; Gilbert Miner and family, Mrs. Ora Robeige, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jeffers, Clara and Dorothy Jeffers, Finn's theatre, post office friends, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. MYSTIC

The May meeting of the Fanny Ledyard chapter, D. A. R., was held in Masonic temple Wednesday afternoon The regent, Mrs. Alida B. Hill, presided. After the roll call and devotional service, salute to the flag, and singing of America, Mrs. Hill gave a report of the annual luncheon of Lucretia Shaw chapter at the Mohican hotel, Monday. Eleven from Mystic chapter accepted the invitation to attend. The speaker was Harry Hill, United States commissioner-general of immigration. He stated immigration is one of the greatest problems before the people of this country today. The people of South America can come here and many undesirable ones from the countries can get in while those from other countries are kept out as far as possible. The time has come when congress should make laws to put that country in the same class as others. Mrs. Mary S. Brown was asked to read from a Washington paper which published long accounts of the D. A. R. congress held in Washington. She selected extracts from President-General Mrs. Lora Haines Cook's opening address and from President Coolidge's address on the first evening of the meetings when the large auditorium, seating 4,000, was filled. The two million dollar constitution hall planned by the D. A. R. during Mrs. Cook's administration is assured and it is expected it will be completed in two years. During the past three years over 35,000 have joined the D. A. R., making a membership of 156,000. Success is the word which best typifies Mrs. Cook's administration, and the constitutional bar to re-election, is all that prevented her being re-elected. She has accomplished something no other president-general has done for she is the first one to attend a special state conference in the 48 states. This has necessitated traveling thousands of miles at her own expense. The treasurer's report shows that not a cent has been paid for these expenses. The states where she attended the conference and which states had never been visited by the president-general, are Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. In the last three years chapters have been organized in Alaska, Panama Canal Bone, Hawaii and London, England, while applications have been signed for those living in Africa, Brazil, Mexico, Samoa and Sicily. The election of the national officers was harmonious, Mrs. Nash of New York state, who was a candidate, declined and Mrs. Alfred Brosseau of Greenwich, Conn., who had served as treasurer was elected, with the ten other officers on her ticket. At the close of the reading of the report, refreshments were served by the committee.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON-GOODYEAR BUS BEGINS NEXT MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 6—The Connecticut company will inaugurate a coach service between this place and Goodyear next Monday night, it was announced Thursday by a member of the Chamber of Commerce. This will be exclusively a Monday night service to accommodate those who wish to come from Goodyear to Danielson for shopping, or any other purpose, and will approximate the service that the Connecticut company inaugurated last week in running a coach Wednesday evenings only out of Goodyear for Putnam and return. The service will be confined to one round trip. It will not be maintained on Saturday evenings, when stores here are open for business.

This arrangement satisfies Danielson's business interests to the extent of dismissing the charge so generally, but covertly, made that the Connecticut company was showing favoritism to Putnam in giving service between that city and Goodyear on Wednesday evenings, when no similar service was provided between Danielson and Goodyear. In these days of such intensive competition for business as the merchants of Danielson and Putnam have never before known, motehills come to look like mountains and any public service transportation arrangement that favors one competing community over another is practically certain to arouse bitter antagonism—which is not particularly advantageous to anyone, businesswise or otherwise. Neighboring cities have come to regard Danielson and Putnam as suburban territory since the development of the state highway system and the fast moving motor car. These cities get plenty of money, in trade, out of what in bygone years was practically exclusive sales ground for the merchants of Danielson and Putnam. It is this particular circumstance that makes it a matter of grave concern that no favors be shown by service companies between such communities as Danielson and Putnam—and, it is fair to assume, no special favors are sought by the majority of the business interests of any such communities. They ask only an equal chance.

The Connecticut company, after conferences with representatives of the chamber of commerce, has agreed to the Goodyear-Danielson service for Monday evenings only. As with all others concerned, the Connecticut company has vital interests in the arrangement. It insists—and is entitled to the reservation—that the Goodyear-Danielson service must be made to pay its way. It says that it must have at least 18 fares to warrant maintaining the service. This seems eminently fair, as the cost of operating the coach on the round trip is said to be approximately $7.50. Danielson cannot—or Goodyear cannot—expect the Connecticut company to be a philanthropic institution. It is in business to make money. The Goodyear-Danielson service must at least take care of operating costs if it is to endure. All hope it will.

PALS SLEPT TOGETHER WHILE NEIGHBORS SEARCHED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 6—Two good pals who had decided to spend the night together, and kept the matter to themselves—"Even as you and I"—stirred up plenty of trouble and started a searching party up at Connecticut Village, in the northern section of Danielson, that carried on until the wee small hours of Thursday morning.

It may be related that Maurice Cogan, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cogan did not come home to roost at his usual hour Wednesday night. The parents worried along until about 10 o'clock before telling of the boy's absence at the state police barracks, which happens to be a short distance from their home.

Sympathetic officers on duty there at once lent their aid in the search that was inaugurated for the missing boy. The search went on and on and on, but without satisfying result. Maurice, apparently, had just gone away. Sheds and other outbuildings were peered into. Maurice answered not to any call of his name. One o'clock in the morning had come and gone without any trace of Maurice being found. The minutes lagged on as the search continued without locating the missing boy. A decision to call out more officers had practically been arrived at when one of the searchers thought to look into the dog house at the Cogan home. There they found Maurice and his fond pal, the dog. Maurice with his arms wrapped around his little friend—and both fast asleep.

Well, everything said and done Maurice is a good picker of pals even though his selection worries his parents and sets an army to hunting him. It's a safe bet that the dog likes Maurice as much as Maurice likes the dog—and that there will never be a change in their regard for each other. A good dog is a never-changing good friend. And he doesn't talk.

THIS WAS MAILED IN AN ASBESTOS ENVELOPE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 6—The age of flowery diction is not dead. Indeed, it is virile and thoroughly alive. Witness these excerpts from a genuine—not a fabricated communication—received by a Danielson professional man from a person to whom he had written on behalf of one of his clients.

"It is not often that I usurp valuable time to reply to such twaddle and diatribe as is contained in your very impertinent letter. I wish to inform you that it is no reply to the one which I sent your client. It is far-fetched and beside the issue, my esteemed and learned member of the blood-sucking tribe of Danielson.——Now, Mr. Esteemed and Learned, I shall reply to your letter, point by point, inasmuch as you have failed to answer mine so, whether from gross ignorance, chicanery or from the fact that your obtuse mind was too engrossed in the thoughts of the fees which you are to receive from the ill-advised woman.

"Whether or not you change your policy concerns me insignificantly. It also happens in the nature of things that you are not the only possessor of destructive powers. I am sure that through your inestimable ability you will be enlightened that every action carries with it a reaction. When you say I have not supported my family you make another gross misappropriation of the truth. If all the rest of your knowledge is as shallow as this, you are certainly a phenomenon before any bar.

"Grant that I did leave from time to time—for purposes that concern neither you or anybody else—it is because I was not willing that unethical men of your profession, such as you impress me to be, should profit through my misfortune.

"In your last paragraph of the diatribe you certainly reach the quintessence of small town eloquence. Esteemed and Learned Leech! Your threats to have me come to Connecticut certainly smack of churlishness. When I was a child fain would I have knocked chip off your bully-boy shoulder. I am on the road now, quite a bit, and have my business lead me within the confines of your jurisdiction, I shall take pleasure in accommodating your only hope and fervent wish.

"However, it has never been my policy to have someone compel me to do my duty—your knowledge to the contrary notwithstanding. Therefore, you need not waste your valuable time. Mr. Malefactor of Surplus Wisdom, as custodian of the morals of others, unless you are overwhelmed by your innate desire to wreak vengeance.

"I have already tasted my cups of gall, so much so that it is as soothing as sips of honey. Now—do your darndest."

There—that's what one man said to a Danielson lawyer, and the lawyer is hugely amused over it. He asserts he hasn't seen so many expensive words in one letter in 50 years, more or less, of practice, and like never will again.

Typists and stenographers who want jobs have a chance to win one by appearing June 9, here in Danielson, and taking the United States Civil Service examinations that have been arranged by the government. The successful applicants will have appointments for any vacancies in government establishments, as they may occur, in New England states. Bernard R. Casey, local secretary at the postoffice, will tell all interested persons details relative to the examinations. The usual entrance salary for typists is $1,140, and for stenographers $1,320 a year.

Opening Saturday—a new roadside refreshment and lunch pavilion—at Meadowbrook farm, South Killingly, on the Providence-Danielson highway. A wonderful place for motorists, with many acres over which to roam and idle.—Adv.

Real trout fishermen are not discouraged over the many anglers that go to Snake Meadow brook every day. They know the brook and of the catches they are likely to get there—on days such as this, for instance, at this particular time of year.

Discouraging a New Englander is an impossibility. May turned in another frost Thursday morning, but May will lose out yet. You can't set the sun back, even if you set the clocks ahead. The minimum temperature here Wednesday morning was variously reported as between 24 and 28 degrees.

Work pertaining to re-threading hydrants of the borough, to make them standard is far advanced. What is being done here is in line with what has been done or is being done throughout New England.

Less than a fortnight now remains for those who have town taxes to pay and have not paid them. Tax money is coming in every day, bountifully, but there is much more to be received.

The first session of the new cooking course, free to all interested, was held Thursday afternoon at the rehearsal offices of the D. and P. Gas and Electric company here. The courses are to be continued through a number of weeks.

Of interest to all the territory served by the local lighting and power company was Thursday's announcement that electric power will be shut-off Sunday from one to three o'clock, daylight saving time, while necessary work is being done on the transmission equipment.

Killingly town court records show to date this year a surprisingly small number of prosecutions for violations of the motor vehicle laws, and this is taken as an indication that drivers realize they must be careful and are acting accordingly, though a few reckless ones likely always will be found on the highways.

Various churches of the borough will make a point of observing Mothers' day next Sunday, and this is a matter of interest to a great many people.

The public thinks little about the matter at the present time, but members of graduating classes in the town of Killingly are well along for the commencement exercises in June.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM BOY WRITES HOME FROM PHILADELPHIA

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 6.—Joseph Igo, the 16 year old high school student who left his home here six months ago without leaving word for his parents or friends is in Philadelphia, safe and well.

His father, who lives on Church street, received a letter from him today from the Quaker city in which he said that he was all right in every way, has a good position, and there is no need for worry.

The boy's record at high school was a very excellent one, his teachers saying that he was studious and interested in his classes.

On Sunday, Nov. 1, he had dinner at home, then started out for a walk and that was the last his parents knew of his whereabouts until the letter was received today. Captain Jarvis had the police of nearby cities make inquiries but no trace of him was found.

PUTNAM FIREMEN HELD THEIR ANNUAL BANQUET

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 6.—The annual banquet of the Putnam firemen was held last night in Elks hall. There was a large number in attendance, 86 to be exact, which included among the guests Mayor Victor Chapdelaine, members of the city council and other city officials, Thomas P. Ryan, city clerk, was toastmaster and called on guests and members of the department for short talks. Mayor Chapdelaine said that he was very proud of the fine record of the Putnam firemen, of their efficiency and loyalty.

Ralph E. Thurston, chief of the department, made an impressive address, elaborating the same theme that the mayor did. Mr. Thurston has exceptional gifts as a public speaker and he was at his best last evening.

The very excellent supper was prepared by and served under the direction of Frank Warren of the grill committee of the Elks.

A feature of the evening was the entertainment furnished by vaudeville artists of Providence—the Honolulu quartette, McAuliger, dialect comedian, and Miss Rose Sharon, who is the modern Blanche Ring of the vaudeville stage in her rendition of comic songs.

The committee in charge of the affair was Merril H. Fish, chairman; Walter A. Wheaton, Dr. H. W. Sharpe, Edmond Kane, Elzear Guertin, Frank Dumas and Louis Beausoleil.

COUNCIL VOTES TO BUY NEW BATTERY CHARGER

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 6—The regular meeting of the city council was called to order by Mayor Chapdelaine with Aldermen Ames, Labby, Rogers, Dubois and Vadnais present. The report of Captain of Police Jarvis, showed seven arrests for drunkenness, four for breach of peace, one for violation of motor vehicle laws. Disposed of, one; committed to jail, two; committed to charge of probation officer, one; cases continued, 1; tramps lodges, 31.

Alderman Rogers stated that Mr Rogers of Norwich has as yet made no report on the investigation of the water system.

A permit was granted to Bertrand Andrews to build a two stall garage on Farrow street.

Fire Chief Thurston told the council that a generator was need to charge the batteries of the fire alarm system. He said that since the trolleys were discontinued there had been no way to supply current for the batteries. On motion of Alderman Richard, the fire committee was authorized to investigate and install a generator or a rectifier charging set, whichever was thought to be best.

Chemical Co. No. 1 of the fire department reported the election of the following officers: H. W. Sharpe, foreman; Walter A. Wheaton, first assistant; Harry Morse, second assistant; Merl Fish, secretary; Walter A. Wheaton, treasurer. The officers of Hook and Ladder Co. 1 are: Edward Cane, foreman; Charles Ryan, first assistant; Elzear Guertin, second assistant; Charles Ryan, treasurer; Elzear Guertin, secretary.

Ralph E. Thurston, fire chief, made the following statement of the time required for the pupils of the various schools to vacate the buildings in case of fire as tested on May 4, compared with October of last year.

Israel Putnam, May 1926, 1.22 minutes, October 1925, 3 minutes; High school, May 1926, 44 seconds, October 1925, 51 seconds. Smith Street school, May 1926 24 seconds, October 1925, 32 seconds; St. Mary's school (old building) May 1926, 41 seconds, October 1925, 44 seconds; St. Mary's school (new building), May 1926, 1.23 minutes, October 1925, 1.55 minutes; Trade school, May 1926, 57 seconds, October 1925, 54 seconds.

The Putnam chamber of commerce asked action of the council on the lighting of the parking space on Bundy street. Mr. Thurston said that the city did not install lights last year but the premises were illuminated by two spot lights that were used on the sub-stations at Mechanicsville. On motion of Alderman Ames the lighting of the parking space was left with the lighting committee, with power to act.

The insurance on city property was read showing the following: Central fire station No. 1, $1,500; central fire station, No. 2, $800; fire alarm system, $300. The council agreed that the above insurance was not sufficient and directed the city property committee to investigate and to place a proper amount of insurance on the property.

The people of Woodstock have asked for fire protection. Chief Thurston stated that there was always danger in Putnam when the apparatus answers out-of-town calls, and that it was of no use to answer any Woodstock calls since they had no source of water supply there. He also thought that Woodstock and other surrounding towns should provide adequate equipment of their own.

Alderman Ames thought that the people of Woodstock should be granted the same courtesies that the people of Pomfret and Thompson get. The council decided to lay the out-of-town fire calls on the table until the next meeting.

The laying of sewers on Gilman street was left to the highway committee to investigate materials and to report at the next session. The mayor adjourned the meeting at 9:30 p. m.

The new officers of the Putnam Rotary club elected at their last meeting were as follows: President, Howard C. Bradford; vice president, James F. English; secretary, Ralph C. Booth; treasurer, Warren W. Averill; sergeant-at-arms, Leon S. Talbot; board of directors, H. C. Bradford, Karl T. Phillips, Alex Gilman, Arthur E. Smith, James F. English.

Mr. Bradford, state attorney for Windham county, has been vice president of the club during the past year. He was active in its organization more than two years ago and has been one of its most valued and loyal members. He succeeds a very excellent executive, Ralph C. Jenkins, and before him, John F. Reardon. The Rotary club has become one of the great institutions of America and many countries of Europe. It is an influence for good and has grown very rapidly, both in this country and abroad. The local club is favorably known throughout the state, and its membership is made up from the leading citizens of the town.

Invitations have been issued by the local troop of Boy Scouts for a dance to be held at Odd Fellows hall later this month. The committee on decoration has chosen green and white as decorations and is going to have elaborate trimmings. The usual energy is being devoted to make this affair one of the big successes of the year.

The boys have secured one of the finest semi-juvenile orchestras in the state, the Boy Scout Melody boys of Willimantic. The same orchestra demonstrated their skill and ability when they played at the troop's first dance in February.

The committees in charge of the affair are: Executive committee, Commissioner Stanley F. Bacon, chairman; Scoutmaster Jerome W. Andrews. Scribe Niel J. Bulger, Scouts, Manuel Anas, Herbert Keach and Howard Tourtellotte advertising committee Niel J. Bulger, chairman; Roswell Wheaton and Terence J. McGarry; refreshment committee, Kenneth Rawley, chairman; Ellis Haines; decorating committee, Robert Bulger, chairman; Nelson King, Manuel Anas; checking committee, Herbert Lepeir, chairman; George Cornell, and Arthur Ross. All members of the troop will act as a reception committee.

The annual spelling and spelling contest between the grammar schools in the town of Pomfret will be held on Monday evening, May 10, when the best pupils from the various districts will meet at Abington hall. The contest will begin at 7:30 p. m., standard time.

A feature of the occasion will be the music and singing by pupils, under the direction of Miss Annie Ash.

The winners at this meeting will compete with the county's best at Danielson the following week.

Rev. Henry E. Hodges, the new minister of the First Baptist church of this city, will preach his first sermon as pastor here on Sunday, June 6th. He comes from Winchester, Mass. He is married but has no children. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges expect to have their household goods moved into the parsonage here by that time.

THE DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Speculation as to what is going to be done at the conference for the discussion of a program for disarmament this month at Geneva is bound to be indulged in despite the fact that one guess is as good as another. No doubt there have been times when it was more favorable for such a discussion, but an outstanding fact seems to be that while there is a chance for the adoption of some program looking to disarmament it will be the part of wisdom to see that it isn't too ambitious. Much more is likely to be gained through undertaking something that can be accomplished than by trying to reach a goal which it must be apparent cannot be reached in one effort or at the present time.

It is only a matter of about ten days before the date for the Geneva gathering in which this country will participate, but in which Russia will send no delegation. It is a conference that is intended to be preliminary to the one at which real action can be expected to be taken but whether anything is done at the subsequent conference will depend to a large extent upon what is done this month. It will make a difference whether there is an attempt to bite off more that can be chewed or whether the conference proceeds under the policy of at least making some progress toward disarmament even though it cannot be accomplished in one leap.

Conditions have arisen in Europe since the Locarno conference which have tended to slow up the demand for disarmament relative to land forces. But that does not mean that no further application of naval disarmament cannot be made in keeping with what was sought at the time of the Washington conference but which it was impossible to get certain nations to endorse at that time.

This country is anxious that if a program for further disarmament is the outcome of the conference this month that it be constructive and on definite lines. It should at least demonstrate whether Europe is really anxious to do anything in this direction.

WATSON'S VICTORY

If the primary in Indiana was expected to disclose the political feeling of that state there can be no question as to what the Hoosiers are committed to. In spite of the campaign which was conducted throughout that state against Senator Watson by a republican opponent of high standing who sought his place in congress, the well known senator came through with colors flying. The attacks which were made upon him reacted to his benefit. They were unjustified and it is apparent that they were so regarded by the people of that state.

Senator Watson has been prominently identified with congressional activities for the past decade. He has shown that he thoroughly knows his own state, that he has due regard for the interests of his constituents and for the country and no better indication as to how he stands with the people of Indiana could be asked for than the endorsement he has received at the primary, in spite of opposition and when the democrats were unable to nominate a candidate. The primary result shows that Senator Watson is as good as elected for the long term, while Senator Robinson, for the short term, had no great difficulty in securing the nomination.

The primary hinged, of course, upon state rather than national issues, a fact which is invariably true under such circumstances. State conditions can be expected to govern, especially in off years, but there is nevertheless a strong background contributed by the record of faithfulness and efficiency established in Washington.

Indiana had every reason for desiring the return of Watson to the United States senate. He holds a place that could not be attained by a successor for a long term of years and no state can value such prestige lightly. It has paved the way for that return by insuring his renomination and it can be expected that there will be just as enthusiastic efforts put forth in behalf of his election as there were to insure his renomination.

WHAT LENIENCY COSTS

Crime conditions in and about Chicago have been the cause for nation-wide attention for too long a period. They have become altogether too common concerning the taking of life, holdup activities and general lawlessness. But in addition the situation has been extended to include breach of election laws and a disregard for authority in other parts of the state.

The people of Chicago and Illinois have recognized the need of dealing more effectively with such conditions but the improvement is awaited. It calls not only for more effective enforcement of the law but the backing of an aroused public sentiment. Laxity has been attributed as one of the reasons for the situation and such would seem to figure prominently in connection with the escape of seven prisoners from an Illinois state prison after killing a deputy warden and forcing trusties to aid them.

That four men serving life terms and three others serving terms from ten years to life, should have been able to manoeuvre their way out of the prison indicates a state of affairs there which calls for a thorough investigation. Indications point strongly to the need of different methods at that institution, both for the safeguarding of those who are employed there and for the protection of the general public upon whom the seven convicts can be expected to begin operations.

Apparently too much leniency has been shown in the Illinois institution. In this new prison the convicts apparently had things too much their own way. The group that got away appreciated this attitude and found encouragement in it for the planning of their getaway, regardless of what the cost might be to others. No little difficulty was probably experienced in catching, convicting and getting behind bars those who have just escaped, but even more trouble and a longer time may be required before they are again under restraint.

DEBT FUNDING

With the agreement reached between this country and Jugoslavia for the funding of the latter's debt, the debt funding commission of this country has accomplished about all that can be expected in this direction.

Its work has been ratified with the exception of the agreements with France and Jugoslavia, but both of these could be easily disposed of before the adjournment of congress if there was a willingness to accomplish something instead of continually trying to obstruct.

As for the rest of the war debts there is much uncertainty. There are five countries which owe us about $250,000,000 in addition to the 13 nations which have reached agreements. Of that amount the bulk is owed by Russia. That country's debt of $192,000,000 is not in the process of adjustment and there is no early prospects that it will be. Inasmuch as there is no diplomatic relationship between the country and we have repeatedly refused to recognize soviet Russia, that government is sitting quiet as far as the debt is concerned. As for Austria a moratorium of 20 years has been allowed, while Greece is poor in purse and the payments of the Armenion and Liberian loans are not being pressed.

Clearing up the debt in such a satisfactory manner as has been done by the debt funding commission is gratifying, it being a comparatively short time since the commission was named for such a purpose. It will be many years before the final payments are made, but a marked improvement in international relationships is certain to follow the agreements to pay. The importance of clearing the agreements up at this session should make its impression upon congress.

THE FLIGHT OF THE NORGE

Within a short time Amundsen and Ellsworth are going to be able to demonstrate whether it is possible to fly over, and possibly land at the north pole by means of a dirigible.

By easy stages the Norge has been guided from Italy to the point in Spitsbergen from which the departure will be made. At least such progress was reported on the flight from Vardo to King's bay that it must have arrived before this is printed if all went well on the second half of the journey.

Up to now everything of an encouraging nature has been disclosed. The care that was to be expected in delivering the dirigible to Amundsen has been exercised and it has met with no mishaps. It has been possible to give more heed to weather conditions than will be possible after the airship leaves King's bay for the pole, but since his experience in going over much the same course, in an airplane Amundsen has maintained that it was by means of the airship that it would be possible for him to accomplish his undertaking. He has turned against the airplane and now he is going to have a chance to demonstrate what can be done with a semi-rigid balloon that can be guided.

That Amundsen will look well to his equipment and to the conditions of the weather before starting away from Spitsbergen is to be expected. But there is no question but what he will start with full confidence of success and that must have been buoyed up in no slight degree by the admirable performance of the Norge in its flight to the northernmost point picked for departure.

Has the practice of hanging May baskets gone out of style?

Whatever it may be otherwise, the season is not backward in detours.

It looks as if it were going to be a great time to go fishing over in England.

With a million British people idle it is of course a capital time for a general strike.

It is a bit early for porch hammocks but there's no harm in getting them ready for use for the demand is likely to come with a rush.

FOOLISH GIRLS

"Aw, girls!" growled the serious young man with the big spectacles when the meeting got around to that topic. "Say, I've figured them all out: and believe me from now on I am going to devote my time to something more profitable!

"Girls don't appreciate anything worth while," he informed the other three. "All they want is something well dressed that can shake a wicked ankle on the dance floor! They just don't care a hoot for a man's aims and interests in life and all this talk about their wanting to share his problems and how a married man should always talk over his business with his wife is all bunk!

"There were two quite pretty girls at the lake where I spent my vacation and while I was not especially interested in them—because I think it hampers a man to marry young and I never pay much attention to any of them—I was really sorry for these girls when I observed what they had to put up with in the line of men.

"There was a blond darling who played tennis and mopped his forehead daintily with a Parisan silk handkerchief nicely perfumed and said 'Oh dear!' when he lost a set and there were some lounge lizards who only came to life with the jazz music.

"So, while the girls appeared to enjoy themselves I knew what they must be suffering and that was why I made a point of giving them several hours a day and trying to be a real companion to them, letting them see that there did exist men who took life earnestly. I told them all about how the business for my firm had picked up since I took hold of this territory and went into the percentages just to show that I considered them intelligent human beings capable of understanding affairs that amount to something. Why, I even went way up to my hotel room to get the letters I had from the firm praising me to show to one girl and she explained afterward that the reason she wasn't there when I got back was that she suddenly got an awful toothache and had to get some medicine for it.

"Those two girls actually seemed apologetic about taking up so much of my time and I suppose they felt they were boring me and that I'd rather be let alone to think, but when they'd say they thought it must be time for their swim of their tennis set with one of the lounge lizards I appreciated that fact and exerted myself to be more pleasant if anything.

"Cara," I said to the prettier one of the two, 'never worry about intruding on my time because I always am pleased to talk with people who want to learn about worthwhile things and I certainly think you girls up here have a rough life enduring jazz and nonsense from the other men!' She agreed right away that it was perfectly awful.

"What I could not understand was why she endured it so much if she hated it so— I suppose the fellows just edged in impervious to snubs, and girls dislike hurting people's feelings. When I was getting packed to leave I tried to think of something to do to cheer them up, because there was no doubt they must feel downhearted—no more little talks in veranda corners or long walks in which they learned about the great business world, you know. So I told them they could ride down in the bus with me to the station and they were so pleased tears almost came in their eyes.

"And then two of the lounge lizards took them for a motor ride that afternoon and carried them away on to West Cliff, where there was a corn roast and dance, and totally refused to bring them back in time—Cara wrote me a postcard telling me all about it! However, I feel that they didn't display much enterprise in getting away from their tiresome escorts—they could have got out and walked back if they had really considered that they might never see me again or get my address."

"Well, girls sure are foolish things!" agreed heartily the sassy young man who had been listening with extreme intentness to the monologue. "Passing up a chance like you! They'll never get another one like it, I'll tell 'em!"—Exchange.

Dr. Charles E. Beury, whose inauguration as president of Temple university will attract a large and distinguished gathering of educators in Philadelphia today, has had a notable career in religious, educational and philanthropic work in the Quaker city. He is an alumnus of Princeton university, from which he was graduated in 1903. Three years later he received his degree from the Harvard Law school. As president of Temple university Dr. Beury succeeds the late Rev. Russell H. Conwell, a Baptist minister, who founded the university. For nearly 15 years Dr. Beury has been prominently identified with the affairs of the university as chairman of the finance, building, and endowment committees. From Small Beginnings

William Carey, Weaver, Shoemaker and Scholar

In Silas Marner, George Eliot has told of the hard life of the English weavers in the early part of the 19th century. The lot of English shoemakers at that time was still harder. William Carey was the son of a poor and ignorant weaver, and at 16 was apprenticed to a shoemaker to learn the trade. For 12 years he made and mended shoes. No one who saw him at his bench, dirty and bent, thought for a minute that the shoemaker would become one of the world's greatest scholars and one of the men who molded the fate of empires.

In the heart of the young shoemaker burned the ambition to be of use in the world. When he was 25 he became a Baptist preacher, working during the week at his trade and preaching on Sundays. Having picked up considerable learning by reading good books in his hours of leisure, he began to teach a small school during the daytime and continued to make and mend shoes in the evening. One might have thought that his time was fully occupied, but there were still moments when he was not obliged to work. These few moments he employed to such good advantage that he learned Latin and Greek, French and Dutch and Hebrew.

At the age of 32 he set off for India to serve as a missionary. Undeterred by the fact that superstitious sailors led to his being put off one ship he sailed on another, and landed in Calcutta. Unaccustomed to either climate or the natives he braved the terrors of the jungle beasts and the dangers of tropical diseases, and went into the interior, where he found work on an indigo plantation. In the intervals of work he preached and taught, and studied the native languages. He went on foot to over 300 native villages. He feared nothing whatsoever. In five years time he translated the New Testament into Bengali. He was made professor of Sanskrit, Bengali and Marathi in Fort William College, Calcutta and there taught, studied and wrote for many years. In addition to translating the Bible into some 24 different languages of India, he wrote grammars and dictionaries for the use of students, and used his "leisure time in the private study of botany and animal life."

Long before he died he was recognized as one of the world's very greatest men of learning, and one of the most useful of men. Such is the romance of the shoemaker who became a scholar.

WHEN TROUBLE COMES

When things go wrong with other folks, we seldom fret and fuss;
The burdens that they have to bear seem trivial to us;
We're sorry for our friends, of course, but does it pay to fret?
For us the woes they talk about are easy to forget,
And we can hardly understand their great discouragement—
But, oh, when things go wrong with us, it's very different!

When things go wrong with us we want our friends to sympathize;
We want our little woes to seem important in their eyes;
We want the sympathetic look that shows they understand;
We want them to come forward quick and lend a helping hand.
Of course, we aren't hard-hearted, but there's one thing very sure;
The sorrows other people have are easiest to endure!

Stories That Recall Others

A New Appeal.

While standing on the street he was approached by a man 60 years of age, who said: "Say, mister, can you give me a dime?"

"What do you want to do with a dime?" was asked, being suspicious of such appeals.

"The fact is," he said quite frankly, "I came downtown to go to a picture show and I find that I need ten cents more than I have with me with which to buy a ticket."

A Trick of the Trade.

He had formerly lived in a middle western state and was telling about electio experiences there and the tendency to ballot box stuffing.

There was one precinct where the voting was generally heavy and the battle always hot, so, in order to promote fairness and harmony, where there were many colored voters, an agreement was made that a Negro minister should serve as inspector at the polling place.

When all officials had arrived, some one suggested that the officiating preacher should open the polls with prayer. While prayer was being offered, most of those present bowed their heads and closed their eyes and it was then that enough ballots to carry the precinct were slipped into the box. That at least is the way the story went.

Little Talks on Thrift

VALUE OF THE BUDGET.

A symposium on rules for personal success recently brought to the attention of the public gives emphasis to the value of the budget. Some of America's most successful business men are quoted to the effect that they found it impossible to get ahead until they began budgeting their expenditures.

More and more the budget plan is gaining popularity with persons who are endeavoring to practice thrift for they find that with this system they are better enabled to keep within the bounds of prudent expenditure.

The American Society for Thrift, which has made free distribution of thousands of copies of its budget, reports a growing demand for it. By the use of the budget plan a person is more apt to follow a well-balanced adjustment of savings and expenditures than would be the case if he drifted along from day to day.

Some people are inclined to save too much for their own best progress and development. Others find it hard to save anything at all. But by making out a budget and deciding definitely on the amount to be saved or invested and the amount to be spent for various items, it is much easier to live a practical, well-ordered life.

Many drift along from day to day and week to week without really knowing how much money they "fritter away" or how much of their expenditures are necessary. This is as inexcusable as it would be in the need of a business not knowing how the funds of his company or firm were administered.

No better advice can be given to those who would practice thrift than is embodied in these words—Keep a budget.

It is as necessary to one's individual progress as the compass is to the mariner.—American Society for Thrift.

CHILD TRAINING

BARBERRY'S NEW REGIME

Helen Gregg Green

Barberry sat munching cookies while her mother, Aunt Emmy-Lou and I discussed the raising of children.

"I should think," Aunt Emmy-Lou suggested, "that eating those cookies would spoil Barberry's dinner."

"Well, perhaps it will," the mother agreed, "but, poor little dear, I haven't the heart to refuse her anything. She has such poor health!"

Aunt Emmy-Lou frowned with concern.

"Really, Nana, I'm worried about your mentality," she said after a moment, "but now there was a merry twinkle in her eyes to take the sharp edge from her words.

"Why, Aunt Emmy-Lou, what do you mean?"

"Well you say you haven't the heart to refuse Barberry anything because she has poor health. Can't you see it's principally because you are indulging her that she has poor health? Besides, a child who is the recipient of every wish doesn't gain so fast in poise and character."

Nana looked a bit mystified.

"I never can see why a mother indulges a child simply because she's frail," continued Aunt Emmy-Lou. "She's adding one disadvantage to another."

"I've always felt, if anything happened to Barberry I would have the satisfaction of having made her absolutely happy," Nana replied.

"It would be a consolation to have made her happy," responded Aunt Emmy-Lou "but over-indulgence does not bring happiness. I've always thought that if I had been privileged to be a mother, and anything had happened to my child, it would have been most comforting to feel I had helped her to overcome weaknesses, to work out her little problems—to grow."

"Why I had never thought of things in that light," Nana seemed suddenly to see Aunt Emmy-Lou's view-point. "That's the way a mother should feel, isn't it?"

"Mother, may I have another cookie?" Barberry interrupted.

"No, dear, it will spoil your dinner."

"But I don't want any dinner."

"No, Barberry, but you will want your dinner tomorrow night," the mother said, smiling, "for tomorrow a new regime begins at our home."

And the next day was the beginning of a new regime for Barberry. I believe, in a year from now the mother won't need to complain about Barberry's health, thanks to Aunt Emmy-Lou.
